FOREWORD

THE sciences which relate wholly or in part to human nature are generally considered to be among the least exact. History and biography may be specific as to dates and places, but in so far as they deal with motivation, the "why factor" in historical and personal events, they seldom achieve a degree of accuracy that is beyond doubt. Genealogy, long recognized as one of the peripheral branches of history, can usually be considered as the least exact.

Family histories are of all sorts and of all degrees of accuracy. Some are very pretentious, assembled by unblushing filiopietists at great expense, to satisfy family pride but without much regard for objectivity. Unfortunately many genealogies, like many popular local histories, are studies in historical inaccuracy. With a grand disregard for the authenticity of their sources, many genealogists perpetuate myths, traditions, and distortions of fact that are brazenly offered as serious historical studies. Much of their material is unverifiable conjecture, identifiable as the product of an over-active imagination.

The author of The Jordan Memorial, Tristram Frost Jordan, was apparently aware of the temptations that so many of his generation avidly embraced, and attempted with noteworthy success to compile a family history remarkably free of pretentious prose. When one accepts the fact that genealogical productions of this nature are all too frequently compromised by flights of fancy, the author's rather stark observations and recorded data can be justifiably appreciated.

In compiling this record of one of Maine's more aggressive colonial families Jordan was dealing with a group of people who in most respects were all too typical of the era in which they lived. Throughout the first century and a half, each generation reflected the behavior patterns and life style of those who had preceded them. The traits and attitudes they exhibited were manifestations of the milieu in which they existed. Much of this so called "Yankee flavor" could still be detected late in the nineteenth century among many members of this prolific family.

When the Reverend Robert Jordan's father-in-law John Winter arrived at Richmond's Island in the spring of 1632, he was apparently no stranger to the region. There is evidence that he may have frequented the coast as a fishing-master in preceeding years.

The coast of Maine in this period was by no means unknown to English fishermen. In his book The Eastern Frontier, Charles E. Clark relates, "the stocky, tough men who first settled the . . . Maine . . . coast lived to fish and trade, not to pray. Their homes had been the brawling seaports of western England, not the Puritan strongholds of East Anglia." True to this assessment John Winter hailed from Plymouth, England, during his fishing career.

In the spring of 1633 Winter settled at Richmond's Island after spending the preceding summer in the area. Here he established a fishing and trading station as an employee of two Plymouth merchants, Robert Trelawny and Moses Goodyear. The venture prospered and in 1636 Winter brought over his wife Joane Boaden and Sarah, their daughter.

Details of the Richmond's Island trading station, or factory as it was called, are voluminously documented in James Phinney Baxter's The Trelawny Papers. In a footnote, drawing upon data from the text, he makes a colorful observation:

> . . . a fine picture these Winters made two centuries and a half ago, going to listen to the young preacher just out of Old England, the grave John, the smart Joane, and the demure Sarah; John in his 'sober' suit of kersey with waistcoat of scarlet, and Joane and Sarah with petticoats of like startling tint, showing brightly against the dark gray rocks with the lighter gray of the sea beyond, the mystery of which seems heightened by the consciousness of distance from home and friends, a fair picture retained but a moment on the fickle glass of the imagination.

The "young preacher" referred to was of course the Rev. Robert Jordan.

Before we leave the world of John Winter to explore the life of his future son-in-law it is of value to note briefly the general tenor of life around them. Once again Prof. Charles Clark offers a succinct overview:

> A hard-working man who was willing to forsake practically all the comforts of normal life could indeed find a way to make a living along the eastern coast. But there were many obstacles, and existence was often precarious at best. Life in poor, unregulated communities settled by men looking for adventure and profit rather than for other motives, generally was lived in the crude and uninhibited manner that one might expect. . . From the first generation of West Country sailors . . . sprang descendants, physical and spiritual. . . They were common, coarse, practical, sturdy and independent. Not given either to elegant dreams or to theological speculation, they were never rich but hoped to discover the means to a reasonable abundance in this life and possibly in some cases, a measure of bliss in the next. . . . The men and women who were the raw materials of the more refined societies of a later day retained . . . the lusty pragmatic traits that the men of Devonshire and Cornwall had brought to America and nurtured on a hostile coast.

Undoubtedly we will never know what motivated the Rev. Robert Jordan to give up the possibility of a comfortable parish in England and immigrate to the savage wilds of the Maine coast. Recent research in England seems to indicate that Edward Jordan and Elizabeth Broughton were his parents. They were married in July 1608 and settled in Worcester where he was a bookseller with a shop on Fore Street of that city. The records of St. Swithun's Church, Worcester, reveal that they had ten children christened in that church: Fowlke, 12 Ja 1609; Margaret, 28 N 1610; Robert, 12 Ja 1611; Edward, 15 D 1613; Elizabeth, 16 Ap 1615; Mary, 22 My 1616; Margery, 21 Ja 1619; Thomas, 9 Jl 1621; John, 1 F 1622; and Dorothy, 5 D 1624.

Both Edward and Elizabeth Broughton Jordan died during the summer of 1637. Under ordinary circumstances the cause of death would be impossible to determine. However, in their case circumstantial evidence presents the probability that they died of bubonic plague. It swept through Europe in 1635, appeared in England sometime in 1636, and decimated Worcester during the summer of 1637 with approximately one-eighth of its population perishing.

Later that same year Edward Jordan's will was recorded and preserved by the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. In his will he designates bequests for his wife Elizabeth, the daughter of Fowlke Broughton, and nine of the ten children christened at St. Swithun's, Worcester, including Robert.

Young Robert Jordan must have exhibited an above average intellectual capacity for he entered Balliol College, Oxford University, in June 1632 and received his A.B. in April 1634. He and one Edward Hacket were the recipients of a scholarship established by the will of Bishop John Bell of Worcester in 1556.

Bishop Bell directed his trustees to convey to Balliol College his home and property for the endowment of two scholarships. The recipients had to be from the Worcester diocese. The amount available for the scholarship for any one year was divided into equal weekly portions, and payment was made to the "Scholars Doctoris Bell" only if actually resident. The sum amounted to approximately three pounds a year per scholar.

After being ordained in England the Rev. Robert Jordan immigrated about 1639 and took up residence with Thomas Purchase of Pejepscot, a relative. In the summer of 1641 he replaced the Rev. Richard Gibson at Richmond's Island.

From the beginning Jordan allied himself closely with John Winter in a wide variety of secular undertakings. In January 1643 he married Winter's daughter Sarah. There is no doubt but that he discharged his minsterial duties to the satisfaction of his father-in-law, for no reports of censure were forthcoming from that quarter despite the fact that Winter was very critical in his judgment of others. On one occasion their perennial opponent George Cleaves described Jordan as "well nigh able to deceave the wisest braine." When Winter died in 1645, Jordan was named executor of the estate. As such he immediately became involved in territorial, jurisdictional, and ecclesiastical disputes that were as acrimonious as they were protracted.

It was soon apparent to the Rev. Robert Jordan that the unsettled conditions prevailing in England precluded any possibility that Winter's estate would receive his unpaid wages and be compensated for personal funds disbursed to meet operational expenses at Richmond's Island. Therefore, as executor, he brought suit against Robert Trelawny's estate and seized the land, buildings, equipment, etc. at Richmond's Island as well as on the adjacent mainland, in his wife's behalf, as a compensatory settlement.

These bold activities were viewed with open hostility by the Puritan authorities in Massachusetts who made no attempt to disguise their avaricious designs on the Province of Maine. In 1653 and 1654, when Massachusetts, after reappraising her charter rights, laid claim to these lands, Jordan's vigorous opposition and disdainful attitude outraged the Puritan divines. Threats were repeatedly ignored or treated with contempt until finally, in 1657, this feisty cleric was arrested and taken to Boston for trial. He was charged with flagrantly disregarding the laws of Massachusetts, especially in discharging his ministerial obligations. After a brief imprisonment and a severe rebuke he was released.

Even though the authority of Massachusetts was predominant—until the restoration of Charles II—Jordan was unrepentant and most assuredly unawed. Between 1657 and 1663 he was continuously harassed without noticeable success by Puritan officialdom, never once acknowledging their jurisdiction over him.

Despite the restoration of the monarchy in 1663, Massachusetts did not relinquish her grip on Maine. Jordan was arrested in 1669 and again in 1671 for refusing to abide by the edicts of Puritan magistrates to desist from exercising the duties of his ecclesiastical office. Needless to say, they found him neither yielding nor obedient.

With the outbreak of King Philip's War in 1675, Jordan was forced to flee with his family and abandon his residence in Maine. He settled at Great Island, now New Castle, New Hampshire and helped to organize an Anglican church there. Although he was still defiant in spirit, his days of active resistance to Puritan authority were now forever past. The details of these final years are lost, but it is known that he died in 1679. He was buried close by his last home, within what is now Fort Constitution. The location of his grave is unknown, and no stone or marker exists to commemorate his extraordinary life. In addition, nothing is known of Sarah Jordan's last years except that she outlived him. There is no record of where or when she died and no trace or clue as to her final resting place.

Although the Rev. Robert Jordan's memory has been faintly perpetuated by a few legal documents, the only tangible relic of his ministry known to exist is a beautifully wrought brass baptismal font that is now the property of the Maine Historical Society. Regrettably its provenance is a matter of conjecture. It was given to the society by Seth Storer of Saco shortly before his death in 1876. The font apparently became the property of the Rev. Robert Jordan's eldest son John who in turn passed it on to his son Robert. This Robert settled in Falmouth shortly after his marriage which took place in 1710. It was in his possession at the time of his death for it appears as a "Brass Bason" in an inventory of his estate that was executed 9 July 1750. From that point its ownership is vague until it becomes the property of Seth Storer. William Thayer

Jordan, of Waterville, writing in August 1872 states that "the baptismal font used by the Rev. Robert Jordan is now in the family of the Hon. Seth Storer, of Scarboro, Me., whose mother was a Jordan. It was kept as an emblematical relic by his oldest son, John, and by each succeeding eldest son, until it came into the keeping of one who, like Esau, sold it for a price to one more worthy."

It is also regrettable and painful to state that scarcely a piece of furniture, a book, or any other artifact, survives that can be positively associated with the Rev. Robert Jordan. The same can be said of his immediate descendants who took up residence in Cape Elizabeth and neighboring communities.

One artifact that does survive, with no ascertainable provenance, is a flint-lock musket. It was presented to the Maine Historical Society in 1876 by Samuel Jordan, a successful merchant of Westbrook, Maine, who died in 1880. According to the donor the musket was once the property of Dominicus Jordan, who perished in the massacre of 1703 at Spurwink. The weapon is a Hudson Valley long fowler and was apparently made sometime between 1670 and 1700. The long fowler was primarily a hunting gun rather than a military weapon. Nevertheless all firearms of the period were subject to wartime use during an emergency, and the long fowler was no exception. Its great length and heavy breech gave it a longer range than the standard musket, and thus it was very useful in defending a fixed position where the disadvantage of its unwieldiness was at a minimum. Ranging in length up to seven and one-half feet, these muskets remained popular well into the eighteenth century. The "Jordan musket" was at some point considerably shortened.

It is fascinating to speculate how this musket could have been left behind by the victorious Indians. Perhaps it was simply too cumbersome for their needs. No record survives as to how and by whom the musket was retrieved. How it descended through the family to Samuel Jordan is also a mystery that defies solution.

In conclusion some measure of recognition must be extended to the author of this work. It is immediately obvious that Tristram Frost Jordan carried out a prodigious amount of research in assembling this mass of material. His biographical sketch contained herein indicates a productive, rewarding life. Shortly before his death in 1890 the author offered to construct a public library for the town of Cape Elizabeth. Unfortunately, for reasons now unknown, the proffered gift never materialized. Among the descendants of the Rev. Robert Jordan, however, this volume will always constitute an enduring monument to the memory of Tristram Frost Jordan.

AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

THE author and compiler of this volume has been for many years deeply interested in the memorials and records of his family. Having had occasion to travel extensively, he has found the descendants of Rev. Robert Jordan in many States, and occupying positions of usefulness and responsibility, exhibiting the sturdy traits of a worthy stock.

It is due to their progenitor, to their families and to themselves, that the early and later records of their origin and growth in this country should not be lost. That so many of them are gathered for preservation in this work results from a period of comparative leisure on the part of the collector, who commenced a task so onerous, so exacting, so comparatively thankless, that, before its completion, it nearly caused him to regret his attempt. Few, save those who have made a similar venture, are aware of the labor which every page has cost. Multitudes of letters and visits have often borne very meagre fruit. Corrections and renewed corrections have been made again and again. Many, who have been applied to, have been very dilatory in supplying information; some have refused point-blank to render their necessary assistance.

Under these circumstances it will prove no wonder if there be complaint of errors, inaccuracies, omissions. If such are noted by any reader, if he will record the same, and also forward a copy of them to the author or printers, he will confer a favor, and aid in securing the accuracy of a subsequent edition.

To the many friends who have faithfully assisted, by the contribution of facts, by searching and copying records, by words of cheer and encouragement, and by their subscriptions to the work, the author thus expresses his most hearty gratitude.

The Jordan family has no reason to be ashamed of their ancestor,—so enterprising, persevering and laborious; nor of his successors,—so industrious and patriotic. These records are a small tribute to their worth. May their children and children's children emulate their virtues and share their estimable reputation.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

THE plan on which this genealogy is based consists in a division into groups or families, the head of each group being under his designating number, which is printed in the middle of the page thus, —20—. The biography of each head of a family is put in large type, without abbreviations, his children and descendants following in smaller type and more concisely worded. Except as hereinafter shown, each group is complete in itself, its genealogy comprising all between the above mentioned designating number, placed in the middle of the page, and the next similar number, which in turn stands as a heading to a new group or family branch. It occasionally happens that an individual in a group has a larger progeny than can be carried out in the place where his name occurs in order. In such cases, only the dates of his birth, marriage and death are there given, and the sign + is placed against the name, showing that such an individual is the head of a family, and may be found carried forward to a succeeding page, under his designating number. After the 5th generation there is no more carrying forward, but the record of each group in lineal descent is completed before the next one is commenced.

To avoid complication, where the family line is carried on in continuous succession from the 5th generation downward, generation figures are put against the names, each succeeding generation is indented to the right, and each family of children numbered from 1 upward. The descendants of each of the children in a family are carried down as far as the line will go before the next is taken up; but all of the same generation can be traced down the page, and from page to page, by following the family numbers 1, 2, 3, &c., in a vertical line, by noting the generation numbers, and by comparing the different indentation of the names.

The names, male and female, are all numbered consecutively from the beginning to the end of the book; and in cases where an individual is carried forward this consecutive number is used for a heading over his name in the place where it is again taken up to give his biography and descendants. This system renders it easy to trace the line from any given point onward to the present generation, or backward to the original ancestor. This consecutive number is also made use of in intermarriages, and other cases where a name is mentioned out of genealogical order, the designating number being placed in parentheses after the person, thus showing his identity and his place in order in the book.

The italic names in parentheses after the name of the head of a group or family, are those of his father, grandfather, &c., showing at a glance the line of descent from the original ancestor. In the smaller type, the names of descendants in the male line (those bearing the Jordan name) are printed in SMALL CAPITALS, while names of descendants in the female line (those bearing names other than Jordan) are printed in italics; this facilitates the finding a name from the index, enabling the reader to know at once who are Jordans and who are not.

The Jordans being a Maine family, that State should be considered as the "locality" of the book, and the word "Maine" is therefore inserted in the smaller type only in very exceptional cases, as where a Maine town occurs in the same paragraph with towns of other States. The rule is, though exceptions from obvious reasons occur, that where the name of a State is not given after a town is mentioned, the location is Maine. The place of birth and residence of the heads of families is always given; those of the descendants, in the smaller type, when not given, may be inferred from the residence of the parents. The usual genealogical abbreviations are used in the smaller type, but their meaning is so evident that an explanation is not considered necessary.

The documents—wills, deed, &c.—are intended to be given exactly as copied from the original records in probate offices, &c. Obscurities will occasionally be found in them, but pains has been taken to print them as near like the originals as could be done.

INTRODUCTION.

THE origin of American families becomes more generally interesting as the years pass on. So little attention was given in the earlier days of the settlement of this country to family records, that in many cases it is a difficult task to trace distinctly the line from ancestors to descendants. Genealogy is a science of luxury. The first settlers had enough to occupy them in winning a hard subsistence from the soil, in contending with a new climate, and in discovering untried methods of cultivation and living. No time was left for enrolling the branches of the history of their progenitors, or for drawing and illustrating family trees.

It therefore becomes a difficult task to their successors, when they endeavor to set in order the relationships and the names of those who deserve remembrance and regard as the founders of American families. It takes some enthusiasm, no little accuracy, and a full willingness to toil hard, to qualify one for what seems to many this thankless task. Most inquire, to whom will it be of use? This question may remain unanswered for a few years, in some instances for generations. But, in the future, when the writers of American History are gathering their materials, and when there shall be told the story of several hundred years of civilization on this continent, the patient toilers in the field of genealogy and biography will be honored, and their memory of usefulness meet due regard.

The JORDAN family, now in its various branches widely scattered throughout this country, differs in its traditions from many others. It is quite common to hear from the representatives of other families that their stock was descended from three brothers, who in early times crossed the Atlantic and settled in different parts of the country.

The Jordan family of this country trace their line to one progenitor. The Rev. Robert Jordan, a priest of the church of England, came to Maine about the year 1640. In that year he became the successor of the Rev. Richard Gibson.

It is evident that he found but little countenance as a representative of the church of England. The exercise of his functions led to his imprisonment, and he sought a maintenance by the employment of his talents in the way of business. Marrying Sarah, the daughter of John Winter, prominent in the settlement on the Spurwink river, and himself a large proprietor and merchant, he succeeded to a portion of Winter's estates and developed great capacities as a manager and trader. For many years he held a prominent position in all the affairs of Richmond's Island and the adjacent region, and the early history of Maine shows him to have been a man able to conduct difficult enterprises, and to administer important trusts at a time when the unsettled condition of a new country, the imperfect execution of the laws, and the terrors of warfare with savage Indians, were combined and formidable obstacles to success. The nature and magnitude of the trusts committed to him, the journeys, law-suits, and contests to which he was subjected, and the fact that, at the conclusion of a long life, he left to numerous heirs a large and very valuable estate, sufficiently exhibit him as a man of no ordinary powers. Although with reference to these pursuits and his final triumphs, the records are exceedingly fragmentary, and, on this account, unsatisfactory; yet they exhibit to the view of his posterity, such determination, perseverance, and self-reliance as may well secure their reverent and honoring memory with reference to the founder of their family.

The compiler of this volume has believed that these records will be gratefully cherished, not only by the numerous descendants who bear the name of Jordan, but also by many others who are related to them in different lines of consanguinity. It would not be strange if those who receive the result of his labors should ask why is not the work more methodical? why are deeds, and wills, and inventories, inserted? why are we informed of particulars that seem trivial or without importance? The reply must be found in the necessity of the case. Those interested at all in family details need all the minute items that compose them. Little things are not little when they throw light on the small beginnings of early settlers in a primeval wilderness. An old cooking utensil, a rusty implement, a broken weapon, a battered and defaced coin may not only tell us the story of the privations, conflicts, and scanty wealth of the founders of the present prosperity, but become vital links of connection between the present and the past.

It may be proper to add, that when from time to time notes were collected bearing on the history of the Jordan family, the design was not formed of publishing them. They have accumulated to their present proportions; the collector has found them interesting to himself, his children, and their circle of relatives. Others connected more nearly or remotely have also desired to have copies, and, by printing them, they may prove the foundation of a family history that will, as time goes on, become of increasing value to all concerned. Such records may well serve to stimulate the sturdy virtues of a people deriving their origin from ancestors who planted civilization and christianity on these western shores amid dangers and privations. They faced and conquered the perils of the ocean, they shared a meagre subsistence, they sustained severe labors, they suffered persecutions that had their root in former centuries and in the distant mother country, they met the bloody opposition of savage aborigines, they persevered, and the inheritance so hardly gained is enjoyed by their descendants. What these descendants possess, not merely of property, but still more of those stalwart traits of principle and character that are more valuable and enduring than any material wealth, demand recognition, gratitude and permanent memorials.

A Chronological List of Events of a General Character Relating to the Early Settlement of Maine.

1524. Shores of Maine visited by Verrazano.
1603. Discovery of Saco River, called Shawakatock.
1604–5. Visit of the French navigators, DeMonts and Champlain.
1606. Plymouth Company formed.
1607. Sagadehock Company sent out.
1608. First vessel built on this continent, and the colonists return to England in the same vessel from Sagadehock, where she was built.
1614. Visit of Capt. John Smith to Saco River, called Sawocotuck.
1616. Richard Vines passes the Winter Harbor, mouth of Saco River.
1620. Council of Plymouth established.
1622. Grant of Laconia to Gorges and Mason.
1628. First permanent settlement of Maine at Pemaquid.
1630. Patents on Saco River granted; settlement made on western side of the river, now Biddeford.

1631. Settlement on the eastern side of the river, now Saco; the inhabitants on both patents composing one town called Saco, governed by a combination. "Plough Patent" granted.

1635. Separate grant from the Council of Plymouth to Gorges, from Piscataqua to Kennebec; made a Province by Gorges under the name of New-Somersetshire, and William Gorges sent out as Governor.

1636. Government of New Somersetshire organized at Saco; first court holden on the eastern side of the river.

1639. Grant of the Council to Gorges confirmed by the King; the name of the Province changed to Maine.

1640. Government of Maine organized; General Court holden at Saco; Thomas Gorges, Governor.

1643. Governor Gorges returns to England; Richard Vines, Steward General, the acting Governor; Plough Patent purchased by Alexander Rigby; the towns embraced in it formed into a separate jurisdiction styled the Province of Lygonia; George Cleaves appointed Deputy President.

1645. Richard Vines elected Governor of Maine by the General Court, succeeded by Henry Jocelyn of Black Point; Vines conveys his Patents to Dr. Robert Childs.

1646. Controversy of Gorges and Rigby decided in favor of the latter.

1647. Death of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, succeeded as Lord Proprietor by Sir John Gorges.

1649. Combination of the towns Piscataqua, Gorgeana and Wells; Edward Godfrey chosen Governer.

1650. Death of Alexander Rigby, succeeded by Edward Rigby.

1652. The Colony of Massachusetts Bay claim the greater part of the Province of Maine as within her patent and jurisdiction; claim resisted by Governor Godfrey and his Council; Piscataqua and Gorgiana submit, named Kittery and York; the Province converted into the county of Yorkshire.

1653. Wells, Cape Porpoise and Casco submit to Massachusetts Bay.

1658. Bluepoint, Blackpoint and Casco submit to Massachusetts Bay; the two former plantations incorporated under the name of Scarborough; Casco called Falmouth.

1665. The King's commissioners come into the Province and establish a new jurisdiction; Henry Jocelyn left at the head of the government; Sir Ferdinando, son and successor to Sir John, revives his claim to the Province.

1668. Massachusetts Bay forcibly resumes a jurisdiction in the Province; conflict at York.

1675. King Philip's War commences.

1676. Controversy between Gorges and Massachusetts Bay decided in England in favor of the former.

1677. Gorges sells the Province to Mass. Bay for the sum of £1200 sterling.

1678. Peace with Indians; treaty made at Falmouth.

1680. Thomas Danforth, President of Maine; Brian Pendleton, Deputy President.

1686. Joseph Dudley, President of New England, superseded by Sir Edmund Andros. Second war with the Indians.

1690. Berwick (Salmon Falls) and Casco destroyed by the French and Indians.

1691. New charter granted to Massachusetts Bay by William and Mary.

1692. Sir William Phipps, Governor of Massachusetts Bay.

1693. Stone Fort built at Saco Falls.

1698. Peace with the Indians ; treaty at Machiasport.

1703. Third Indian War ; Joseph Dudley, Governor of Massachusetts ; descent of the French from Canada on the towns in Maine.

1710. Fort Mary built at Winter Harbor, Saco.

The General Court passed an order in 1708, directing the removal of the forces from the stone fort at the Falls to Winter Harbor, where a new fort was built on the extremity of the Point at the entrance of the Pool. Three hundred pounds were appropriated for that object, and Maj. Joseph Hammond and Capt. Lewis Bane were appointed to carry the order into effect. In 1710 one hundred pounds were granted by the court towards the completion of the fortification, which was called Fort Mary. A supply of snowshoes and moccasins was voted at the same time. The remains of Fort May are distinctly visible on the point which is still called Fort Hill. In August, of that same year (1710), about 50 French and Indians made an assault on Winter Harbor, killed one woman and took two men prisoners, one of whom, Pendleton Fletcher, was captured for the fourth time. The garrison redeemed him.

1713. Peace concluded with the Indians.

1716. New Casco Fort demolished by order of government ; Major Moody had been commanding officer.

1718. In 1718 there were 20 families on the Neck, and the town of Falmouth was incorporated that year, now Portland. Samuel Cobb, 1717, first came to Falmouth from Marlborough, Mass. Then, but one house on the Purpooduck side of the water, this house occupied by Dr. Winslow. S. Cobb moved his wife and family in 1718.

1721. Col. Thomas Westbrook, of Portsmouth, N. H., was appointed by Gov. Dummer, chief in command of the expedition to Norridgewock, in 1721, which seized Father Ralles's papers. He moved to Falmouth, established his residence at Stroudwater, in 1727 built a house, and had a garrison. He died Feb. 11, 1744, leaving no sons.

1722. Lawrence corn mill built at Cape Elizabeth, opposite Portland. The town granted the creek to the men that undertook to set up a corn mill, and one hundred acres of land besides. Sawyer and York completed the mill, which answered their expectation.

1725. May 15, 1725, bloody battle at Lovewell's Pond in Fryeburg, Oxford County, Me.; took place on the margin of the pond ; the Indians are supposed to have numbered eighty under Paugus and Whawa, two chiefs of the Pegwacket tribe, while Capt. Lovewell's company contained but thirty-two. The English were taken in an ambuscade ; Lovewell and eight men were shot down by the first fire, and two others, mortally wounded. This engagement lasted nearly all day. English lost captain, lieutenant and fifteen others killed.

1727. Eight persons, several of them having families, came here and purchased a tract of land near Pond Cove, of Samuel Jordan, Jun. (grandson of Rev. Robert Jordan), with an obligation to stand by one another in peace or war, and first they built a garrison for the good of the whole. Pond Cove is at Cape Elizabeth, near the southern extremity of the cape, so named from its lying at the outlet of the Great Pond in Cape Elizabeth.

June 1, 1727, Capt. Dominicus Jordan and Samuel Cobb were chosen by the inhabitants to go to the town of York to procure copies of the records relating to Falmouth.

Oct. 29, great earthquake, duration two minutes, course N. W. to S. E., extended 700 miles; stone walls and tops of chimneys were thrown down. On same day Martinico Island was in danger of being entirely destroyed by a number of earthquakes, which continued with very short intervals eleven hours; many lives were lost; St. Peter's Church, convents and other buildings thrown down; above 200 sugar works were ruined.

1728. March 8, 1727, Rev. Thomas Smith of 1st parish church (now Portland), minister of the gospel, and pastor of the church; 12 Sept. 1728, Rev. Thomas Smith and Sarah Tyng were married.

1729. April 5, Maj. Samuel Moody died. The following is the inscription on his gravestone in the graveyard at Portland, Me. :—"Here lies interred y^e^ body of Samuel Moody, Esq., one of his Majesty's Justices of y^e^ Peace, a Justice of y^e^ Superior Court of Common Pleas in y^e^ county of York, & formerly Major of his Majesty's forces." Jan. 2, negotiations were opened with the claimants of the Munjoy title, and with the Jordan heirs, which resulted in the acknowledgment of the titles of those claimants, and the relinquishment by them of a portion of their claim.

1732. July 29, 1732, Toxus, chief sachem of the Norridgewock Indians; Adidwando, of the Pigwackets; and Meduiganesset, of the Ameriscoggins, had their quarters on Hog Island, and a conference was held with them in a large tent on Munjoy's Hill. Toxus spoke for the Indians.

1734. 2d Parish Church established in Falmouth, October, 1734; the meeting-house built on the hill where the present church now stands. Nov. 10, 1734, Rev. Benjamin Allen was installed over 2d Parish Church, now North Church, Cape Elizabeth, opposite Portland. Mr. Allen died 1754, and was buried near the church.

1754. Fort Richmond was a small fort, erected in 1719 or 1720, on Kennebec River, in the present town of Richmond, ten miles below the mouth of Cobbisecontee; this was the highest point on the Kennebec. The fort at one time was used as an establishment for Indian traffic, as well as a garrison to keep possession of the country. It was finally dismantled, 1754.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

MAINE IN THE SEVENTEENTH CENTURY.

I. Maine in 1524.

Giovanni da Verrazano, a native of Florence, commander of the Dauphine, set sail from the Madeiras in January, 1524, under the patronage of Francis I. of France, for a western voyage. After making the acquaintance, as is supposed, of the outer bay of New York, and the Vinland of the Northmen (the now famous Newport), he cruised along the shores of New England, and sailed among the pleasant islands of the coast of Maine. These islands and the coast beyond them were inhabited by tribes of fierce Indians, who were shy of forming an acquaintance with Verrazano and his crew.

II. Maine in 1603.

Martin Pring, a sailor of former experience in Atlantic voyages, was fitted out by some Bristol merchants in the spring of 1603, with two vessels, for another cruise. He ran along the coast of Maine, and, trying the fishing in Casco Bay, pronounced it better than that off Newfoundland. He entered the mouth of the Kennebunk, the York, and the Piscataqua rivers. Like other voyagers before and since his time, he particularly mentions the many islands along the shore.

The settlement of Maine is associated with the name of De Monts. Sieur De Monts was a Huguenot, but he had rendered such important services to Henry IV. during the troubles of the League, that the King, though he changed his faith, did not lose confidence in his servant. Eager for maritime adventure and discoveries, De Monts procured an edict which created him Lieutenant General of Acadia, as the country lying between the fortieth and forty-sixth degrees of north latitude was then called. Free exercise of his own religion was permitted to him, in return for which he engaged to have the savages converted to catholicism. A company was formed by merchants of Rouen and Rochelle, to whom the king granted by letters patent the exclusive trade in furs and fish between the fortieth and fifty-fourth degrees of north latitude. De Monts sailed from Havre de Grace on the 7th of March, 1604. He took with him his friend Jean de Baincourt, the Baron de Pourtraincourt, and Samuel de Champlain, an officer of repute in the French navy, a man of good favor at court and an ardent catholic, whose experience in previous voyages he thought would be of service in this new enterprise. Pourtraincourt wished to find a place to which he might transfer his family, and forget the turbulent politics of Europe in the permanent occupancy of a land unvexed by parties and religious strife.

De Monts reached, in about two months, a harbor on the eastern side of Nova Scotia, where he found a vessel engaged in fishing and an illicit fur-trade. It was commanded by Capt. Rossignol, whose only consolation for the confiscation of his cargo was the transference of his name to the harbor. This place is now called Liverpool, and Rossignol's name is perpetuated in a lake not far distant, the largest in Nova Scotia. They spent a month on shore, while Champlain explored southward for a place that would better suit them for a settlement. Champlain doubled Cape Sable, and returned to show the expedition the way to the Bay of Fundy. This, De Monts named Baye Français; the harbor now known as Annapolis, Champlain called Port Royal.

After sailing up Miner's Bay, they crossed the Bay of Fundy, entered Passamaquoddy Bay, and on a little island which they named St. Croix, in the river now known as the St. Croix, the Passamaquoddy or the Schoodic, they determined to settle. It was an unfortunate choice: timber was scarce, and water had to be brought from the main land. Before winter was over they were reduced to salt meat and snow water, and the scurvy broke out among them. This island is now known as Neutral Island, and is on the border line between Maine and New Brunswick. In the spring Champlain sailed southward with De Monts, who was determined to find a better spot than St. Croix on which to plant his colony. They entered the mouths of those noble rivers of Maine, the Penobscot, the Kennebec, the Casco, the Saco; visited Mount Desert; sailed up Portland harbor, which De Monts named Marchin, from the Indian chief with whom he had trade; but they did not settle, as the Indians were hostile and repulsed the strangers.

III. Maine in 1605.

Captain George Weymouth, on a voyage of discovery in 1605, was accompanied by Rosier, who writes with great enthusiasm of the deep bays and quiet harbors, the long line of beautiful islands and the well-wooded bluffs of the Maine coast. Here were richly contrasted foliage, singing birds, broad meadows, a bracing climate and pleasant streams. Rosier tells us of "the excellent depth of water for ships of any burthen," of the good holding ground, of the planted peas and barley which grew half an inch a day, of the gallant coves with sandy beaches where ships might be careened secure from all winds, and the "plane plots" of thirty and forty acres of clear grass, "the goodness and beauty whereof I cannot by relation sufficiently demonstrate." This is a description of the appearance of "the Maine" coast, in early June, to a ship's crew long confined in their close quarters by a tedious voyage.

Capt. Weymouth had sailed from England in the Archangel, March 5, 1605, under the patronage of the earls of Arundel and Southampton. On May 17, he came to anchor near the island of Monhegan, twelve miles southeast of Pemaquid, an Indian word signifying "that runs into the water." The cape jutting southward forms the most eastern extremity of Lincoln county. The language of his chronicler, Rosier, well pictures his delight and that of his sailors at beholding the beauty of this island where they first landed. Gooseberries, strawberries, wild peas and rosebushes grew to its very verge, and rills of sweet water trickled through cleft rocks, and ran into the sea. With delicious draughts from these rivulets the sailors eagerly cooled their sea-parched mouths, while they refreshed their eyes with the unrivalled greenness and beauty of the landscape. From the sea they took an abundance of codfish, and gained a notion of the wealth that might be obtained from fisheries.

They landed at Pemaquid, and visited the region between St. George and Kennebec River. If they were delighted with the little island where they had first touched land, they were no less enchanted with the main land. The narrative praises the richness of the soil, and the number of native products found there, from the good clay for brick-making to the finest and tallest trees they had ever seen; the very shells on the beach yielded pearls, and the bark of the trees oozed gum which smelled like frankincense. As usual the Indians received them with hospitality, gave them good bargains in peltries, feasted them in the best fashion, and offered them tobacco. But the savages soon showed mistrust of the whites, and the whites suspected treachery among the savages. The hostile feeling growing out of these suspicions decided Weymouth to keep no faith with the natives. Five of them, who trusted him sufficiently to come on board his vessel, he detained and took with him to England. Arriving at the port of Plymouth, he gave three of them to Sir Ferdinando Gorges; the other two captives he sent up to London, to Sir John Popham. The kidnapped Indians were the objects of curious wonder in London.

The following sketch is from Bryant's History, vol. i., pp. 308–310:

"On a map of the State of Maine, its rivers and lakes appear to be the result of an accidental slopping over of water, just as when it curdles on a polished table into pools, and struggles without purpose to and fro. But no systematic engineering could improve this order of nature, or dispose the waters better for that inland communication which the savages maintained and the white man learned of them. Broad and deep rivers, fed by lakes that are strung upon rivulets, with branches to explore and drain every nook of the land, were highways which the birch canoe was expressly framed to travel; it was no burden when the voyager came to the carrying-places around falls and rapids. The Kennebec was called the shortest route to the great river of the north, the St. Lawrence, which could also be reached by the Penobscot, though in a more difficult and tortuous way. By water portages and a few days' marches, the Indians could strike the Chaudiere and drop down to the neighborhood of Quebec, or visit the ancient town of Hochelaga, which gave the St. Lawrence its first name.

"No less remarkable is the coast, which hangs like a tattered fringe to seaward, broken into numerous coves and inlets with their long protecting line of islands and picturesque bluffs wooded with the birch and pine. The tide runs up deep bays, and fills the quiet reaches between the mainland and outer sea, inviting crafts of every tonnage, from a shallop to a ship, to lie in shelter or to slip along to harbors. Here the early navigators moored in safety under the lee of islands, and explored in their boats the intricate waters of the coast, to fill their casks, to exchange trinkets for peltry with the natives, or to pitch upon a place for permanent occupancy. They tell how the contrasts of foliage, the singing of birds, the stretches of green meadow, and all the scents of summer mixed with the tonic air, delighted them as they rowed along the streams or penetrated into the woods. The woods were stocked with game, colonies of beavers were established near the falls, the sea swarmed with fish of many kinds—salmon, haddock, pollock and cod. The first attempt at colonizing upon Newfoundland and "the Maine," turned upon the value of their fisheries, and were stimulated by it.

"There is no doubt that many gangs of fishermen wintered upon the northeastern coast, and upon islands off the coast of Maine, many years before there was thought of chartering a colony. So the fisherman pursued and worked a vein of wealth wherever the cod ran along the shores of the new world; and the mute fish piloted history to the scenes of her most speaking achievements. She stepped from the deck of a fishing smack, and began the work of founding a republic by tending the rude stages where the fish were dried."

IV. Maine in 1607. The Popham Colony.

On May 31, 1607, The Gift of God, of which Sir George Popham, the brother of the chief justice, was captain, and The Mary and John, commanded by Raleigh Gilbert, a younger son of Sir Humphrey Gilbert, set sail from Plymouth. One hundred and twenty persons were on board, many of them well adapted for the founding of a colony. There is no evidence of the truth of the assertion sometimes made that the chief justice depleted the prisons of England to furnish forth this company; in fact, his powers could not stretch to that extent, though James I., a few years later, gave to persons who had been prosecuted for grave crimes the alternative of a colony or a prison.

On board one of the ships was one of five Indians captured by Weymouth, to serve as a guide and interpreter. The chaplain of the expedition was Richard Seymour, a gentleman of the highest culture, who is supposed to have been a kinsman of Sir Edward Seymour, Lord Protector in the reign of Edward VI. He lived in the neighborhood, and was probably related, to the families of Raleigh, Gilbert, Gorges, and Popham, all of whom were allied by intermarriage. Among the colonists were various artisans, carpenters, lawyers, laborers, a smith and master shipbuilder. They came to anchor to the north of Monhegan, on the 31st of July, and were soon boarded by some natives who seemed perfectly familiar with European trading habits. A week was spent in boat expeditions among the islands, and on the evening of the 5th of August, they found on one of these a cross, which Weymouth had set up two years before. Captain Gilbert sent a boat up the river to the mainland, piloted by their Indian, to a village of the natives situated in Pemaquid. At the first appearance of the boat the Indians took to their arms, but when their chief recognized the pilot, Skitwarroes, and saw that those with him were Englishmen, he commanded his party to lay aside their bows and arrows, kissed and embraced the strangers, and entertained them for hours with a kindly and cheerful welcome. The chief who met them in this friendly way was Nahanada, who had been returned to his home the year before by Captain Hanham.

On August 9, which was Sunday, they landed upon an island to which they gave the name of St. George, where the service of the Church of England was read and a sermon preached by the chaplain, many natives attending with great sobriety of demeanor.

On August 15, The Gift of God entered the Sagadahoc, which was the name of the broad channel below the junction of the Androscoggin and Kennebec; its Indian meaning is "the end of it," as if it had been named by natives exploring from above. The Sheepscot River comes down to the east, directly north of George's Island. On August 17, they sailed up the Sagadahoc in the pinnace and long boat, and noticed all its advantages of islands and fresh water streams.

On the next day they made choice of a peninsula upon the western side which the Indians called, after a native chief, Sabino. All landed here on the 19th, another sermon was preached, the president's commission was read, and the first act of the first English colony of New England was complete. A fort was built, mounting twelve guns, to defend the little town of forty or fifty houses which quickly sprang up. The master shipwright of the expedition, Thomas Digby, had the timber cut down, shaped, and left to season during the autumn, for building a small vessel of thirty tons, which when done was called the Virginia. This was the first vessel built by Englishmen in American waters, and the first use she was put to was to take back to England, before the winter was over, nearly two thirds of the colonists, thus early discouraged by the rigor of the climate.

The Indians did not relish this cool annexation of their favorite peninsula, in which they were not consulted, not even asked to sell, still less to accept an equivalent. But it was characteristic of the Anglo-Saxon method. They soon began to be troublesome: they intruded within the enclosures, and some of the more reckless colonists set the dogs upon them, and used their sticks too freely. Captain Gilbert went exploring up the river, and came into the district of a chief less disposed than Nahanada was to keep the peace with these intruders. They endeavored to get possession of Gilbert and his crew, and he ran the gauntlet of menaces all the way.

On the 5th of February, Popham, who was president of the colony, died, and Captain Gilbert succeeded to the office. The ship Mary and John had been sent back to London in the preceding December, to procure supplies. It returned to find the colony in a deplorable condition. The winter had been of exceptional severity; fighting had broken out between the men and the natives; the store house with all its contents had been burned; the natives were in possession of the fort for a while, and the explosion of a barrel of gunpowder through their own carelessness, they believed to be done by the whites.

In the spring came the news of the death, first, of Chief Justice Popham, then of Sir John Gilbert, the elder brother of the new governor. The last compelled the return of Raleigh Gilbert to England, for he was his brother's heir. The loss of two governors, of the principal mover and proprietor of the colony, within so short a time, and the desertion of so many of their companions were discouragements so serious that the remaining forty-five determined to return home with Gilbert. The peninsula which was the scene of this colony, called Sabino by the Indians, is now known as Hunnewell's Point. It was a favorite resort of the Indians, and numerous relics of stone axes, hammers, arrow-heads, and chippings of stone work indicate that it was a place for the manufacture of savage weapons.

[Fort Popham.—The U. S. government have erected a fort upon or near the sight of Fort George, called Fort Popham, in honor of the first governor of the colony. The occasion was improved August 29, 1862, by the Historical Society and a very large and respectable assemblage of persons from the State of Maine and neigboring States, and the British Provinces, to commemorate the two hundred and fifty-fifth (255) anniversary of the planting of the colony, by addresses and appropriate services, and placing memorial stones on the walls of the fortress. The leading address was by John A. Poor, Esq. of Portland. A full account of these interesting transactions was published in a memorial volume of the Popham celebration, issued from the press of Bailey & Noyes of Portland, in 1863.]

V. The Plymouth Company.

In 1606 King James I. of England chartered the Plymouth Company of Knights, Gentlemen and Merchants, chiefly composed of those living in the west of England, to take possession of that part of North America lying between the thirty-fourth and the thirty-eighth degrees of latitude. The King also chartered the London Company, mostly from London, to take possession of the territory between the forty-first and the forty-fifth degrees, the intermediate portion to be open under certain limitations to both.

In 1620 a new charter was obtained of King James by the Plymouth Company, enlarging its powers and giving wider limits to its jurisdiction. The vast territory extending from the fortieth to the forty-eighth degrees of north latitude, and from sea to sea, was placed at the disposal and under the government of the company now called the Council of Plymouth. Forty noblemen and gentlemen are named in that instrument as composing the council, established at Plymouth, in Devonshire, England, for the planting, ruling, and governing of New England in America. The right of property in the land was thus transferred from the crown to the council, by which grants of unequal magnitude were made, at various times, throughout New England.

The Plymouth Company planted a colony the following year, 1605, at the mouth of the Kennebec, at a point now included in the town of Phippsburg, but by reason of the hardships there encountered, the settlers were speedily forced to abandon the ground and return to England.

The London Company met with better success. An expedition composed of about one hundred men, and commanded by Christopher North, was despatched late in 1606. Early in 1607 it entered Chesapeake Bay, ascended James River, and selected a place for settlement which was called Jamestown; like the River, in honor of the King. Gosnold and the famous John Smith were prominent members of this expedition, which was the means of effecting the first permanent settlement of the English in the new world.

VI. The Pilgrims.

In 1609 we find at Leyden a company of English congregationalists, who made their escape from the north of England from religious persecutions. There were several hundred of them. They constituted a church, having John Robinson as pastor, and William Brewster as elder. In their exile they easily supported themselves by divers trades, and led godly and peaceable lives, which won the admiration of the Dutch. After a residence in Holland of about ten years, the church determined to divide: one company, consisting of about one third of the entire number, to proceed to America, with the purpose of there founding a christian commonwealth. On the twenty-first of July, 1620, this band of emigrants, led by William Brewster, sailed from Leyden for England, thence to take their final departure for a new home across the sea. Such was the origin of the pilgrims, who afterwards landed at Plymouth, Massachusetts, and who were largely instrumental in founding the life and character of New England.

On the sixteenth of September, the band of English fugitives who had crossed to England from Holland on their way to America, set sail for their home in the wilderness over the sea. Of their two vessels, one, the Speedwell, was obliged to put back because unseaworthy. The other, the Mayflower, with a company of about one hundred persons, kept on. They intended to land at the mouth of the Hudson River, but Cape Cod was struck instead. The voyage was long and trying. For nearly one month they reconnoitred the shores, seeking a place to land, and finally, on the twenty-first of December, they disembarked where the town of Plymouth now stands. Having no charter, they signed a compact in the cabin of the Mayflower, before landing, binding themselves into a civil body politic. John Carver was chosen governor, and Miles Standish military commander. Upon reaching the shore they at once set to work to build themselves cabins, a store house, and some suitable defence, thus to make themselves comfortable and secure for the winter.

In the spring of the year 1614, an expedition was fitted out, under the command of Captain John Smith, to take whales, also to make trials of mines of gold and copper. If those failed, fish and furs were to be their refuge. Smith adds, "we found this whale fishing a costly conclusion; we saw many, and spent much time in chasing them; but could not kill any, they being a kind that yields not fins and oil, as we expected." They were also disappointed in their mines, and he thinks the representation was rather a device of the master to get a voyage, than any knowledge he had of any such matter. Leaving his vessel, Smith, with eight men, in a boat ranged the whole coast from Penobscot to Cape Cod, within which bounds he says he saw at least forty several habitations upon the coast, the principal of which was Penobscot. He adds, "westward of Kennebeke is the country of Ancocisco, in the bottom of a large deep bay full of many great isles, which divide it into many great harbors." This refers to Casco Bay, and Ancocisco may be supposed to express the English sound of the aboriginal name of that extensive and beautiful bay. Smith returned to England, where he arrived on August 5th, 1614, and immediately prepared a map of the country which he had visited, and gave it the name of New England. It does not appear that this celebrated adventurer ever came to America after 1614. He published his description of New England in London in 1616, and died in that city in 1631.

VII. Richard Vines.

In 1616 Sir Ferdinando Gorges sent out a ship under the charge of Richard Vines, who afterwards became conspicuous in the early history of Maine. Vines having explored different parts of the coast, his little party prepared to establish themselves for the winter. The spot which they selected for their stay we have reason to suppose was at the mouth of Saco River, on the western side, near the capacious and sheltered basin now called "The Pool," but in early times known as Winter Harbor.

New England being brought into notice by the respectability of the persons who had engaged in its cause, and especially by the profits derived from the fish and fur trade, the intercourse with it was yearly increased.

In 1621, ten or twelve English ships procured full cargoes of fish and fur. In 1622 thirty-five ships, in 1623 forty ships, and in 1624 fifty ships, were engaged in the same trade. So great seems to have been the excitement in this new channel of speculation, that the Plymouth Company found it necessary to procure a proclamation from the king, which bears date November 6, 1622, to prevent interloping and disorderly trading upon the coast. It is alleged in the proclamation that persons without authority committed intolerable abuses there, not only by destroying timber and throwing their ballast into the harbors of the islands, but by selling warlike implements and ammunition to the natives, and teaching them their use.

VIII. First Settlement in New Hampshire.

On the tenth of August, 1622, the Council of Plymouth granted to Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Captain John Mason, two of their company, all the lands situated between the rivers Merrimac and Sagadahoc, extending back to the great lakes and the river of Canada. In 1633, they sent over David Thompson, Edward and William Hilton and others, who commenced a plantation upon the west side of the Piscataqua River, which was the first settlement in New Hampshire, and the beginning of the present town of Portsmouth.

Gorges and Mason continued their joint interest on the Piscataqua, having procured a new patent in 1631 including all their improvements on both sides, until 1634, when they made a division of their property. Mason took the western side of the river and Gorges the eastern, and they each procured distinct patents for their respective portions, which they afterwards separately pursued. We find in 1625 a settlement was commenced at New Harbor on the Pemaquid. Monhegan, a solitary island twelve miles southeast of Pemaquid, had a settlement or plantation as early as 1621 or 1622, probably for the accommodation of fishermen.

On the fifteenth of July, 1625, John Brown, of New Harbor, purchased of Captain John Somerset and Unongoit, two Indian sachems, for fifty skins, a tract of land on Pemaquid, extending eight miles by twenty-five, together with Muscongus Island.

IX. The First Slaves.

The year of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, 1620, was also the year of the landing of the first slaves upon what is now the territory of the United States. These were brought by a Dutch vessel to Jamestown and offered for sale. They were twenty in number.

The system thus introduced soon extended into other colonies, though some of them protested against the trade.

X. Maine in 1626.

In 1626 the government of Plymouth Colony established a trading house on Bagaduce Point, at the mouth of Penobscot River, and first gave this name to the river. The Indian name was Penobskeag or Penobskook; the French, Pentaquerette or Pentagoet.

The Baron de St. Castine afterwards built his fort upon the site of the old trading house, and that spot, together with the adjacent territory, still perpetuates the name of one of the most persevering enemies that our colonists had to contend with. In 1632, the French rifled this trading house of property to the value of about £500. About this time, 1628, Thomas Purchase settled upon land included within the limits of Brunswick. The precise year when he went there cannot be ascertained. No account is found of any patent to him from the Plymouth Company. In a deed to Richard Wharton, July 17, 1684, from Worumbo and other sagamores, they confirmed to him "lands conveyed to, and lands possessed by, Thomas Purchase, deceased, who came to this country three score years ago." Purchase continued to live on the same estate which he bought of the Indians until the first Indian war, and is frequently noticed in the affairs of the country. His widow married John Blaney, of Lynn, Mass. She was living in 1683. He left three children, Thomas, Jane and Elizabeth. Thomas Purchase was settled at a very early period at Pegypscot, now Brunswick. In 1630, Thomas Purchase was at the delivering of the land patent to Richard Vines and John Oldham.

In 1639 Thomas Purchase, of Pegypscot, conveyed to the government of Massachusetts Bay a tract of land on both sides of the river Androscoggin, four miles square, for the settlement of a new colony, reserving to himself a sufficient estate out of it. By the same deed he placed himself under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts Bay. Mr. Purchase had no other title to his land than an Indian title, or he would not have thrown himself upon the protection of that colony, as it was included within the patent of Maine, granted the next year. The intended colony was not planted, and Purchase, after some delay, acknowledged the jurisdiction of Gorges's claim to the government. George Way was associated in the patent with Thomas Purchase. The grant included land lying on both sides Pegypscot, on the eastern end of Androscoggin River (Merry-meeting Bay), on Kennebec River and Casco Bay. Eleazer Way, son and heir of George, conveyed his moiety to R. Wharton in 1683. The patent has long been lost, and is only known by reference in old deeds.

Patent of land granted by the Plymouth Council of England to Thomas Lewis and Captain Richard Bonython, 1629, in the Province of Maine:—

To all Christian People to whom this present writing indented shall come, the Council for the affairs of New England in America send Greeting in Our Lord God Everlasting. Whereas King James, of famous memory, late King of England, Scotland, France & Ireland, by his Highness's Letters Patent and Royal Grant under the Great Seal of England, bearing date the third of November in the eighteenth year of his reign of England, France and Ireland for the cause therein expressed did absolutely give, Grant and confirm unto the said Council for the affairs of New England in America, lying and being from forty to forty-eight degrees of northerly latitude and in length by all that breadth aforesaid from sea to sea throughout the Main land, together with all the woods, waters, Rivers, soils, Havens, Harbors, Islands and other commodities, whatsoever thereunto belonging, with divers other privileges, preheminances, profits and liberties by sea and land as by the said Letters Patent (amongst other things contained, wherunto due relation being had) more at large, it doth and may appear.

Now Know ye, that the said Council for the affairs of New-England in America, as well for and in consideration that Thomas Lewis, Gent. hath already been at the charge to transport himself and others to take a view of New England in America aforesaid, for the bettering of his experience in advancing of a Plantation and doth now wholly intend, by God's assistance, with his associates to plant there, both for the Good of his Majesty's realms and dominions, and for the propagation of Christian Religion amongst those infidels, and in consideration also that the said Thomas Lewis, together with Capt. Richard Bonython and also with their associates and Company have undertaken at their own proper Cost and Charges, to transport fifty persons thither within seven years next ensuing, to plant and inhabit there, to the advancement of the General Plantation of that country and the strength and safety thereof amongst the natives or any other invaders. Also for the encouragement of the said Thomas Lewis and Capt. Richard Bonython and other their associates and assigns—and other good causes and considerations the said Council therunto moving:—Have Given, Granted, enfeoffed and Confirmed, and by this their present writing do fully, clearly and absolutely Give, Grant, enfeoffe and confirm unto the said Thomas Lewis and Capt. Richard Bonython their heirs and assigns, forever, all that part of the main land in New England in America aforesaid, commonly called or Known by the name of Swanckadocke [Saco] or by whatever other name or names the same is or shall be hereafter called or known by, situated, lying and being between the Cape or Bay commonly called Cape Elizabeth and the Cape or Bay commonly called Cape Porpoise, containing in breadth from northeast to southwest along by the sea four miles in a straight line—accounting seventeen hundred and three score yards according to the standard of England to every mile—and eight English miles upon the main land, on the North side of the river Swanckadocke after the same rate, from the sea through all the breadth aforesaid, together with all the Shores, Creeks, Bays, Harbors and Coasts, along the sea within the limits and bounds aforesaid, with the woods and Islands next adjoining to the said land, not being already granted by the said Council unto any other person or persons; together also with all the Lands, Rivers, Mines, Minerals of what kind or nature soever, Woods, Quarries, Marshes, Waters, Lakes, Fishings, Huntings, Hawkings, Fowlings, Commodities, Emoluments and Hereditaments Whatsoever, with all and singular their and every of their appurtenances in or within the limits or bounds aforesaid, or to the said Land lying within the said limits or bounds belonging, or in any wise appertaining.—To have and to hold all and singular the said lands and premises, with all and singular the Woods, Quarries, Marshes, Waters, Rivers, Lakes, Fishings, Hawkings, Huntings, Mines, Minerals of what kind or nature soever, Privileges, Rights, Jurisdictions, Liberties, Royalties and all other Profits, Commodities, Emoluments and Hereditaments whatsoever, before, in and by these Presents given and granted or herein mentioned or intended to be hereby given or granted, with their and every of their appurtenances and every part and parcel thereof (except before excepted) unto the said Thomas Lewis and Capt. Richard Bonython, their heirs, associates and assigns forever, to the only proper use and behoof of the said Thomas Lewis and Capt. Richard Bonython, their heirs associates and assigns forever, yielding and paying unto Our Sovereign Lord the King one fifth part of Gold and Silver ore, and another fifth part to the Council aforesaid and their successors to be holden of the said Council and their successors, by the rent hereafter in these presents reserved, yielding and paying therefor yearly forever unto the said Council, their successors or assigns for every hundred acres of the said land in use, twelve pence of lawful money of England into the hands of the Rent Gatherer (for the time being) of the said Council their heirs or successors for all services whatsoever. And the said Council for the affairs of New England in America aforesaid do by these presents nominate, depute, authorize, appoint and in their place and stead put Wm. Blackstoon, of New England aforesaid, Clark, William Jeffreys and Edw. Hilton, of the same, Gent'n, and either or any of them jointly or severally to be their lawful attorney or attorneys, and in their names and stead to enter into the said part or portion of Land, and other the premises with the appurtenances by these presents given and granted or into some part thereof in the name of the whole, and peaceable and quiet possession and seizin thereof for them to take and the same so had and taken in their names and stead to deliver possession and seizen thereof unto the said Thomas Lewis and Capt. Richard Bonython their heirs associates and assigns, according to the tenor, form and effect of these presents, ratifying, confirming and allowing all and whatsoever the said attorney or attorneys or either of them, shall do in and about the premises by virtue hereof.

In witness whereof the said Council for the affairs of New England aforesaid have hereunto caused their common Seal to be put.

Given the twelfth day of Feb'y, Anno Domini 1629 and in the fifth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord Charles, by the Grace of God King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defender of the faith &c. EDW. GORGES.

XI. FALMOUTH.

The first settlement in ancient Falmouth was commenced on Richmond's Island, by one Walter Bagnall, who established himself there in 1628. He lived upon this island three years, and accumulated about £400, mostly in goods, by his trade with the Indians, whom he had much wronged. He and a companion were killed by an Indian sagamore called Squidragset, and others, October 3, 1631. Squidragset, Squidragusset, or Suttuggusset, in each of which modes the name is spelled, was a sachem over a tribe on the Presumpscott River. He subsequently conveyed lands upon the Presumpscott to the English, and a creek near the mouth of the river bears his name. This occupation by Bagnall was the first attempt to establish a plantation within the limits of Falmouth, and it seems that Bagnall had undisturbed possession there until the time that he was murdered. In January, 1633, an expedition, fitted out in Massachusetts to intercept a pirate, who was said to have been hovering about Pemaquid, on its return stopped at Richmond's Island, and inflicted summary justice upon Black Will, one of the murderers of Bagnall, by hanging him without the forms of law.

Willis says, "I am not able to determine whether the original name of this island was Richman's or Richmond's." Winthrop, in his first notice of it, calls it Richman's Island. It is afterwards, in the same work, and by other authors, sometimes called Richman's and sometimes Richmond's. In the early records it is often written Richman's; it is so written in a deed from Robert Jordan, its owner, to his son

John in 1677. On the other hand, it has borne its present name for the last century, and that mode of writing it is met with nearly as often in the previous period. A Mr. John Richmond lived in the neighborhood in 1636, and some years afterwards, but he does not appear to have had any connection with the island; and Mr. Trelawny, its owner, had a bark called the Richmond, which traded to the island in the year 1639. It may have derived its name from the Duke of Richmond, who was one of the Council of Plymouth. Richmond's Island lies four miles from Black Point, one mile from Spurwink River, eastward, the longitude of which is 17° 31′, the latitude 43° 34′. It is three miles in circumference, with a passable and gravelly ford on the north side between the main land and the island, at low water. It contains about two hundred acres of land, underlaid with solid rock. The shore is rocky; the sea cannot wash away the soil. There are no trees at the present time, and very probably there never were many. Jocelyn says: "Although now it contains but one family, it formerly afforded employment to a large number of men engaged in the fisheries, and was a market for considerable cargoes of foreign merchandise sent every year to this coast."

XII. The Colony of Massachusetts.

In 1628 the Massachusetts Company procured a charter from the Council of Plymouth, and in June sent over Captain John Endicott and a few associates to take possession of a grant. They arrived at Naumkeag (Salem), and laid the foundation of that respectable town and the colony of Massachusetts. The following year, 1629, a reinforcement arrived, and Charlestown was settled. The next year, 1630, still larger accessions were received; all of excellent people, among them John Winthrop. This same year Boston was founded, as also Roxbury, Dorchester, Watertown, Cambridge (under the name of Newton), and some other towns in the vicinity. The members of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, like their brethren at Plymouth, were people of strong religious sentiments and elevated character, who likewise had left England because of oppression; but there were some important differences between them, and though they combined to lay the foundations of New England, they should be carefully distinguished from each other. The Massachusetts Bay colonists, alone, are properly called "Puritans;" the Plymouth colonists, "Pilgrims." For many years, until 1692, the two colonies remained distinct from each other.

Those who read their history with care will understand the difference between our "Pilgrim Fathers," and our "Puritan Fathers."

In England the Puritan was a nationalist, believing that a christian nation is a christian church; and demanding that the Church of England should be thoroughly reformed; while the Pilgrim was a separatist, not only from the Anglican Prayer-book and Queen Elizabeth's episcopacy, but from national churches. They both had over them the peril of fines and imprisonment. Upon the separatists were added the penalties of exile and the gallows. The Pilgrim wanted liberty for himself, his wife, his little ones and his brethren, to walk with God in a christian life, as the rules and motives of such a life were revealed to him from God's word. For that he went into exile, for that he crossed the ocean, for that he made his home in the wilderness. The Puritan idea was not liberty, but right government in church and state; such government as should not only permit him, but also compel other men, to walk in the right way.

A recent writer says: "Such was the origin of the two parties formed at the birth of the Church of England,—parties differing widely both in principle and practice. The early Puritans were with the establishment, desiring and seeking its purification. The Separatists, or Pilgrims, were outside of that organization, declining to recognize the ecclesiastical claims of the English sovereign, and contending for the spiritual character of the Church and the exclusive headship over the Church of another King,—one Jesus, who only hath spiritual rule of the people."

The Rev. Edward C. Town, of East Marshfield, Mass., defines clearly the difference between the Pilgrims and Puritans as to their views and methods of dealing with church relations, and the rights of others as to such relations, and shows that the Pilgrims were broader and more liberal towards those who dissented from their views, while the Puritans, who came to Massachusetts later, were more inclined to enforce their views in a dogmatical way, at the expense of individual liberty.

XIII. Maine in 1630.

On February 12, 1630, the Council of Plymouth, England, made two grants on (Shawakotoc) Saco River, each being four miles upon the seashore, and extending eight miles into the country. That upon the west side of the river was made to John Oldham and Richard Vines. Oldham had lived in the country six years, partly within Plymouth, and partly within the Massachusetts jurisdiction; and Vines had become acquainted with the country by frequent voyages to it, and by spending one winter at the place where his patent was situated.

It is mentioned that the patentees had undertaken to transport fifty persons thither within seven years to plant and inhabit there. This condition was undoubtedly complied with, and Vines, who managed the whole concern, immediately took possession of his grant, June 25, 1630, in presence of Isaac Allerton, Captain Thomas Wiggin, Mr. Thomas Purchase, and Captain Nathaniel Waters. This patent contained the present town of Biddeford, York County, Maine.

The other patent, on the east side of Saco River, was made to Thomas Lewis and Captain John Bonighton. The livery of seisin was given June 28, 1631, and the proprietors in person successfully prosecuted the interest of their patents. This patent was somewhat larger than the present town of Saco. Such were the beginnings of the towns of Saco and Biddeford, and the lands continue to be held under those patents to this day. This year, 1630, Richard Tucker established himself at the mouth of Spurwink River on the south-east side, on Cape Elizabeth, where he was joined, the same year, by George Cleaves, and they unitedly carried on business there two or three years. In 1632 they were ejected by John Winter, who acted as agent for Robert Trelawny and Moses Goodyear, of Plymouth, England, who had procured a patent of a tract of land including all Cape Elizabeth. Driven from their residence on the Spurwink, they sought refuge on the north side of Casco River, and laid the foundation of the first settlement upon the neck, now Portland, in 1632. The same year a settlement was commenced at Agamenticus, now York, by Edward Godfrey. This was near the mouth of York River. The inhabitants subsequently extended up the river, for the purpose of erecting mills. In 1634, Edward Godfrey procured of the Council of Plymouth a grant to himself and associates, Samuel Maverick, William Rooke and others, of twelve thousand acres of land on the north side of the river Agamenticus. The same year another grant of twelve thousand acres on the west side of the river was made to Gorges's grandson, Ferdinando.

XIV. Cammock, now Scarborough.

The next grant was to Thomas Cammock, dated November 1, 1631. It included Black Point, now a part of Scarborough. This was granted by the Council of Plymouth, and it extended from Black Point to the Spurwink, and back one mile from the sea. Cammock is said to have been a relative of the Earl of Warwick. He was one of the company sent to Piscataqua, and was there as early as 1631. Possession of this grant, which included Stratton's Island, lying about one mile from the point, was given to him by Captain Walter Neal,

May 23, 1633. The patent was confirmed to him by Gorges in 1640. The same year he gave a deed of it to Henry Jocelyn, to take effect after the death of himself and wife. He died in the West Indies in 1643, and Jocelyn immediately entered upon possession, and married Margaret, his widow. The tract is now held under this title by conveyance from Jocelyn to Joshua Scottow, dated July 6, 1666. Henry Jocelyn came from Piscataqua to Black Point in 1635.

XV. First City in Maine.

The corporation of Agamenticus as a city, under the name of Gorgeana, in 1641, is a fact too singular in the monotonous character of our early settlements, not to be interesting to those conversant with this subject. The territory incorporated was on the east side of York River, extending seven miles into the land, and three miles on the seaboard.

Thomas Gorges, Esq., was the first mayor of the city. The board of aldermen was composed of Edward Godfrey, Roger Garde, George Puddington, Bartholomew Barnett, Edward Johnson, Arthur Bragdon, Henry Simpson, and John Rogers. Mr. Gorges retired in 1643, and was succeeded in the mayoralty by Roger Garde, and in the following year a woman of the city of Gorgeana was tried in the mayor's court for the murder of her husband, condemned and executed. Officers of the province, by invitation of the mayor, assisted in conducting the trial. The terms of the charter prohibited their interference without a special license and consent of the corporation. The inhabitants probably continued to enjoy the municipal privilege secured to them until 1652, when they acknowledged the jurisdiction of Massachusetts.

Edward Godfrey was chosen governor by the people of the western part of the state in 1649, and was the first man who exercised that office by election of the people. He is said, by a committee on the Mason title in England, in 1660, to have discharged the duties of this office with much reputation and justice. He died about 1661. He resided at York twenty-four years.

The first vessel built on the Massachusetts Bay, was launched July 4, 1631. She was named Blessing of the Bay.

XVI. Gorges's Patent of 1622 not Valid.

It will be perceived that the grants above mentioned were all obtained from the Council of Plymouth, notwithstanding the patent to Gorges and Mason, of 1622, which extended from Merrimac to Sagadahoc, and nominally covered the whole territory. From this circumstance it would be natural to conclude that the patent of 1622 was unexecuted, and that no title passed by it; and it appears by the opinion of Sir William Jones, the attorney-general, in 1679, that the grant was only sealed with the council seal, unwitnessed, no seisin indorsed, nor possession ever given with the grant. This idea is corroborated by the facts that Gorges was sitting at the council board and was a party to all the subsequent conveyances, which parcelled out the land within the limits of that patent, and that both he and Mason received a grant with six or seven others, in 1631, of a small tract on both sides of the Piscataqua, which included the improvements they had previously made there. If the patent of 1622 were valid, it would have been wholly useless to have procured another within the same limits.

XVII. Trelawny and Winter.

On the eleventh of December, 1631, the Council of Plymouth, England, granted to Robert Trelawny and Moses Gooodyear, merchants, of Devonshire, England, the tract of land lying between Cammock's patent, bounded on the east by Spurwink River, and the bay and river of Casco, and extending northward into the mainland "so far as the limits and boundaries of the lands granted to said Captain Thomas Cammock do and ought to extend towards the north." This boundary covers Cape Elizabeth, and Richmond's Island, Maine. Great controversies took place between parties relating to this patent before the final result was reached. John Winter came to this country in the summer of 1631, from Plymouth, England, and was here when the Trelawny and Goodyear patents, dated December 11, 1631, arrived. Early in 1632, Mr. Winter received the patent and the delivery of the premises specified in the grant from the proper officers designated by the king, as agent for Messrs. Trelawny and Goodyear, neither of which gentlemen ever visited this country. Mr. Winter made his arrangements to commence business upon Richmond's Island, which he carried on until 1635 as agent. Then it appears Mr. Trelawny made a contract with Mr. Winter that he should have the whole control of the plantation and business from that time in this country; and he was to have a certain sum of money yearly, and one tenth part of the proceeds of the business, as long as he continued in it.

XVIII. Other Settlers on the Spurwink.

In 1632 there were settled upon the territory near the mouth of the Spurwink River, George Cleaves and Richard Tucker, who had established themselves there in 1630. They had selected one of the most valuable spots in the tract, and claimed to hold against Winter two thousand acres of land with their improvements, of which, however, they were forcibly dispossessed in 1632. Cleaves, in 1640, when regular courts were established by Sir F. Gorges, brought an action for trespass against Winter, to recover damage for the removal, and in his declaration he stated his title as follows:—"Joining himself in partnership with Richard Tucker, then of Spurwink, who had also a right of inheritance there, the which he bought and purchased for a valuable consideration of Richard Bradshaw, who was formerly settled there, Captain Walter Neal, by virtue of a commission to him given by some of the Lords patentees, and as appeareth the said Richard Tucker was lawfully possessed of a right of inheritance at and in the said Spurwink. Alsoe the plaintiff further declareth that he joining his right held by promise and possession, with his partner's right by purchase and possession, and soe being accountable to his said partner, they both agreed to joyne their rights together and then to build, plant and continue, which when the plaintiff had done and was there settled for two years or thereabouts, this defendant John Winter came and pretending an interest there by virtue of a succeeding patent surrepticiouslie obtained, by force of arms expelled and thrust away the plaintiff from his house and lands and goods." The verdict in this case was as follows. "The jury find for the plaintiff: The house and land enclosed, containing four acres or thereabouts joyning with the said house, and give him eighty pounds for damage and twelve shillings and six pence for cost. The whole court, consisting of Thomas Gorges, Henry Jocelyn, John Bonighton, Edward Godfrey, and Richard Vines, concurred in rendering judgement, except Vines who dissented." This document enables us to fix the time of the settlement of Cleaves and Tucker upon the Spurwink, at 1630, which was probably the first made there; and from the same record it appears that as early as 1632 they had buildings erected, and made preparations there for a permanent establishment. The grant to Trelawny and Goodyear defeated their plans, and drove them to another spot in Casco Bay, within the limits of Falmouth. Winter, now left without interruption, immediately employed himself to bring into action all the resources of the grant. He soon built a ship on the island, settled a place for fishing and improved it with many servants. In August, 1632, the General Court of Massachusetts, in reference to the murder of Bagnall, speak of a plantation existing there, but notice it in a manner that implies that it was under no regular government. They say: "In consideration that further justice ought to be done in this murder, the court order that a boat sufficiently manned be sent with a commission to deal with the plantation at the eastward, and to join with such of them as shall be willing thereto, for examination of the murder and for apprehending such as shall be guilty thereof, and bring the prisoners into the bay." Winter was in the country at the date of the grant, for in his defence of the action before referred to, he speaks of the patent having been sent over to him, and he had probably made such a representation to the patentees as induced them to procure it. Winter as well as Cleaves came from Plymouth, England. Bradshaw, of whom Tucker is said to have purchased land at Spurwink, could not have occupied it previously to 1630, for he was put into possession of it by Walter Neal, who did not come to the country until the spring of that year. The probability is that Bradshaw did not occupy the land, as we find no other notice of him than appears in Cleaves's declaration.

We may suppose that the plantation referred to in the order of the court, was composed of Cleaves, Tucker and Winter, with their servants, and cannot connect with it at that time any other names. After the ejection of Cleaves and Tucker, in the latter part of 1632, Winter took the entire control of it, and managed it several years for the patentees. In 1634, as early as the first of March, seventeen fishing ships were come to Richmond's Island and the Isles of Shoals. The fish were undoubtedly cured on the islands and neighboring main, and must have afforded employment to a large number of men. John Jocelyn, brother of Henry, says that in 1638 he employed sixty men in the fishing business. The trade in beaver during this year in this neighborhood was also very successful. The government of Plymouth Colony procured, at their trading house on the Kennebec, twenty hogsheads, which were sent to England. This was the principal article of commerce in the early settlement of the country. It was a sort of circulating medium or standard of value among the white people and natives, and remittances to the mother country were made by it. About the year 1640, the price of it in Casco was from six to eight shillings a pound, and it was received in payment for commodities and labor. Winter in 1640 was complained of for attempting to keep down the price to six shillings. In the spring of 1635, a ship of eighty tons and a pinnace of ten tons arrived at Richmond's Island.

XIX. Trelawny, Proprietor.

In 1636, Mr. Trelawny alone is mentioned as proprietor of the patent, and on March 26, of that year, he committed the full government of the plantation to Mr. Winter, who appears after that time to have an interest of one tenth in the speculation; and in addition to his proportion of the profits, he was to receive from the general fund forty pounds per annum in money, for his personal care and charge. After this time the business of the plantation was pursued with great activity until the death of Mr. Robert Trelawny, which took place in 1644. They employed the ship Agnes, the bark Richmond of about thirty-five tons, the ship Hercules, the Margery, and one other the name of which is not mentioned. In 1638, Mr. Trelawny sent a ship of three hundred tons to the island laden with wine. This was probably the proceeds of a cargo of fish sent to Spain or Portugal.

Large quantities of wine and spirits were early sent to this coast, and they produced as much misery and wretchedness among those who indulged in them then, as they do at the present day. Jocelyn describes their effects, from personal observation, in lively colors. He says:— "The money which the fishermen received did them but little good, for at the end of the voyage the merchant comes in with a walking tavern, a bark laden with the legitimate blood of the grape, which they bring from Phial, Madeira, and Canaries," and after they get a "taster or two," they will not go to sea again for a whole week, till they get wearied with drinking, "taking ashore two or three hogsheads of wine and rum, to drink when the merchant is gone." "They often," he adds, "have to run in debt for their necessaries on account of their lavish expense for drink, and are constrained to mortgage their plantations, if they have any, and the merchant, when the time is expired, is sure to turn them out of house and home, seizing their plantations and cattle, poor creatures, to look out for a new habitation in some remote place, where they begin the world again." Such is the description which this voyager gives of the early settlers of Maine, and it accounts for the fact, which would otherwise seem extraordinary, of the shipment of so large a quantity of wine, as is above mentioned, to plantations then in their infancy.

The merchandise sent to the proprietor in England consisted principally of pipe-staves, beaver, fish and oil. In 1639, Winter sent in the bark Richmond six thousand pipe-staves, which were valued here at eight pounds eight shillings a thousand. Some shipments were made directly from the plantation to Spain, and a profitable intercourse seems to have been carried on for the proprietors a number of years, until it was suspended by the death of Mr. Trelawny. After that time the want of capital probably prevented Winter from employing ships on his own account, and Trelawny's heir was but a child of six or seven years. The commercial character of the plantation declined from that time, and the trade gradually sought other channels, until the mouth of the Spurwink and Richmond's Island became entirely deserted. Their mercantile prosperity is now only to be found among the almost perished memories of a bygone age.

XX. Council of Plymouth.

The Council of Plymouth continued their operations until June 7, 1635, when they surrendered their charter to the king. During their existence as a corporation, a period of fourteen years and seven months, they were not inactive. In 1621 they relinquished a large proportion of their patent in favor of Sir William Alexander, and assented to a conveyance by the king to him of all the territory lying east of the St. Croix, and south of the St. Lawrence rivers, embracing the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. The grants made by the Council within the present limits of Maine were as follows:—

1. August 10, 1622, to Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Captain John Mason, from the Merrimac to the Kennebec Rivers.

2. Nov. 6, 1626, to the Plymouth Adventurers, on Kennebec River; enlarged in 1628.

3. Jan. 13, 1630, to William Bradford and his associates, fifteen miles on each side of the Kennebec River, extending up to the Cobbisecontee. This grant Bradford transferred to the Plymouth Adventurers.

4. Feb. 12, 1630, to John Oldham and Richard Vines, four miles by eight miles on the west side of the Saco River at its mouth, four miles on the sea, eight miles back; now Biddeford.

5. March 12, 1630, to Thomas Lewis and Richard Bonighton, on the east side of Saco River, four miles on the sea, eight miles back; now Saco, York Co.

6. March 13, 1630, to John Beauchamp and Thomas Leverett, ten leagues square on the west side of the Penobscot River, called the Lincoln or Wadd's patents.

7. 1631, to John Dy and others, the province of Lygonia, or the Plough Patent, lying between Cape Porpoise and Cape Elizabeth, and extending forty miles from the coast.

8. Nov. 10, 1631, to Thomas Cammock, Black Point.

9. Dec. 1, 1631, to Robert Trelawny and Moses Goodyear, a tract between Spurwink River and Casco Bay.

10. 1632, to Robert Aldsworth and Giles Eldridge, a tract on Pemaquid Point.

11. 1634, to Edward Godfrey and others, twelve thousand acres on the river Agamenticus.

12. 1634, to Ferdinando Gorges, twelve thousand acres on the west side of the river Agamenticus.

These are all the grants which this company made in the State of Maine, previous to their final division in 1635. In that division the territory now called Maine was distributed to three of the patentees. Gorges's share extended from the Piscataqua River to the Kennebec or Sagadahoc. Another portion was between Sagadahoc and Pemaquid. The third, from Pemaquid to the St. Croix. The proprietors of the two latter divisions are not named, and there is no evidence that any occupation was had by them under this title.

XXI. The Families at Falmouth.

The above quotations from Willis and others show that as early as 1640 there were at least nine families in Falmouth, namely, those of Atwell, Cleaves, Lewis, Macworth, Milton, Mosier, Tucker, Winter, and Wise, of which four were settled at Backcove, three upon the Neck, one east of Presumpscot River, and the other on Richmond's Island; in addition to which was the Rev. Robert Jordan, who was not yet married to Winter's daughter, and the numerous persons employed by Winter in his business, and those employed by the other settlers. The whole population at that time cannot be precisely ascertained. Of this period Jocelyn gives this anecdote to illustrate the manners of the early settlers. "At this time," June 26, 1639, "we had some neighboring gentlemen in our house, who came to welcome me into the country, where, amongst variety of discourse, they told me of a young lion not long before killed at Piscataqua by an Indian; of a sea serpent, or snake, that lay coiled up like a cable upon a rock at Cape Ann. A boat passing by with English aboard and two Indians, they would have shot the serpent, but the Indians dissuaded them, saying that if it were not killed outright they would all be in danger of their lives. One Mr. Milton told about a triton, or merman, which he saw in Casco Bay. The gentleman was a great fowler, and used to go out with a small boat or canoe, and fetching a compass about a small island, there being many islands in the bay, for the advantage of a shot, he encountered with a triton, who laying his hands upon the sides of the canoe, had one of them chopped off with a hatchet by Mr. Milton, which was in all respects like the hand of a man. The triton presently sunk, dyeing the water with his purple blood, and was no more seen." He adds, "on September 23, I left Black Point and came to Richmond's Island, about three leagues to the eastward, where Mr. Trelawny kept a fishing post. Mr. John Winter, a grave and discreet man, was his agent, and employed sixty men upon that design. Monday the 24th, I went aboard the Fellowship of one hundred and seventy tons, and at six o'clock next morning sailed from Massachusetts."

XXII. Surrender of Charter.

On April 25th, 1635, a short time previous to the surrender of their charter, the Council had a meeting at Whitehall, in London, at which they prepared a declaration of the reasons which induced them to take this important step. They say, "Forasmuch as we have found by long experience that the faithful endeavors of some of us, that have sought the plantation of New England, have not been without frequent and inevitable troubles as companions to our undertakings, from our first discovery of the coast, to this present, by great changes and necessary expenses, also depriving us of divers of our friends and faithful servants, employed in that work abroad, whilst ourselves at home were assaulted with sharp litigious questions, both before the privy council, and the parliament, having been presented as a grievance to the commonwealth, the affections of the multitude were thereby disheartened, and so much the more, by how much it pleased God about that time to bereave us of the most noble and principal props thereof, as the Duke of Lenox, the Marquis of Hamilton, and many others, strong stayers to this weak building." Then followed the claim of the French ambassador, "taking advantage of the division of the sea-coast between ourselves, to whom we made a just and satisfactory answer. Nevertheless," they said, "their crosses did not draw upon us such a disheartened weakness, as the last parliament." After a further enumeration of grievances too hard to be borne, they say, they found matters "in so desperate a case by reason of complaints made against them, and the procedure in Massachusetts," that they see no remedy for "what was brought to ruin," but for his majesty to take the whole business into his own hands. "After all these troubles and upon these considerations it is now resolved that the patents shall be surrendered unto his majesty."

In this same instrument, they provided for all existing titles made by them, and prayed the king to confirm the grants which they had divided among themselves. These were recorded in a book which accompanied the surrender.

In addition to the reasons set forth in the public declaration of the Council, Ferdinando Gorges, grandson of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, in "America painted to the life," has the following: "The country proving a receptacle for divers sorts of sects, the establishment in England complained of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, and he was taxed as the author of it, which brought him into some discredit, whereupon he moved those lords to resign their grand patent to the king, and pass particular patents to themselves of such parts along the seashore as might be sufficient for them."

XXIII. Division by Lot.

The division of the territory among the patentees was made by lot on the 3d of February, 1635. The grants were executed April 22d, and, on June 7th following, the President and Council made a full surrender of their charter to the king. They urged upon the king the necessity of taking away the charter of Massachusetts, and of appointing a general governor for the whole territory, to be taken from among the lords proprietors. The king assented to this plan, but the earnest opposition of the friends of Massachusetts and the other New England colonies, and the breaking out of the civil war, which by its immediate and pressing danger engrossed the whole thoughts of the king and his government, prevented its being carried into execution.

Captain John Mason, to whom New Hampshire had been assigned, and Sir Ferdinando Gorges, seem to have been the only proprietors who pursued their separate grants with any zeal. But Mason was not long permitted to enjoy the fruit of his enterprise. He died Nov. 26, 1635, and his private interest in this remote province, for want of proper superintendence, and owing to the unfaithfulness of agents, immediately declined.

Gorges lost no time in improving his acquisition. He gave to his possession the name of "New Somersetshire," from the county in England in which his estates were situated, and the same year sent over a governor, his nephew Captain William Gorges. The proprietor could establish no civil government without authority from the king, and Gorges therefore was indefatigable in procuring the necessary requisite for perfecting his title to the sovereignty as well as the soil of the province. His labors for this object were not crowned with success until April 3, 1639. In the mean time, however, William Gorges arrived in the country, and held at Saco, March 21, 1636, the first court in the State of Maine of which we have any record.

The members of the court are styled commissioners, and the record commences as follows:—"At a meeting of the commissioners in the house of Captain Richard Bonighton in Saco this twenty-first day of March, 1636, present, Captain Richard Bonighton, Captain William Gorges, Captain Thomas Cammock, Mr. Henry Jocelyn, Gent., Mr. Thomas Purchase, Mr. Edward Godfry, Mr. Thomas Lewis, Gent."

XXIV. The Court of 1636.

This court was continued for several days. Four persons were fined five shillings each for getting drunk. George Cleaves was fined five shillings for rash speeches; and John Bonighton, son of Richard, for incontinency with Ann, his father's servant, was fined forty shillings, and said Ann twenty shillings, and he to keep the child. The jurisdiction of this court seems to have been co-extensive with the limits of the province, the commissioners present being from each extremity, and from the centre. It does not appear that it was held by virtue of any commission, although that fact may be reasonably inferred. No record of this court exists later than 1637. But the few memoranda that have been preserved prove to us that the early settlers, notwithstanding the smallness of their number, were moved by the same litigious spirit that often exists in places with a larger population.

XXV. Ancient Falmouth.

The historians thus far quoted present to view three points within the territory of ancient Falmouth, on which the earliest settlements were made. The settlements were entirely distinct and independent of each other, and continued their existence in despite of each other. A quarrel between Winter on the one hand, and Cleaves and Tucker on the other, arose respecting the right to the land on which the latter had settled. In the first action the court, in 1640, decided in favor of Cleaves, so far as to give him his improvements on the Spurwink, and £80 damages, but they established the general title in Trelawny of land south of Casco River. In a second action, which Cleaves brought against Winter for disturbing him in his possession on the Neck, the court confirmed Cleaves's title.

At the same court, Winter was presented by the grand jury, consisting of twelve persons, of whom were Cleaves, Mackworth and Tucker, for irregularity in his dealings. He was charged with keeping down the price of beaver, and exacting too much profit upon his liquor, powder and shot. It appeared in evidence that he paid £7 sterling a hogshead for brandy, and sold it at twenty pence a quart, which would be £33 sterling for a hogshead. He sold powder at three shillings a pound, for which he paid out twenty pence. The return of the grand jury was as follows:—

"We present John Winter of Richmond's island, for that Thomas Wise, of Casco, hath declared upon his oath that he paid to John Winter a noble for a gallon of aqua vitæ about two months since, and that he hath credibly heard it reported that said Winter bought of Mr. George Luxton, when he was last at Casco bay, a hogshead of aqua vitæ for £7 stirling about nine months since. Mr. John Baley hath declared upon his oath that about eight months since he bought of Mr. John Winter six quarts of aqua vitæ at twenty pence the quart. He further declared he paid him for commodities bought about the same time, about six pounds of beaver at six shillings the pound, which he himself took at eight shillings the pound. John West also declared that he bought of J. Winter a bottle of aqua vitæ at twenty pence the quart, and shot at four pence a pound. Richard Tucker, one of the great inquest, declared that Thomas Wise of Casco coming from Richmond's island, and having bought of John Winter a flaggot of liquor, aqua vitæ, for which he paid him as he said a noble, asking myself and partner if we would be pleased to accept a cupp of noble liquor, and how that he saw Mr. Winter pay aboard Mr. Luxton's ship for a hogshead of the same liquor £7 stirling, when he was last in Casco bay. Michael Milton upon oath, declared that he had bought divers times of Mr. J. Winter, powder and shot, paying him for powder three shillings, and for shot four pence per pound, and likewise for aqua vitæ, six shillings eight pence the gallon. And he further declareth that he hath heard Mr. Richmond declare in the house of Mr. George Cleaves and Richard Tucker, that he sold powder to Mr. Winter for twenty pence or twenty-two pence the pound. He further declared that he had heard by the general voice of the inhabitants in those parts grievous complaints of his hard dealing in the great rate of his commodities, and the injury to them in thus bringing down the price of beaver, and that the boats and pinnaces that pass to and from with commodities, before they come to Richmond's island, take beaver at eight shillings, but afterwards they hold it at the rate of six shillings. George Lewis, upon oath, declared that he had known beaver refused to be taken at eight shillings, because they could put them off to J. Winter for only six shillings."

XXVI. Result of the Quarrels.

The quarrel which had for some time existed between Winter, Cleaves and Tucker, was now finding vent in the courts which were this year for the first time established, and it is not difficult to suppose that this complaint against Winter was gotten up by the Casco interest, by way of revenge for his disturbing the possession of the settlers on the other side of the river. That there may not have been some ground for it, cannot be said. It does not, however, suit the usage of modern times for courts and juries to interfere with the profits a man may put upon his own merchandise. This court was held June, 1640, and was the first general assembly ever held in the province. At the next term, held in September following, Winter retaliated upon Cleaves, by bringing an action of slander against him, in which he declared "that about six years past within this province, the defendant did slander the plaintiff's wife." "Mr. Arthur Brown, examined, saith he hath heard the defendant say that Mrs. Winter was a drunken woman." This action was continued, and, at the next session, the parties entered into the following agreement for referring all their controversies:—

Saco, June 28, 1641. Whereas divers differences have heretofore been between Mr. George Cleaves and John Winter, the parties have now agreed to refer themselves to the arbitration of Robert Jordan, Mr. Arthur Macworth, Mr. Arthur Brown, and Richard Ormsby, for the final ending of all controversies, and bind themselves each to the other in an assumpsit of £1000 stirling, to stand to the award of their arbitrators, and, if these arbitrators shall not fully agree, Mr. Bachelder is chosen to be an umpire for a final ending of the same.

The same day the following award was made:—

June 28, 1641. An award made between George Cleaves, Gent., and Mr. John Winter, by the arbitrators within named. Whereas the jury have found £80 sterling damage, with four acres of ground and house at Spurwink for the plaintiff hereunto, granted on both parties that the house and land shall be due Mr. Winter, and £60 sterling to the plaintiff, presently to be made good. Whereas there hath been found by the jury in an action of interruption of a title of land for the plaintiff, the same I ratify. Whereas also, there is a scandal objected by Mr. Winter against Mr. Cleaves from words of defamation, it is ordered that said Cleaves shall christanly acknowlege his failing therein against Mr. Winter his wife, for present before the arbitrators, and afterwards to Mrs. Winter. STEPHEN BACHELDER.

Agitated by us: Robert Jordan, Richard Ormsby, Arthur Macworth, Arthur Brown.

XXVII. RIGHTS UNDER PATENTS.

The patent granted by James I. to the Council for the Affairs of New England, Nov. 3, 1620, was the civil basis of the subsequent patents which divide the country. This patent contained powers of government to the Council and their successors, but it soon became a question whether the Council could, with a conveyance of any portion of territory within their limits, transfer a right of government. This point, it is believed, was never directly decided, although it may be inferred from the practice of some of the patentees that the general impression was adverse to this power. The Massachusetts patentees, and Sir Ferdinando Gorges, each procured a confirmation of their grants from the king, with power to govern their respective provinces. With regard to Mason's grant of New Hampshire, which was not confirmed by the king, the two Chief Justices of England agreed that it conveyed no right of sovereignty, "the great Council of Plymouth, under whom he claimed, having no power to transfer government to any."

In the confirmation of Gorges's title by the king, in 1639, confirming the grant of the Council, it was directed that the territory shall forever hereafter be called and named the province or counties of Maine.

The name was bestowed in compliment to the Queen of England, a daughter of Henry IV. of France, who was connected by title or estate with the Province of Meyne in France. Soon after obtaining the royal charter, Gorges issued a commission to Sir Thomas Jocelyn, Knight, Richard Vines, Esq., his steward, General Francis Champernoon, his loving nephew, Henry Jocelyn and Richard Bonighton, Esqrs., William Hooke and Edward Godfrey, Gentlemen, to be his counsellors for the administration of the government of the province. This instrument is dated Sept. 2, 1639. Sir Thomas Jocelyn did not come over, and in March following Gorges framed a new commission, substituting in place of that gentleman, "his trusty and well beloved cousin, Thomas Gorges, Esq." The arrival of Governor Gorges in the summer of 1640, at Boston, is noticed by Winthrop, who describes him as a young gentleman of the Inns of Court, a kinsman of Sir F. Gorges, and sent by him with a commission for the government of his province of New Somersetshire. He was sober and well disposed. He staid a few days at Boston, and "was very careful to take advice of our magistrates how to manage his affairs."

The first General Court under this government was held at Saco, June 25, 1640, when the counsellors, except Gorges, who had not yet arrived, were sworn into office; together with R. Sankey, provost marshal, Thomas Elkins, under marshal, and Roger Garde of Gorgeana, Register. Nicholas Frost was appointed constable of Piscataqua; Michael Witten, of Casco; John Wilkinson, of Black Point. The inhabitants were required to attend this court, and to profess allegiance to the new government. A list of those of Piscataqua, both who appeared and who made default of not appearing, twenty-four in all, was placed on record. This court was an executive and legislative, as well as a judicial, body, and exercised a general control over the affairs of the province.

XXVIII. The General Court.

It was holden in the name of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, Knight, Lord Proprietor of the Province of Maine, who was made Lord Palatine, with the same powers and privileges as the Bishop of Durham, in the county Palatine of Durham. More ample powers, it has been said, were never bestowed on a British subject. The paramount authority of the crown seems scarcely to have been recognized. The style of the judicial proceedings supposed the presence of the lord proprietor. Thus Cleaves, in the case before described, pleaded a "promise made unto him by you, Sir F. Gorges."

The second term of the court was holden in September, when "the Worshipful Thomas Gorges" was present with the other counsellors. At this time it was ordered that "henceforth there should be one General Court holden at Saco, for the whole Province of Maine, every year, on the twenty-fifth day of June, if it fall not on the sabbath day, which if it shall, then the said court to begin the day following. But if urgent occasions require it, then the said Council to call another court, at such time as they shall think meet." The other courts were to be held by a portion of the Council, at Gorgeana, for the inhabitants from Kennebunk to Sagadahoc; three times a year at each place. These inferior courts had no jurisdiction in capital felonies, or civil actions involving titles to lands. A few extracts from the records of 1640, are as follows:

"Joseph Boles hath presented to the grand inquest Thomas Heard for being drunk. The last night after sunset the delinquent came to the plaintiff's house and offered violence to his person by striking him, threatening him with many violent words to break open the store, to the great disturbance of himself and the people that were therein, and he further declareth that he received his drink at the house of William Scadlock. W. Scadlock presented by the grand inquest for this misdemeanor in his house, was fined 20s. by the Court, which upon his humble petition was remitted. S. Heard fined 5s for being drunk. Paid."

Mr. Bowles, the complainant, lived at Winter Harbor at that time. He was afterwards a respectable inhabitant of Wells.

"John Bonython versus Richard Gibson, minister. Action of debt. Plaintiff declares that defendant oweth him £5, due upon a bill 1 May last, and also £3 6s. upon account. The defendant by his attorney, Francis Robinson, in part confesseth the action, and intreateth that the matter in difference may be referred to arbitration; admitted by the court with the consent of the plaintiff; and the defendant by his attorney engages that the corn which he has growing in Saco shall remain for security to the plaintiff for the payment of the debt according to arbitration or otherwise. Arbitrators, G. Cleaves and A. Macworth."

"Action of slander. Arthur Browne versus Thomas Purchase. A. Browne cometh into this court and declareth that whereas he hath been bred a merchant from his youth upward, and lived in this country these seven years, in good reputation and credit, without scandalous reproach of false or injurious dealing, yet the defendant hath wrongly accused him of bribery and perjury, &c. Verdict for Plaintiff; damages £5."

"Richard Gibson and Mary his wife versus John Bonython (son of Richard). Action of slander. That on or about April 28, 1640, in the dwelling-house of Thomas Lewis, deceased, he did slander the plaintiff for a base priest, a base knave, a base fellow (not sparing his wife),—all which he repeated in the house of R. Vines, Esq. Damages set at 500*l.* Verdict for the plaintiff; damages 6*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*" "Mr. Arthur Browne is presented for swearing two oaths—fined 2*s.* John Paine is fined 1*s.* for swearing one oath. H. Watts and W. Frethy for profaning the sabbath in carrying of bords contrary to his Majesty's laws—fined 20*s.*, one half remitted, the rest paid to the Worshipful R. Vines. Capt. Cammock fined 1*s.* for swearing one oath."

XXIX. Sir Christopher Gardiner.

The following declaration relates to a gentleman of whom much is said by the early historical writers:—

"Richard Tucker cometh into this court, and declareth that nine years since or thereabouts, there came one Sir Christopher Gardiner to the plaintiff in the name of the defendant, Thomas Purchase, and borrowed of him a warming pan, which cost here in this country 12*s.* 6*d.*, which the defendant hath all this time, and still doth wrongfully detain from the plaintiff. And also the said Sir Christopher did, six months after or thereabouts, buy of the plaintiff a new fowling piece for 40*s.*, which he promised to pay within a month after; which money both for the warming-pan and the piece the plaintiff hath oftentimes demanded of the defendant, who doth still refuse to pay the same, to the damage of the plaintiff at least 5*l.* sterling, for which the plaintiff commenceth his action of trespass on the case against the defendant in this court, and humbly desireth a legal hearing according to law. T. Purchase denies ever authorizing Sir C. Gardiner to buy any warming pan or fowling piece for him, &c. Verdict for the plaintiff, 2*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* for the two articles; 2*d.* damages; 12*s.* 6*d.* cost of court."

Sir Christopher Gardiner came to New England in 1630, and remained about two years, attended, it is said, by a young woman, his cousin, and several servants. He had travelled in the Holy Land, and received the honor of knighthood at Jerusalem. On his appearance at Boston, he was suspected by the Massachusetts government of having designs upon their patent, especially after a packet of letters came addressed to him from Sir F. Gorges; which being forwarded from Piscataqua by Capt. Neal under cover to Gov. Winthrop, were somewhat unceremoniously opened by the council of that colony. "By these letters it appeared," observes Winthrop, "that Sir F. Gorges (who claims a great part of Massachusetts Bay) had some secret design to recover his pretended right, and that he reposed much trust in Sir Christopher Gardiner." The cry of popery was soon after raised against the poor knight, confirmed by his alleged descent from Stephen Gardiner, the bloody bishop of Winchester, of the reign of Queen Mary; vague charges of an immoral nature were also brought against him, but not substantiated. After suffering much abusive treatment in Massachusetts, he at length returned to England, where he coöperated with Gorges and Mason, in their plans relating to New England.

XXX. Incidents after 1641.

The records of the courts between 1641 and 1644, inclusive, are not preserved. Governor Gorges sailed for England in 1643, leaving Vines at the head of the government. In 1645, the General Court sat at Saco, when were present R. Vines, R. Bonighton and H. Jocelyn, Esqrs., and Mr. F. Robinson, Mr. A. Macworth, Mr. E. Small and Mr. Abraham Preble, Magistrates. The following order was passed: "The General Court, not having heard from Sir F. Gorges, appoint R. Vines Deputy Governor of the Province for one year, and if he depart within the year H. Jocelyn in his place." The civil war was at this time raging in England, and Sir Ferdinando, although advanced in years, took up arms in defence of his royal master. He was in the army of Prince Rupert at the siege of Bristol, 1643; and when that city was retaken by the parliamentary forces in 1645, he was plundered and thrown into prison. It is not strange, therefore, that during this period Gorges paid no attention to the affairs of the province. The following order of the court, 1645, shows that his fortunes were regarded as desperate. "It is ordered that R. Vines shall have power to take into his possession all the goods and chattels of Sir F. Gorges, and to pay such debts as Sir Ferdinando is in any way indebted to any." At the same time a public fast was ordered to be solemnly kept, "upon Thursday, 20 November next, throughout this province."

In the meantime, the controversy respecting Lygonia arose. Alex. Rigby, proprietor of the Plough Patent, was a member of the celebrated Long Parliament, and strongly attached to both the political and religious opinions of the republican or revolutionary party in England. Having purchased the patent in 1643, he appointed George Cleaves, then in England, his agent, and deputy governor of the new province, to which he gave the name of Lygonia, embracing the towns or plantations of Casco, Black Point, Blue Point, Saco, and Cape Porpoise. Cleaves had gone thither for the purpose of preferring complaints to Parliament against the government of Maine. The petition which he presented was signed with the names of several planters without their consent, if we may trust the affidavits of Macworth, Watts, Alger (Arthur), Hamans, West, Wadleigh, Weare, Wilkinson, and Smith, in which they say they did not authorize Cleaves's charges, exhibited in Parliament against Mr. Vines, nor knew they of them until said Cleaves came last out of England, nor do they testify to any such charges against Mr. Vines. Robinson certifies the same, and adds, "I do, moreover, testify that Mr Thomas Jenner, minister of God's word, told me he asked Mr. Cleaves why he put men's hands to a petition they never saw. His answer was, 'the Parliament bid him.'" The result, however, was a commission from Parliament, dated April 28, 1643, to Gov. Winthrop of Massachusetts Bay, Mr. A. Macworth of Casco, and others, to examine into the truth of the articles alleged against Mr. Vines. Cleaves arrived at Boston in March, 1644, with his commission of deputy governor, and applied to the General Court of that colony for assistance, in establishing the claims of Mr. Rigby.

King Charles II. directed his attention to New England soon after his restoration. In 1664 he appointed four commissioners to visit all the colonies, "with full power to receive and determine complaints and appeals in all cases and matters, and to settle the peace and security of the country." Three of the commissioners, Sir Robert Carr, George Cartwright and Samuel Maverick, Esquires, came into this quarter in the summer of 1665, when they issued the following proclamation:

June 23, 1665.—By the King's Commissioners for settling the affairs of New England. We having seen the several charters granted to Sir F. Gorges and to the corporation of Mass. Bay, and having received several petitions from the inhabitants of the Province of Maine, which is laid claim unto both by the heir of Sir F. Gorges and the said corporation, in which petitions they desire to be taken into his Majesty's immediate protection and government; and having considered that it would be of ill consequence if the inhabitants of this province should be seduced by those of Massachusetts Bay, who have already by the sound of trumpet denied to submit themselves unto his majesty's authority, which by commission under his great seal of England he hath been pleased to intrust us with, looking upon themselves as the supreme power in these parts, contrary to their allegiance and derogatory to his Majesty's sovereignty: and being desirous that the inhabitants of this province may be at peace among themselves and free from the contests of others and the inconveniences that may thence necessarily arise. To the end that may be so: We by the powers given us by his sacred Majesty under his great seal of England, do by these presents receive all his Majesty's good subjects living within the province of Maine into his Majesty's more immediate protection and government. And by the same powers, and to the end this province may be well governed, we hereby nominate and constitute Mr. F. Champernoon and Mr. R. Cutts of Kittery, Mr. E. Johnson and Mr. E. Rishworth of York, Mr. Samuel Wheelwright of Wells, Mr. F. Hook and Mr. William Phillips of Saco, Mr. George Mounjoy of Casco, Mr. H. Jocelyn of Black Point [Scarborough], Mr. R. Jordan of Richmond's Island, and Mr. John Wincoll of Newichawanock [Berwick], Justices of the Peace; and we desire, and in his Majesty's name we require, them and every of them, to execute the office of a Justice of the Peace within the Province of Maine. And we hereby authorize and empower Mr. H. Jocelyn and Mr. E. Rishworth, Recorder, or either of them to administer the oath underwritten [which themselves have taken before us], to all the aforenamed gentlemen who have not taken it, before they shall act as Justices of the Peace.

And we hereby give power and authority to any three of the above named Justices of the Peace to meet at convenient times and places, as heretofore other magistrates have met, or as they shall think most convenient, and then to hear and determine all causes both civil and criminal, and to order all the affairs of the Province for the peace, safety and defence thereof, proceeding in all cases according to the laws of England as near as may be, and thus to do until his Majesty please to appoint another government. And in his Majesty's name we require and command all the inhabitants of this Province to yield obedience to the said Justices acting according to the laws of England as near as may be. And in his Majesty's name we forbid, as well the commissioners of Mr. Gorges as the corporation of Mass. Bay, to molest any of the inhabitants of this Province with their pretences, or to exercise any authority within this Province, until his Majesty's pleasure be further known, by virtue of their pretended rights. Given under our hands and seals at York, within the said Province, the 23d day of June, 1665.

Signed and sealed by the commissioners above named.

"A provincial form of Government, so ardently desired by a large proportion of our inhabitants, was thus re-established. Maine once more assumed an independent relation to the other Colonies of New England. The friends of Gorges, relieved from the jurisdiction of Massachusetts, and led to expect a speedy recognition of his proprietary claims, warmly supported the authority of the royal commissioners. General Assemblies, composed of all in commission, and of burgesses or deputies from the several towns, were holden at this place [York], which appears to have been made the seat of government. The commissioners [who remained only a few weeks in the Province] directed that if the justices were equally divided on any subject, Mr. Jocelyn should have the casting vote; if he is not present, Mr. Jordan. Another order allowed juries of seven men to be impanelled for the trial of cases, on account of the fewness of the inhabitants. The first inferior court under this organization of the government was holden at Wells, in July following; the second at this place, Nov. 7th. At the former, it was ordered that every town shall take care that there be a pair of stocks, a cage, and coucking stool [this instrument for the punishment of common scolds], erected between this and next court."—Folsom's History of Saco and Biddeford.

XXXI. Other Courts.

Cleaves, now triumphant over his adversaries, assumed undisputed sway in the whole province of Lygonia, extending from Cape Porpoise to Cape Elizabeth, including both. Under this government were the settlements at Cape Porpoise, Winter Harbor and Saco, Black and Blue Points (now Scarborough), Spurwink, Richmond's Island and Casco. Saco was the largest, and the next those of Spurwink and Richmond's Island. Cleaves immediately commenced making grants in his newly acquired territory. As early as May, 1647, he granted to Richard Moore four hundred acres in Cape Porpoise, and in September of the same year, he conveyed to John Bush a tract "in the village of Cape Porpus." He also made grants in Scarborough and Falmouth, all of them as the agent of Col. Alexander Rigby, president and proprietor of the province of Lygonia. Records of only three courts held by Cleaves are now to be found, and these are very imperfect. One relates to a court held at Black Point, by George Cleaves, Henry Jocelyn, and Robert Jordan, in which merely the appointment of an administrator is noticed; and the others, held at Casco in September and December of the same year, exhibit the proceedings which took place on the petition of Robert Jordan, the executor of John Winter, for the allowance of his claim against Trelawny. These are presented. The style of the court, as we learn from Jordan's petition, was the "General Assembly of the Province of Ligonia." We owe the preservation of this record to the vigilance of private interest, and not to the care of public officers. The repeated changes in government, the confusion of the times, but, most of all, the desolation spread over the whole eastern country by Indian hostilities, have been fatal to the perservation of any perfect records either of the courts or towns.

An Act for incorporating the East Side of Saco River, in the town of Biddeford, into a separate District, by the name of Pepperellboro'. [Old Patent to Thomas Lewis and Richard Bonighton, Feb. 12, 1629.]

Whereas the inhabitants on the east side of Saco in the town of Biddeford in the county of York, have represented to this court the great difficulties and inconveniences they labour under in their present situation, and have earnestly requested that they may be invested with the powers, privileges and immunities of a District,—Therefore Be it enacted by the governor, council and House of Representatives, That all the lands in the town of Biddeford lying on the east side of Saco River in the county of York, together with an Island in said Saco River commonly called and Known by the name of Indian Island, be, and hereby is erected into a Separate and distinct District by the name of Pepperellboro, bounded with the Same bounds as the town of Biddeford now is, the East side of Saco River; and that the said District be, and hereby is invested with all the privileges, powers, immunities that towns in this Province by law do or may enjoy, that of sending a Representative to the General Assembly only Excepted; and that the said District shall have full liberty and right from time to time to join the Town of Biddeford in Choosing a Representative to represent them at the General Assembly, and shall be notified of the time and place of election iu like manner with the inhabitants of the said town of Biddeford, by a warrant from the Selectmen of said town directed to a constable or constables of the said District, requesting him or them to warn the inhabitants to attend the meeting at the time and place assigned, which warrant shall be seasonably returned by said constable or constables. And the representatives may be chosen indifferently from the said Town or District, the pay or allowance to be borne by the Town and District in proportion as they shall from time to time pay to the Province tax. Provided nevertheless, and be it further enacted, that the said District shall pay their proportion of all Town, county, and province taxes already set or granted to be raised on the Town of Biddeford aforesaid, as if this act had not been made. And be it further enacted, That Rishworth Jordan, Esq. be, and hereby is empowered to issue his warrant to some principal inhabitant of said District, requiring him to notify and warn the inhabitants of said District, qualified by law to vote in town affairs, to meet at such time and place as shall be therein set forth, to choose all such officers, as shall be necessary to manage the affairs of said District.

June 8, 1762. This Bill having been read three several times in the House of Representatives, passed to be enacted.

TIM. RUGGLES, Speaker.

June 9, 1762. This Bill having been read three several times in Council, passed to be enacted.

A. OLIVER, Secretary,

June 9, 1762. By the Governor. I consent to the enacting this Bill.

EDWARD D. BANGS, Sec'y of Commonwealth.

Sir William Phips, appointed Governor of the Province of the Massachusetts Bay in 1692, was at the time only forty-two years of age, having been born at Woolwich, on the Kennebec River, in Maine, in 1650. His father and mother were the parents of twenty-six children, twenty-one of whom were boys. Till he was eighteen years old, William's occupation was that of tending sheep; and in after life he took pleasure in pointing out the fields where he had followed his flocks, Afterwards, he passed four years in a ship-yard, and became a skilful ship-carpenter. He went to Boston—as country boys of New England have done ever since—to seek his fortune. He found it before the year was out, in learning to read and write, and marrying a sensible, good woman. She was a widow, some years older than himself, and possessed of some fortune. Her money gave him a fresh start in his career; and her good sense, as well as his energy and courage, no doubt made a most important element of his future success. The young man built him a vessel, and engaged in commerce. But he wanted a quicker turn of fortune than carrying lumber would bring him, and he determined to do, what so many have tried and so few have succeeded in—recover treasure lost in a wrecked ship. Somewhere at the bottom of the sea, in the West Indies, there were such treasures, in bullion, plate and coin, in sunken Spanish vessels, if one could find them. One such vessel he found, but the return was small. But he heard of another, and he only wanted, he believed, sufficient means to certainly recover her. He went to England, and so succeeded in arousing the King's interest in his proposed adventure, that a man-of-war, well appointed, was given him. He was gone on his first voyage two years, and came back without any treasure, but with the certain knowledge, he thought, of the exact spot where it could be found. And he also brought home a high reputation as a naval commander, for he had shown great skill and courage in quelling a formidable mutiny among his men.

That he should have been able to induce a company to second him in another attempt, is evidence of the irrepressible energy of the man. And this time he succeeded. The sunken Spanish ship was found, and she was filled with treasure. About £300,000 were recovered in bullion, coin and plate. Phips's share of this was £16,000, and a gold cup of the value of £1,000, which was given to his wife by the Duke of Albemarle, the patron of the expedition.

But he was otherwise rewarded, for the king knighted him; and the young man who a few years before was hewing ship timber in a Boston ship-yard, and learning at odd times to read and write, was wealthy and famous. He returned to New England in 1688, with the appointment of Sheriff, the duties of which office, however, he found it impossible to discharge under Gov. Andros. Two years later—both Andros and his master having been meanwhile disposed of, and war having broken out between France and England—Phips was appointed by Governor Bradstreet to lead an expedition against Port-Royal. In this he was successful. The fort was destroyed, the town plundered, the French Governor and others taken prisoners and carried to Boston. On his return, Sir William landed at various points along the coast, and the whole of Acadia was reduced to English rule. Soon after his return from this successful expedition, a larger and more important one was undertaken, for the reduction of Canada, which had been planned and decided upon at a congress of colonies which met at New York at the call of Governor Leister. This expedition was to be by land and water. Both were a total failure.

In 1691, he again went to England to interest the king in fresh projects for destroying the French power in Canada, in bringing to an end the Indian raids under the French guidance upon the eastern settlements, and to aid the agents (Increase Mather and others) in London in obtaining if possible the restoration of the old charter. He returned with the new charter as governor, in May, 1692. The stubborn friends of the old charter soon organized themselves into a party, in watchful opposition to Governor Phips. It was no doubt a factious opposition, so far as there could be any real expectation of restoring the old rule of Puritanic government. But Phips was not a man of much wisdom, of much dignity of character, nor of that experience in political affairs which sometimes suffices, in the absence of higher qualities. Phips was popular in the country where probably little was known of his overbearing temper, and his ignorance of affairs of State: In 1694, a movement for his removal had gathered so much strength that his friends in the General Court proposed an address to the king against it. The motion was carried, but it was only by a vote of twenty-six to twenty-four. But Phips's enemies at length prevailed, and he was ordered to England to answer the charges made against him. He went in 1694, and about one year after he died of a malignant fever in London.

XXXII. The Rev. Richard Gibson.

As early as 1637, Richard Gibson, an Episcopal minister, was settled upon Richmond's Island; and it is handed down by tradition, with great probability, that a church was formerly established there. He is said to have come over at the desire of Mr. Trelawny, probably from his having resided at Spurwink, near the establishment of that gentleman, and having been partly supported by him. At the close of 1640, or early in the following year, Mr. Gibson removed to Portsmouth. He is supposed to have been the first minister of that place. While at Piscataqua, he was summoned to Boston, to answer the charge of marrying and baptizing at the Isles of Shoals. The laws of the Massachusetts colony forbade the practice of these clerical duties to any of the church of England. "He being wholly addicted to the hierarchy and discipline of England," says Winthrop, "did exercise a ministerial function in the same way, and did marry and baptize at the Isle of Shoals, which was found within our jurisdiction." Mr. Gibson, moreover, had written a letter to a minister at Dover, Mr. Larkham, in which he spoke in no very respectful terms of the Massachusetts government, denying their title in those parts, and thereby disaffecting the people. For these heinous offences, on presenting himself at Boston he was committed to custody, in which he continued several days, till at length he made a full acknowledgment of all he was charged with, and submitted himself to the favor of the court; but being a stranger and about to depart from the country he was discharged without any fine or punishment. These circumstances occurred in 1642.

XXXIII. The Rev. Robert Jordan.

The Rev. Robert Jordan, who succeeded Gibson, was one of the most prominent and influential gentlemen in the early annals of western Maine. He came to this country in the summer of 1640, and was then a surety for S. Purchase, at which time he was twenty-nine years old. In 1641, he was one of the referees between Winter and Cleaves, from which fact it seems that he was not then married to Winter's daughter. He probably came in one of Mr. Trelawny's regular traders to Richmond's Island. Edward Godfrey, the first settler of York, and for some time governor of the western part of the state, who was long associated with Jordan as a magistrate, speaks of him in a letter to the government at home, March 14, 1660, as having long experience in the country, "equal with any in Boston;" and adds, "an orthodox divine of the church of England, and of great parts and estate. He was conceded by all to be an active, enterprising man, placed by education above the mass of the people with whom he connected himself." These early clergymen, Gibson and Jordan, probably divided their Sunday ministrations between the Spurwink and Casco settlements and Saco. We find the Church Point mentioned in the boundaries of an estate at Winter Harbor in 1642; it is quite probable, therefore, that a small church was erected there. The government of Massachusetts was certainly influenced by a sincere desire to reform the morals of the people, and to preserve purity of worship. They earnestly desired that all the ordinances of religion should be strictly observed; but it may well be doubted whether by their own rigid discipline and exclusive zeal, they did not do injustice to their liberal professions and to the cause which they were earnest to promote. Many of the early settlers were Episcopalians; Jordan was a priest of that persuasion, and had been the minister to the people for many years; and although new settlers crowded into the plantations from Massachusetts, bringing the religious doctrines that prevailed there, still the attachment of many to the mode of worship under which they had been educated was not and could not be eradicated; and notwithstanding the guaranty of Massachusetts, in the sixth article of agreement, "that civil privileges should not be forfeited for religious differences," she did proceed to enforce her own doctrines, regardless of the religious principles which prevailed in this part of Maine.

The following injunction against Jordan, adopted by the general court in October, 1660, does not seem to aim at any corruption or immorality, but only at the form under which the ordinance of baptism was administered.

"Whereas it appears to this court by several testimonies of good repute, that Mr. Robert Jordan did, in July last, after exercises were ended on the Lord's day, in the house of Mrs. Macworth, in the town of Falmouth, then and there baptize three children of Nath'l Wallis, of the same town, to the offence of the government of this Commonwealth; this court judging it necessary to bear witness against such irregular practises, do therefore order that the secretary, by letter in the name of this court, require him to desist from any such practises for the future, and also that he appear before the next General Court to answer what shall be laid against him for what he hath done for the time past."

The exercise of this exclusive sectarian spirit by the colony had been successfully employed against them, by their enemies in England, after the restoration of Charles; and the King in his letters to the government, and in his instructions to the commissioners, insists upon a reformation and a more liberal practice in that particular. This order was treated with a dexterity which that government ever exercised in its negotiations with the home government, and was evaded in a manner that did not seem openly to violate the king's commands, while no material relief was afforded to those who were oppressed by the existing laws. But this policy was alike ineffectual; the spirit of hostility existed, and was cherished by a power near the throne, which procured in 1664 the appointment of four persons by the king, with power to settle the peace and security of the country. This commission was procured by the earnest solicitation of the proprietors of Maine and New Hampshire, supported by the exertions of all the enemies of Massachusetts, and was aimed at the power and influence of that colony.

Two of the commissioners, Col. Richard Nichols and Col. George Cartwright, arrived at Boston July 23, 1664, and Sir Robert Carr and Samuel Maverick about the same time at Piscataqua (Portsmouth). With the latter came John Archdale, an agent of Gorges, with authority to superintend the affairs of his Province. John Jocelyn, who was then residing with his brother Henry at Black Point, speaking of the commissioners, adds, "with them came one Mr. Archdale, as agent for Mr. F. Gorges, who brought to the Colony in the Province of Maine, Mr. Gorges's order from Charles II., under his manual, and his Majesty's letter to Massachusetts, to be restored unto the quiet possession and enjoyment of the same province in New England and the government thereof; the which, during the civil wars in England, the Massachusetts colony had usurped, and most shamefully encroached upon Mr. Gorges's rights and privileges." The letter from the King above referred to is dated June 11, 1664, but the commissioners did not visit Maine until June, 1665. Mr. Archdale, upon his arrival into the Province, immediately commenced using his authority. He granted commissions to Henry Jocelyn of Black Point, Robert Jordan of Spurwink, Francis Neal of Casco, and to persons in every other town in the Province, who by virtue thereof undertook to conduct public affairs independently of Massachusetts. Jocelyn, Jordan, Archdale and Edward Rishworth addressed a letter to the Governor and Council of Massachusetts in 1664, requiring them to surrender the government to Mr. Gorges or his commissioners, according to his Majesty's pleasure, signified in his letter of June 11, 1664. To this application the answer was: the council assembled do declare that the lands in the county of York, by them called the province of Maine, were and are claimed as part of the patent granted to Massachusetts, which patent precedes the patent granted to Sir F. Gorges, otherwise the council may not give up the interest of the colony without the consent of the General Court.

Among the complaints against Massachusetts, made to the King's commissioners in 1665, the following are noticed: "They will not admit any who is not a member of the church to communion, nor their children to baptism. They did imprison and barbarously use Mr. Jordan for baptizing children, as himself complained in his petition to the commissioners."

In September, 1659, Edward Rishworth, of York, appears as representative of Scarborough, but he was probably selected by the two towns; it was not then required by law that the deputy should reside in the town which he represented. Next year Henry Jocelyn, of Scarborough, was chosen deputy; after that neither town seems to have been represented until 1663, when Mr. Cleaves is chosen, and again the next year. They are unrepresented from this year until 1669, during which time the authority of Massachusetts over the Province was suspended. In 1670, Francis Neal is chosen deputy. He is the last from Scarborough or Falmouth to the General Court of Massachusetts, until the organization of the government under the charter of 1691.

In June, 1675, King Philip's war commenced in Plymouth Colony. The English on Kennebec River received the first information of the movements of the Indians about Mount Hope, the seat of Philip, their chief sachem, July 11th. When the Indians learned the English wished to disarm them, fear and jealousy were aroused, and they began to suspect that it was the object of the English to deprive them of the means of subsistence, and by degrees to drive them from the soil. In the beginning of September, about twenty Indians attacked the house of Thomas Purchase, an ancient settler of Pegypscot Falls (now Brunswick); the war was general after this. They next visited the house of Thomas Wakely of Falmouth; they killed Mr. Wakely and his wife, his son John and wife, with three of their children, and carried one daughter Elizabeth, about 11 years old, into captivity. The number of houses burnt cannot be ascertained. The last attack was probably confined to the vicinity of Capisic; and we have no notice of any houses having been burnt but Wakely's, those at Capisic, and Robert Jordan's at Spurwink. At what time the attack was made on Spurwink, we nowhere find an account, but Mr. Jordan had barely time to escape from his dwelling-house, when it was destroyed with all its contents. It is estimated that from the beginning of August to the end of November, 1675, there were killed in the province about fifty English and over ninety Indians. Mr. Jordan removed to Great Island (now Newcastle), at the mouth of the Piscataqua, then a part of Portsmouth, where four years after he died at the age of 68 years.

XXXIV. Jordan's Estate.

In 1648, three years after John Winter's death, his plantation and all its appurtenances were awarded to Robert Jordan, as heir and administrator of John Winter, by a decree of the general assembly of Lygonia, to secure the payment of a claim which Winter's estate had upon the proprietors. Sarah, the only daughter of John Winter, was the wife of the Rev. Robert Jordan.

He presented his claim to the court of Lygonia in September, 1648.

A committee was appointed by the court to examine the accounts and make a report. This committee went into a minute investigation and reported in detail, upon which order was passed authorizing Jordan to retain all the goods, lands, cattle and chattels belonging to Robert Trelawny, deceased, within this province, from this day forward and forever, unless the executors of said Robert Trelawny shall redeem and release them by the consent and allowance of the said Robert Jordan or his heirs.

XXXV. Jordan's Petition in 1648.

To the right honorable Alexander Rigby, President, Mr. George Cleaves, Deputy President, together with the whole body of the General Assembly of the Province of Lygonia, assembled this 12th day of September, 1648, your petitioner sheweth:—

Whereas he hath, by the order of the authority here estated, endeavoured to the utmost to accomplish the last Testament of Mr. John Winter, deceased, for the satisfying of whose legacies he hath emptied himself of his proper estate, the mostness of which the said John Winter his estate lieth in the hands of the executors of Mr. Robert Trelawny, and hath been by them detained for these many years. Notwithstanding, the deceased John Winter did in his life time press them for an accompt, as likewise hath your Petitioner, by divers swasive letters, and the mediation of friends addressed unto them, for the pass of accompts and rectifying of former proceeds, the distance of place allowing him no other means to that end; yet still he is left without hope of any timous recovery of the said estate; neither can he so much as receive a letter from them, but is made to know that their intentions in appearance, are to deprive your Petitioner of what he hath in his hands, in common employment with them, and so to forbear all satisfaction of dues until the heir of said Trelawny (being about seven or eight years old now) shall come to full age, which will tend to the distruction of your Petitioner and his whole family, as also to the prejudice of this growing commonwealth. Your Petitioner being desirous, if he could obtain his rights to employ his estate to the furtherance of public good, from which he is now disenabled,—your Petitioner therefore humbly craveth your serious consideration of this; his desperate condition, and that in your wisdom, you would either by yourselves, or a committee by you appointed, take an examination of the accompts betwixt them, and upon the invent thereof that you would in your care provide, that your Petitioner may have secured and sequestered unto himself and for his singular use, what he hath of the said Trelawny in his hands, or at least so much as you shall find due from your Petitioner. It being but a case of common equity that whereas you by law having engaged your Petitioner to satisfy debts and bequeathments, you should likewise see to the safeguard and procure the dutys that should make the same satisfaction for which legal favour your blessedness shall be prayed for, by your Petitioner, Robert Jordan.

September 14th, 1648. This Petition is granted by this assembly and referred to a committee of this house, viz.: Mr. George Cleaves, Mr. William Royal, Mr. Richard Foxwell, Mr. Hene. Watts; to be satt on y^e^ 10 day of October next, at Richmond's Island, to make report of the state of the thing petitioned for to this court at the next Sessions, under the hand of the Clerk of this Assembly, Peyton Cooke.

Taken out of the original,—examined and recorded, 14 August, '58, Pr. Edw. Rishworth, Re: Cor.

XXXVI. Proceedings on Jordan's Petition.

The Report of us Commissioners for the business of the Plantation at Richmond's Island, as it was taken by order the 10 day of October, and is delivered to the General Assembly this 16 December, 1648.

1. We find by an instrument bearing the 26 March, 1636, under Mr. Robert Trelawny's hand, that the full government of the plantation was by him wholly committed to Mr. John Winter.

2. We find Mr. John Winter then had one tenth part of the patent Mr. Trelawny then had or thereafter should have, and that Mr. John Winter then had the tenth of all things on the plantation, and ought to have the tenth part of all the profits that should thence arise.

3. We find that Mr. John Winter had then paid his part for what had been disbursed, and was to pay from time to time his tenth part of what should be disbursed.

4. We find that Mr. John Winter was to have out of the General forty pounds pr. annum in money, and a share for his personal care and charge.

5. We find that the whole disposing of all things was committed to Mr. John Winter, which Mr. Robert Trelawny promiseth to approve of.

6. We find that Mr. Robert Trelawny acknowledgeth to have remaining in his hands one hundred and twenty pounds of Mr. Winter's, towards the payment of his $\frac{1}{10}$ part of his disbursements on the ship Agnes and one other ship to be sent on Michaelmas following.

7. We find that Mr. Robert Trelawny promiseth to manage the business in England for the advantage of Mr. John Winter, as for his own advantage, in all things.

8. We find by an accompt under the hand of Mr. Robert Trelawny, bearing date 17th of March, 1639, that Mr. John Winter left in Mr. Robert Trelawny his hand one hundred and twenty pounds as above said, the profit of which said sum, from the 26th day of March to that time being three years, did arise to the sum of one hundred twenty and five pounds 17s. 9d. So the total due to Mr. Winter at that time was £245 17s. 9d. out of which sum Mr. Robert Trelawny doth deduct sixty-seven pounds seven shillings and eleven pence, for such sums he had in the said interim disbursed for Mr. Winter his particular accompt, so Mr. Robert Trelawny doth acknowledge there was due then unto Mr. Winter for balance of accompt, for all things in return, £178 9s. 10d.

9. We find by book of accompt left by Mr. John Winter under his hand from the year 1639 to the last of June, 1639, due unto him for wages and shares for himself and servants £178 9s. 9¼d., of which his tenth is £17 16s. 11d., so his due is £160 12s. 10¼d.

10. We find from the 24th May, '36, to the 5th June, '39, Mr. Winter did disburse for the plantation's servants £4 9s. 10d., his tenth part is nine shillings. So his due resting is £4 0s. 10d.

So the total due to Mr. Winter in March, 1639, is £343 3s. 6¼d., which said sum, according to the improvement formerly allowed by Mr. Robert Trelawny, doth and will amount from 17 March, 1639, to 17 March, 1648, to above the sum of £1393 12s. 0d.

A report of further proceeds to be added to the former:—

1. We find by letters under the hand of Mr. Robert Trelawny, on 20 July, 1639, the bark Richmond about 30 tons, improved likewise in the years aforesaid, was sent by Mr. John Winter for England, loaden with six thousand of pipe staves which cost here £8 8s. 0d. per thousand, of which staves Mr. John Winter's one tenth part is £6 14s. 3½d., and according to former improvement doth amount unto above £26 17s. 0d.

2. We find that the tenth part of the said bark and the profit by her employment doth appertain to Mr. John Winter ever since her arrival in England September, 1639, having been ever since solely employed by Mr. Robert Trelawny, which one tenth part we estimate for her hull, rigging and provision at £20, and according to improvement allowed by Mr. Robert Trelawny in former years is about £80.

3. We find by a book of accompts from 1640 to 10th of June, '41, due to Mr. John Winter £117 12s. 2d., whereof his tenth part is £11 15s. 4d., so his principal is £105 16s. 2d., which according to allowance, 10 June, 1648, ariseth to above £320.

4. We find by a book of accompts from 1641 to the last of May, 1642, due to Mr. John Winter the sum of £96 14s. 1d., whereof his one tenth part is £9 13s. 0d., so his due is £87 1s., which May last 1648, doth arise to above £176.

5. We find by the same book, due to Mr. John Winter for the supply of the ship Hercules £17 12s. 9d., which according to former allowance in May, 1648, doth arise to above £142 16s.

6. We find a certain quantity of goods delivered by Mr. John Winter from the plantation amounting to £63 10s. 2d., whereof his $\frac{1}{10}$ is £6 13s. 0d. and according to allowance is £19 19s.

7. We find by a book of accompt to the last of May, 1643, Mr. J. Winter, Dr. £31 6s. 2d., of which $\frac{1}{10}$ is £3 2s. 8d., so is due to the plantation £28 3s. 6d. toward the pay^{t} whereof we find disbursed by J. Winter £5 15s. 10d., of which his $\frac{1}{10}$ is 11s. 7d., so he hath paid £5 4s. 4d. Also we find certain goods delivered from the plantation of which Mr. Winter's $\frac{1}{10}$ is £2 3s. 1d., so having paid £7 7s. 5d. he is still Dr. for that year £20 16s. 1d.

8. We find by a book acp[t] to the last of May, 1644, Mr. Winter Cr. the sum of £230 19s. 6d., also for disbursements on the servants, £2 19s. 3d., so the whole is £233 18s. 9d. (9) We find Mr. Winter Dr. the same year, £76 17s., of which his $\frac{1}{10}$ is £7 13s. 7d., so is due to the plantation £69 3s. (10) We find that Winter is Dr. for the year 1644 and 1645 the sum of £488 16s. 7d., for which his $\frac{1}{10}$ is £48 17s. 8d., so there resteth £439 18s. 11d. (11) We find Mr. Winter is Cr. in the same book £409 11s. 8d., of which his $\frac{1}{10}$ is £40 19s. 1½d. So there is due to Mr. Winter £360 12s. 6½d. So on the balance of these years there is due Mr. Winter the sum of £64 13s. 3½d., which according to former allowances from the last of May, 1644, to the last of May, 1648, did arise to above £150 17s. 8d. (12) We find by letter from Mr. John Trelawny, one of the exr[s], that Mr. Robert Trelawny gave to Mr. J. Winter the sum of £12 in legacy, so the total since 1639 is £1393 12s. 0d.

A report of what we find by letters that R. Trelawny hath disbursed for J. Winter on his own particular acp[t].

1. We find by an invoice Mr. Trelawny disbursed £25 5s. 0d. in the year 1642, and is according to allowance £72 5s. 0d.

2. We find by letters, £3 paid to Mary Hooper by his order, 1643, and is £8.

3. We find £15 pd by letters to Mary Hooper, 1644, and is £35.

4. We find by invoice sent by Trelawny his exr[s] in the year 1644, £16 0s. 6d. Portugal money, worse by £17 in the hundred than our English, and according to allowance may be about £34.

5. A bill of exch. pd by Mr. John Holland £10, and is by allowance about £20.

According to this report, Mr John Winter is Cr.	£2322 1s. 6d.
and is Dr.	168 5s. 0d.
Remaining,	£2153 16s. 0d.

XXXVII. Goods sent by Winter to Trelawny.

A report of what we find Mr. Trelawny hath had sent unto him by John Winter since the year 1639.

(1) We find Mr. J. Winter hath sent unto him in several ships in fish merchantable and refuse, 3056½ quint. (2) Of core-fish 38½ quint. Train oil 11 hhd., fish peas 28½, which fish peas and train oil, according to price here, cannot amount to less than £2292. Also we find he hath had Mr. Winter's $\frac{1}{10}$ of the bark Richmond ever since her departure in 1639; also he hath received the whole voyage made by the Hercules, 1641; also he hath received the whole voyage made by the Margery, 1642; also he hath received the whole voyage made by the ship Hercules, 1643; also he hath had the whole employment of the ship Richmond, and received to himself all her several voyages, in all which Mr. J. Winter ought to have his part according to his interest, but hath not received. Besides his other adventures which his stock of money in Mr. Trelawny's hands, would and happily did carry on to profit, at least wise, Mr. Trelawny did engage to turn all to advantage as for himself. Also we find there is due to Mr. John Winter the one tenth ($\frac{1}{10}$) part of the ship Richmond, which in former acp^{t} is not valued, because not belonging to the Petitioner, only her employment from 1641 to 1645 belongeth to the Petitioner, and is to be added to the above acp^{t}, as in discretion it may be valued. We also find that by letters Mr. Winter desired a pass of acp^{s}, but it doth not appear that any hath been sent, only a promise from Mr. John Trelawny that they shall be sent when the peace of England is settled.

The dep. of Robert Jordan since his attorneyship deputed by J. Winter, 20 May, 1645.

The plantation Cr. from 1645 to June, 1646, £241 18s. 10d., whereof the $\frac{1}{10}$ is £24 3s. 11d., so there resteth £217 14s. 11d. The plantation Cr. from 1645 to 1st Oct. 1648, £924 3s. 8d., $\frac{1}{10}$ whereof is £92 8s. 4$\frac{1}{2}$d., so there rests £832 15s. 3$\frac{1}{2}$d. The plantation Cr. for Goods sent on particular account, £192 4s. 5d. The plantation Cr. for Goods in General, £60 3s. 0d., whereof $\frac{1}{10}$ is £6 3s. 0$\frac{1}{2}$d. The plantation is Cr. for pd. by bill of Exch. £30. £1278 17s. 8d.

Contra, Dr. from 1645 to June, 1646, £248 18s. 8d. $\frac{1}{10}$ is £24 18s. So there is resting, £224 0s. 0d. From 1646 to 10 Oct. 1648, Plantation Dr. £1152 9s. 3d., of which $\frac{1}{10}$ is £115 4s. 11$\frac{1}{4}$d., so rests £1037 4s. 3$\frac{3}{4}$d. In 1645, I sent to Bilboa, on the plantation's acp. 140 quint. of merchantable fish,—my $\frac{1}{10}$ being 14 quint. £14. Total, Dr., £1275 4s. 3$\frac{3}{4}$d. which you shall find added to the inventory. This writing was attested to by the oaths of George Cleaves and Henry Watts, 16 July, 1658, before us, Samuel Symonds, Thomas Wiggin, Nich. Shapleigh, Ed. Rishworth.

XXXVIII. Inventory of Trelawny's Property.

A true inventory of all the goods, cattle and chattles that are now on the plantation at Richmonds island and Spurwink in joint ownership between Mr. Robert Trelawny, Merchant, deceased, and Mr. John Winter, deceased, taken by Commission, this 10th Oct. A.D. 1648, and by us approved according to our knowledge and conscience.

16 July, Anno Domini, 1658, attested before us Commissioners of y^e^ General Court of the Massachusetts Governm^t^ in New England, since the change of the Governm^t^ by George Cleaves aforesaid, then Deputy president, and Henry Watts, being taken on their several oaths, y^e^ day and year last above written—

Samuel Symonds, Nicholas Shapleigh.

XXXIX. Province of Lygonia.

There was but little change until 1652–3, when the towns were annexed to Massachusetts. In the mean time the government of Lygonia was regularly organized, and the inhabitants within its limits, even those who had been the most active adherents of Gorges, quietly submitted to the new jurisdiction.

A mere fragment of the records of the General Assembly of this Province has been found, on diligent inquiry; enough to show, however, that its proceedings were conducted with great regularity.

It is in the following form:

"Petition of Robert Jordan to Alexander Rigby, President, George Cleaves, Deputy President, together with the whole body of the General Assembly of Lygonia, assembled this 22 day of September, 1648," &c. Sept. 24, 1648. This petition is granted by this Assembly and referred to a committee of this House, viz., to Mr. George Cleaves, Mr. William Royall, Mr. Richard Foxwell, Mr. Henry Watts, to be sent on the tenth of October next, at Richmond's Island, to make report of the state of things petitioned for, to this Court at the next Sessions; under the hand of the Clerk of the Assembly, Peyton Cooke."

The decree of the court founded on the report of its committee, made in December following, was adjudged legal by the Massachusetts authorities at a subsequent period.

In addition to the above, we find appended to an administration of P. Cooke on the estate of R. Williams the following approval, executed at a court holden at Black Point the last of May, 1648.

We, the judges for the Province of Lygonia, do by our authority ratify and confirm unto the said P. Cooke this abovesaid administration, according to the full tenor thereof. Witness our hands under our Provincial Seal at the day and year above written.

(Signed) G. Cleaves, H. Jocelyn, R. Jordan.

Alex. Rigby died August, 1650, and was succeeded as proprietor of Lygonia by his son, Edward Rigby. A letter is on record addressed by the latter to Jocelyn, Jordan, Macworth, Williams, as also to Robert Booth, and others who held commissions under his father, in which he states that he has been made acquainted by the late deputy president, with several miscarriages and illegal proceedings committed in his province by their instigation and advice; and he requires and commands them to desist from acting by virtue of their commissions, determined by the death of his father, until they hear further from him. He moreover declares void "all the actions done either by the deputy president, the six assistants, the judges, or any other officer whatever who had commission from his father, since his death." "I am not ignorant," he says, "of some complaints formerly made to my father by some of yourselves and others, and desire that you will be confident that I shall strive to do equal justice in all things, according to my office and duty; and to the end that equal justice may be done to all men, I shall with all convenient speed, not only send back Mr.

Cleaves, but a near kinsman of my own, with instructions to such as I shall conceive fitting." The letter is dated at London, July 19, 1652. There is no evidence that the proposed measures were taken by Edward Rigby.

XL. Inaction of the Commissioners.

They declined interfering, except to recommend to Governor Winthrop to write in his own name to the officers of Gorges's government, advising an acknowledgment of Rigby's authority.

On reaching Casco, Cleaves distributed commissions, and summoned a court at that place, in the name of the Lord Proprietor and President of the Province of Lygonia. The counsellors of Maine forthwith called a general court at Saco, and protested against these proceedings. The plough patent, they insisted, was effectually revoked by the royal charter of 1640, which conveyed, without reserve, the territory and jurisdiction of the whole province to Sir Ferdinando Gorges, thereby disannulling all former grants, at least so far as related to the exercise of the powers of government.

The inhabitants were divided on the question, but we have reason to suppose that the claims of Gorges were generally favored. Cleaves at last proposed to refer the subject to the decision of the Massachusetts Colony, well knowing to which side they would lean, when the dispute was between a republican dissenter or puritan, and a zealous royalist. R. Tucker was the bearer of this proposition to the council at Saco, by whom he was treated as a disturber of the peace, and arrested; but on giving bonds to appear at the next court at that place, and for his good behavior in the interim, he was set at liberty.

Cleaves next presented a petition signed by about thirty persons, to the Massachusetts General Court, soliciting their aid to maintain the authority of Rigby. Mr. Vines, with a letter from an equal number of the inhabitants, went himself to Boston to obtain support. But that wary government, ever watchful of its own interests, had already conceived the idea of pushing its own limits into the heart of Maine, and resolved not to interfere. The dispute was then referred to the commissioners for foreign plantations in England. While it was pending there, the court of assistants at Boston consented to grant the parties a hearing, that an end might be put to the contention until the final decision was received from the commissioners. Messrs. Jocelyn and Robinson, on the part of Gorges, and Messrs. Cleaves and Tucker, on the other side, repaired thither; but no other result was produced than a recommendation to both parties to live peaceably until they heard from England. This was in 1646; the same year, the decision of the commissioners was declared in favor of the claims of Mr. Rigby.

Thus terminated the jurisdiction of Gorges over the towns included in the province of Lygonia. The last general court under his authority, of which we find a record, was holden at Wells, July, 1646, by H. Jocelyn, Deputy Governor, Capt. R. Bonighton and E. Godfrey. At length, in 1649, the inhabitants of Piscataqua, Gorgeana, and Wells, having received intelligence of the death of the lord proprietor, and having in vain written to his heirs to ascertain their wishes, formed a combination for the exercise of the powers of government according to the laws of their native country. Mr. Godfrey was chosen Governor; the style Province of Maine being still retained.

XLI. Further Attempts to Settle the Government.

The return of the commission of the General Court of Massachusetts Bay, authorized & appointed to settle civil government in the Eastern parts, to the utmost extent of their line, as appears by commission granted them bearing date y^{e} 20th May, 1658, Commission, York, Black Point, Blue Point, Spurwink, Casco Bay, &c. In reference whereunto the Petitioners aforesaid whose names are here subscribed according to order & trust therein committed, did repair unto the Eastern parts and York, did adjourn the Court unto the house of Mr. Robert Jordan at Spurwink, sending out summons to all the inhabitants within the line proposed, the time to appear personally before them, which the major part thereof attended, and after some several reports of matters before us, removal of some doubts and our tendering of some acts, favors & priveleges to them, the good hand of God aiding therein, by assent & consent, we mutually accorded in free and comfortable close as doth more fully appear by the following: We the inhabitants of Black Point, Blue Point, Spurwink, and Casco Bay, with all the Islands thereunto belonging, do come and acknowledge ourselves to be subjects of the government of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, as appeareth by our particular subscription, as reference to their several articles formally granted unto Dover, Kittery, and York, which are now granted unto us, together with same articles as upon Record doth appear.

Names.

6. That the civil privilege now granted to them here does not intend shall be forfeited upon differences in matters of religion, but the regulations therein must be according to pœnal laws.

7. Those places that were formerly called Black Point, Blue Point, & Islands adjacent shall henceforth be called by ye name of Scarborough, the bounds of which towne on the Western side beginneth where the towne of Saco endeth, & so doth run along on the Western side of the River of Spurwink eight miles back into the country.

8. That those places formerly called Spurwink & Casco Bay from the harbor side of Spurwink River to Clapboard Islands in Casco Bay, shall run back eight miles into the Country, and henceforth shall be called by the name of Falmouth.

9. That the towns of Scarborough & Falmouth shall have a Commissioners' Court to try causes as high as fifty pounds.

10. That those two towns of Scarborough & Falmouth shall by a survey take an effectual course to bound themselves between this time & the next court holden for this county, whereunto they are to make their returnes or upon their neglect thereof the county can & shall appoint commissions for the bounding of them.

11. That these two towns of Scarborough & Falmouth are to send one Deputy yearly to the court of Elections, & have liberty for two Deputies if they see cause in court.

Given under our hands July the 14th 1658.

Whereas the county of Yorkshire is large & very remote from Boston, the place where the general court & council of this Commonwealth of Massachusetts do usually assemble, whereby it is more difficult to obtain the present help of any of the assistants of the government as occasion from time to time doth require, we therefore, the Commissioners of the General Court, considering the necessitye of a constant supply, until the General Court take further order therein, do grant and order as followeth:

1. That with the consent of the inhabitants of the aforesaid towns of Scarborough & Falmouth, we do consent & appoint the right Henry Jocelyn Esq., Mr. Robert Jordan, Mr. George Cleaves, Mr. Henry Watts, and Francis Neal, Commissioners for the year ensuing, invested wth full power or any three of them for a tryale of all causes (wthout a Jury) wthin the limits of Scarborough or Falmouth not exceeding the value of 50£ and every one of the sayd Commissioners have granted them magistratall power to hear & determine small causes.

As other magistrates assistants have, whether they be of civil or criminal nature, any of the sayd commissioners may grant warrants, Summons, & Executions if needed & required, & have power to examine offenders & commit to prison except bail be tendered according to law. Also any three of the sayd commissioners have power to impower Military Officers under the degree of a Capt. The said commissioners are required to enjoyne each town to procure a booke of laws, also any of the sayd commissioners have power to minister oathes according to law & if they judge needful to bind offenders to the peace & good behaviour or to Solemnize marriage according to law. Any three of the commission have also power to receive in all such persons living wthin our lyne as between this present tyme & the last such shall come in by their voluntary subscriptions, our meaning is, that they should not be barred from having the Privileges that their neighbors enjoy by occasion of their necessary absence at y^{e} court.

2. That when county courts are called, & though Providence hindering that there are none of the assistants present at York or elsewhere, that the sayd court shall still proceed & the acts thereof shall be valid notwithstanding, the associates of the county or any three of them at least being present.

3. We do order that the associates chosen for this county or any three of them shall have full power (wthout Jury) to try any such civil action as shall not exceed the value of sixty pounds.

4. It is hereby ordered for the easing of charges & trouble in this county being so remote from the exercise of authoritye in some considerable cases, that the three commissioners or more in each town in this county shall have full power to grant letters of administration, to receive probate of wills, to order such estates as county courts have power to do in the like cases, provided when any such acts are put forth by the three commissioners of Scarborough & Falmouth, Mr. Henry Jocelyn or Mr. Robert Jordan are to be one of the three: for Saco, & Cape Porpus, Capt. Nicholas Shapleigh to be one: for Wills, Mr. Abraham Preble to be one. Wee do likewise grant the towne commissioners of

Yorke & Kittery to have the same power therein: and these particulars generally, Mr Henry Jocelyn, Mr Robert Jordan, Capt Nicholas Shapleigh, Mr Edward Rishworth or Mr Abraham Preble, or either of them shall have magistratall power throughout the whole county of Yorke, shall for this year ensuing untill others are chosen and sworn in their places and the county courts from tyme to tyme have power to grant & renew licenses for ordinarys, for selling of wine & strong water, & for keeping of houses of entertainment according to lawe.

5. And whereas henceforth there will be need of more associates for county courts then formerly wee doe give power & order that there shall be five chosen yearly, whereas there was but three before, and that they may keepe a county court at Saco & Scarborough as at Yorke in the month of September yearly, provided that the day and place be agreed upon under the hand of three of the associates at least, signified to the record of the county, so that he may give due notice thereof unto the several towns six weeks before the sayd court at the least.

JORDAN MEMORIAL.

THE REV. ROBERT JORDAN.

Richmond's Island lies about four miles from Black Point (now Scarborough), Maine, and one mile from the mouth of the Spurwink River, between Cape Elizabeth and Scarborough. It is three miles in circumference, having a gravelly ford on the north side, passable at low water, between the main land and the island, and contains about two hundred acres of land. One Walter Bagnal settled upon this island in 1628, and lived there three years, during which time he accumulated about £400, mostly in goods, through trade with the Indians, by whom he was murdered Oct. 3, 1631.* This occupation by Bagnal was the first attempt to establish a plantation within the limits of ancient Falmouth. He had undisturbed possession for three years (see p. 22).

Dec. 1, 1631, the Council of Plymouth, England, granted to Robert Trelawny and Moses Goodyear, merchants of Plymouth, a tract of land lying between Cammock's Patent (Scarborough) and Casco Bay and River, and extending northward into the main land as far as the limits and bounds of the lands of Capt. Thomas Cammock. This patent included Falmouth (Cape Elizabeth) and Richmond's Island. Spurwink River lies between Scarborough and Cape Elizabeth. One John Winter, an agent for Robert Trelawny, took possession of the land described by the patent, and settled upon Richmond's Island. He kept a trading

* In a newspaper of 1855, it is stated among the news items that while some workmen were digging in a field in Richmond's Island, they turned up a jar containing gold and silver coins. There were seventeen of the gold, of the denomination of £1 each, and bore the dates of James I. and Charles I. These coins were doubtless placed there for safe keeping by some of the early occupants of the island, very possibly Bagnal, during some of the alarms of that period.

house, bought furs of the Indians, and dried fish upon the island, having at one time sixty men employed in the fishery business, and four ships which were loaded at the island with fish, oil, furs and pipe-staves, for voyages to England and Spain.

The Rev. Richard Mather, on his passage from England in 1635, touched at Richmond's Island, and noted the fact in his Journal as follows:

"Munday morning y^e^ wind still continuing agt us, wee came to ancre at Richmonds Iland, in y^e^ east part of N. E.; y^e^ bay of Massachusets whither wee were bound lying thirty leagues distant from us to y^e^ west. O^r^ seamen were willing here to cast ancre, partly because y^e^ wind was agt us, and partly because of necessity they must come to ancre to take in a Pilot somewhere before wee came to y^e^ bay, by reason y^t^ o^r^ pilot knew y^e^ harbors no further but to the Ile of shoales. When wee came within sight of y^e^ Iland y^e^ planters (or rather fishers, for their chief employment was fishing) there beeing but two familyes and about 40 persons were sore afraid of us; doubting lest wee had beene French come to pillage y^e^ Iland, as Penobscots had beene served by them about ten days before. When wee were come to ancre, and their feare was past, there came some of y^m^ aboard to us in y^r^ shallops, and wee went some of us ashoare into y^e^ Iland, to looke for fresh water and grasse for o^r^ cattell; and y^e^ planters bade us welcome, and gave some of us courteous entertaynement in y^r^ houses."

Mr. Thomas Willet, of New Plymouth, afterwards Mayor of New York, had, just before the time of Mather's visit, taken refuge at Richmond's Island, having been driven by the French from Penobscot, and he took passage in the ship with Mather for Massachusetts.

In 1637 the Rev. Richard Gibson settled upon the island, as an Episcopal clergyman; but on account of opposition from the Massachusetts government, he left the country about the year 1642 (see p. 47). It is supposed there was a small church on the island, and another at Winter Harbor, about fifteen miles distant.

Mr. Winter, who had hitherto acted as agent for Trelawny, became part owner in 1639, and was entrusted with the whole management of the business, which was successfully carried on until 1644, when Mr. Trelawny, who had never visited his possessions in America, died in England. From that time the enterprise at Richmond's Island languished for want of capital, Winter holding legal possession of all the property.

As early as 1641, the Rev. Robert Jordan, a clergyman of the Church of England, was established at Richmond's Island as successor of Mr. Gibson. The precise time of his coming over is not known, nor the place of his nativity in England, but it is probable he came in 1639, from Dorsetshire or Devonshire, the hive from which so many of our settlers came, and where the Jordan name is quite common. The name Jordan, as it is here written, exists in England, Ireland and Wales; and there are also families who spell it Jordaine, Jordayne, Jorden, Jordin, Jordon. The Jordan who first settled in Wales was of Anglo-Norman origin, one of the companions of Martine de Tours in the time of the conquest. A Robert Jordan married a Cokers in Blandford, county of Dorset, and had Robert Jordan, who became a merchant in Melcomb, also of Dorsetshire, and who married, it is supposed, into the Fitzpen or Phippen family. Their coat of arms was nine daggers on a shield, a lion rampant in the centre, etc. The Dorsetshire and Somersetshire families have on their shields a lion rampant; the Wiltshire family have a bent arm holding a dagger. The residence of the Rev. Robert Jordan in New England may have attracted the Phippens to the same place.

In a letter from Winter to Trelawny, dated Richmond's Island, August 2, 1641, he thus speaks of the Rev. Mr. Jordan:

"Heare is on Mr. Robert Jordan, a mynister, w^{ch} hath bin wth vs this 3 moneths, w^{ch} is a very honest religious man by anything as yett I can find in him. I have not yett agreed wth him for stayinge heare but did refer y^{t} tyll I did heare som word from you; we weare long w^{t}hout a mynister & weere but in a bad way & so we shall be still iff we have not the word of God taught vnto us. Somtymes the plantation at pemequid would willingly have him or the[y] desire he might be their on halfe of the yeare & the other halfe to be heare wth vs. I know not how we shall accord uppon y^{t} as yett he hath bin heare in the country this 2 yeares & hath alwaies lived wth Mr. Purchase w^{ch} is a kinsman unto him."

Rev. Robert Jordan married, at Richmond's Island, Sarah, only child of Mr. John Winter; and on the death of Mr. Winter, in 1645, Jordan was made the administrator of the estate. By his marriage with Sarah Winter, Mr. Jordan became one of the great land-proprietors and wealthy men of that region; "a source of influence," says a writer, "which he failed not to exert in favor of his church and politics." In 1648, he petitioned the General Court to allow him, as administrator, to sell the property of Trelawny, and settle up the estate of Mr. Winter. His request was granted, and Mr. Jordan afterwards removed from the island, and settled on the main-land portion of the estate of Mr. Winter. The plantation there was called Spurwink, a name which has been retained to the present day. It lies in Falmouth, now Cape Elizabeth.

The writer of an article in the New-England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. xiii. p. 221, says of Mr. Robert Jordan:—"This gentleman and Rev. Richard Gibson were the pioneers of Episcopacy in Maine. Mr. Gibson left the country about the year 1642, but Jordan remained at the post of duty, and never relinquished his stand as a churchman or his professional character. It is one of the strange omissions in Rev. Dr. Sprague's Annals of the American Pulpit,—an appropriate memoir of so distinguished and faithful a churchman. He was the soul of the opposition to Massachusetts, and a chief supporter to the Royal Commissioners and the anti-Puritan polity. It is much to be desired that the Hon. Wm. Willis, of Portland, out of his abundant knowledge, would furnish a fitting tribute to the memory of this indefatigable missionary and leader of the forlorn hope of Episcopacy in Maine."

Owing to his religious affinities and associations, Mr. Jordan was an object of suspicion and hostility to the Puritan government of Massachusetts, who forbade him to marry or baptize. He paid no attention to this order, and, continuing to discharge the duties of his office, the General Court of Massachusetts ordered his arrest and imprisonment in Boston jail. This occurred twice, namely, in 1654 and in 1663. His petition for release, written while in jail during the latter year, is still extant, and a heliotype facsimile of the original is here presented. The following is a literal reading of the document:

Mr. Jordan was Judge, or one of the Judges, for many years. In the second Indian war he was compelled to leave Spurwink, and to flee from the Indians. He left his home hurriedly, and probably left all his papers in his house. Everything was in flames before he was out of sight. This may account for the fact that so few of his papers have ever been found. He went to Great Island, in Piscataqua River (now New Castle), then a part of Portsmouth, N. H. Many other persons were at the same time driven from Falmouth, who, like Mr. Jordan, did not return.

As showing the elevation of Robert Jordan above the ignorance and superstition of the age in which he lived, a few extracts from an article in the New-England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. xiii. p. 193, entitled "Witchcraft in Maine," will not be out of place:

"The gleaner after Willis or Williamson in the history or antiquities of Maine is not likely to gather 'handfuls,' as did Ruth in the field of Boaz; but there is a story of the primitive days of Casco Bay—an episode—not unworthy of consideration perhaps, though unnoticed by those venerable pioneers in Maine history. * * * * "

"In the list of authorities cited by the historian of Maine, we do not find a very rare work which we have lately seen for the first time. Its title we give below,* because it shows the views of the learned and good at that period on a subject which had absorbed and distracted the public—every mind—with anguish.

* "A Modest Enquiry | Into the Nature of | WITCHCRAFT | AND | How Persons Guilty of that Crime | may be Convicted: And the means | used for their Discovery Discussed, | both Negatively and Affirmatively, according to SCRIPTURE and | EXPERIENCE. | —— | By JOHN HALE, | Pastor of the Church of Christ in Beverly, | Anno Domini, 1697 | —— | "

"An anecdote narrated in this volume well illustrates the striking influence which a single event, or one word from a wise man's lips, may sometimes exert on the character and history of a community; and Maine may, perhaps, attribute her exemption from the witchcraft madness that blasted other communities to the intelligence and decision of the Rev. Robert Jordan of Spurwink, Maine, in suppressing the delusion at the outset, at the first attempt to practise this villany in that Province.

"We give the incident narrated by Mr. Hale, in his own words, and with his appropriate reflection that 'we must be very circumspect lest we be deceived by human knavery, as happened in a case nigh Richmond Island, circiter Anno, 1659.'

"'One Mr. Thorpe, a drunken Preacher, was gotten in to Preach at Black point under the appearance and profession of a minister of the Gospel, and boarded at the house of Goodman Bayly, and Baylye's wife observed his conversation to be contrary to his calling, gravely told him his way was contrary to the Gospel of Christ, and desired him to reform his life, or leave her house. So he departed from the house, and turned her enemy, and found an opportunity to do her an injury: and it so fell out that Mr. Jordan of Spurwink had a cow died, and about that time Goody Bayly had said she intended such a day to travel to Casco-Bay. Mr. Thorpe goes to Mr. Jordan's man or men, and saith the cow was bewitched to death, and if they would lay the carcass in a place he should appoint, he would burn it and bring the witch: and accordingly the cow is laid by the path that led from Black Point to Casco, and set on fire that day Goody Bayly was to travel that way, and so she came by while the carcass was in burning, and Thorpe had her questioned for a witch: But Mr. Jordan interposed in her behalf: and said his cow dyed by his servants negligence, and to cover their own fault they were willing to have it imputed to witchcraft; and Mr. Thorpe knew of Goody Baylyes intended Journey, and orders my servants (said he), without my approbation, to burn my Cow in the way where Bayly is to come; and so unriddled the knavery and delivered the innocent.' * * * *"

"The infamy was averted by the common sense and courage of Robert Jordan. We must attribute it, not to Jordan's education or associations, but solely to his own clear-headed common sense—his native discernment. If we wonder at and commiserate the fatuity which clouded the wisdom and genius of Bacon, the learning of Browne, and the judgment and benevolence of Hale, against whom such records remain, shall we not gratefully recognize and dwell upon the sagacity and prudence of Jordan, who thus averted the abomination once and forever, and thus stands out so luminous amid the gloom which bewildered the first intellects and best hearts of those times!

"The event was soon forgotten, but not so evanescent was its silent force, so beneficently and permanently affecting the people; and we form a higher idea of the man—we concede to him, as the man of wisdom, the deliverer from evil, a dignity which could never attach to merely the steady adherent and vigorous defender of a particular polity, or the powerful Lord of Spurwink."

For more than thirty years Rev. Robert Jordan occupied a large share in the affairs of the town and of the province. He was an active, enterprising man, and well educated. Although, being a presbyter of the Church of England, he came hither as a religious teacher, the affairs of the world in which he lived and the achievement of his ambitious designs appear soon to have absorbed the most of his attention, and to have diverted him from the exercise of his profession—a result originating and hastened doubtless by the hostility of the government. His posterity, for many years, exercised very great influence in the concerns of the town, and long maintained a high standing in the province. A descendant in the ninth generation now lives on the old plantation.

Rev. Robert Jordan, the progenitor of the race of Jordans in America, ended his active and eventful life at Portsmouth, N. H., in 1679, in the 68th year of his age. His will was made at Great Island, in Piscataqua River, Jan. 28, and proved July 1, 1679. He had lost the use of his hands before his death, and was unable to sign his will. He left six sons, all born before 1664, among whom his immense landed estate was divided, according to the provisions of his will, which follows. His wife Sarah survived him, and was living at Newcastle, in Portsmouth Harbor, in 1686.

WILL OF REV. ROBERT JORDAN.

In the name of God, amen.

I, Robert Jordan, senior, gentle[m]: formerly of Spurwinke, and now resident on the Great Island in the township of Portsmouth, in New England, being weak of body but of sound and perfect memory, praysed be God,—Do make, ordayne, and declare this present writing to be and remayne my last, undoubted Will and Testament, in manner and forme following:

Imps.—I bequeath my soule to God, hopeing by the meritts of Christ my Saviour, to enjoy eternal life, and my body to y^e^ earth to bee decently buried.—And what temporall things I am blessed with all by y^e^ providence of Almighty God, I give and bequeath as followeth:

Item.—I do hereby ratify, allow and confirme two deeds or writings, which I formerly made and gave under my hand and seale, one to my elldest sonn John Jordan, and another to my second sonn Robert Jordan, according to the contents y'rin exprest.

Item.—I give and grant to my wife, Saraih Jordan, now living, the ould plantation at Spurwinke, containing one thousand acres, bee it more or less, beginning where the grant belonging to my sonn John Jordan doth end, and ending where the lott bequeathed by this my will to my 3^d^ sonn, Dominicus Jordan, doth begine, and soe along the highway untill you come to the Great Pond; for and during the terme of her natural life; the reversion and inheritance y'rof to bee and remaine unto my youngest sonn, Jeremiah Jordan, his heyers and successors forever, as his part and portion.

Item.—I give and bequeath unto my sayd wife, Saraih Jordan, one other farme, called Nonnsuch, containing two thousand acres, be it more or less, for and during her naturall life; and for y^e^ more strict obleighing my children's duty to her, my will is that shee wholly and absolutely dispose the succession and inheritance thereof, to either or any of my sonns, they or their or any of their heyres, or issue, lawfully by them or any of them begotten, forever.

Item.—I give and bequeath unto my sonn, Dominicus Jordan, one thousand acres of land, at Spurwinke, to begin where the abovesd ould plantation endeth, as hee shall make choyce of, to be layd out by the overseers hereafter nominated.

Item.—I give and bequeath unto my sonn Jedediah Jordan, one thousand acres of my land at Spurwinke aforesaid, to bee chosen by him out of my land not disposed before, to bee to the use of him and his heyres, forever.

Item.—I give and bequeath unto my sonn Samuel Jordan, by reason of his posterity's choyce, eleaven hundred acres of land of my sayd land at Spurwinke, to bee to the use of him and his heyres, forever; and what part or p'rcell of land remaynes not bequeathed nor given of my sayd lands at Spurwinke, by any or all of the above rescited and expressed articles, I do hereby give and bequeath the same, being uplands, unto my sonns above named, to be divided and equally alloted amongst them.

Item.—My will is that my meddow, bordering along by the river Spurwinke, bee equally divided to each portion of the above given lands nearest and most conveniently adjoyning to each p'rcell or portion as is above disposed.

Item.—I give and bequeath unto my four youngest sonns, namely, Dominicus, Jedediah, Samuel and Jeremiah Jordan, to each of them one feather bedd and bowlsters.

Item.—I make and ordayne my sayd wife Saraih, and my too sonns John and Robert Jordan, to be my joynt executors.

I make and hereby ordayne Major Nicho. Shapleigh of Kittery, Mr. Nath'l Fryer and Mr. William Bickham, merchants, to bee overseeres and to end all differences in any matters arising, by means of my not fully expressing myselfe in this my last will and testament, between my legatees and the executors hereof, and to settle all things according to their best judgments, and nearest intent of this my will that noe further or future differences may arise.

Lastly—My will and intent is, that each and every of my aforementioned sonns, their heyres and successors shall have and enjoy all and singular the aforesayd prescribed grants, gyfts and legacies; and if any or either of them want naturall issue, that then that legacy shall redown and bee equally divided amongst the rest.

Great Island, 28th of January, 1678: Mr. Robert Jordan, senior, acknowledged this within written, to bee his last Will and Testament, and was at the same tyme of a sound mind and perfect memory, but haveing lost the use of his hands could not sign and seale the same; and owned alsoe Mr. Nath'l Fryer to bee one of his overseeres, who is interlined above. This owned before mee, Jordaine.

From "Fitzpen or Phippen and Allied Families," by George D. Phippen.

A lion rampant between nine crosses crosslet fitchée. Jordaine or Jordan of Dorsetshire, arms described by Burke and others are, "Azure semée de crosses crosslet, a lion rampant or," which arms are said to have been used as early as Edward I. Hutchins, in his History of Dorset, says: "The Jordans were an ancient family in Dorsetshire, and occur very early in Coker-Fome, at Frome-Whitefield, where they had some interest, about 1400. Their arms, similar to those here described, are quartered with Trenchard —— and Mohun, upon the painted glass windows of the ancient Manor House of Wolveton, long since in ruins, but, for the time when it was built, one of the grandest in England. These windows are its noblest remaining ornament, and contain almost a complete pedigree of the family. Wolveton or Wolverton Manor lies about eight miles from Weymouth; John Jordain, its ancient owner, was escheator of the county, the 5th of Henry IV., and his name occurs in a list of gentlemen the 12th of Henry VI. He bought this place of John Mohun and Alice his daughter, heir to Henry Trenchard of Hampshire. John, son of this John of Wolveton, married Christie, one of the heiresses of John Chantmarle, by whom the manors of East Stoke, Beltwale, and Stoke Hyde, near Blanford, or part of them, accrued to the Jordaines. This John granted John Wells, Clerk, land in Weymouth and other places. By our record, "Robt. Fitzpen, or Fippen, of Weymouth," son of John and grandson of Henry of Devon, married Cecilie Jordan, daughter of Thomas Jordan, Sept. 18, 1580, and had a daughter, Cecilie, who was baptized March 10, 1593.*

Thomas Jordan was probably son of Robert, merchant, of Melcomb, brother of Henry, and grandson of Robert Jordaine who married ..... Cokers of Blanford. Blanford lies 24 miles from Melcomb. John Coker, who died 1685, wrote a history or survey of Dorset. The parish records of Melcomb-Regis state that Robert Jordan was buried there, Oct. 12, 1589. Other members of the Dorset family are mentioned by Hutchins—as John Jordan, who held land at Weymouth in 1440; John Jurdeyne, member of Parliament, 1553; Richard Jordain, Mayor of Melcomb, 1596; William, who in 1575 made the gift of a musket to the Grand Fleet then fitting out from England. Another William, or perhaps the same, of West Truro, in 1611 published a work on the Creation and the Deluge; also, in 1611, he wrote a manuscript of Interludes in the Cornish language. A hill in Weymouth is called after the family, "Jordan's Hill." Lower, in his History of Surnames, says the name Jordan is known to have been borrowed from the famous river of that name in Palestine.

It is certain that both of the names by which the city of Portland, Maine, has been known, originated from the strong attachment of its early settlers to places bearing those names in the land of their birth. This we think is manifest by the history of the families of Jordan and Phippen in the old country, before their association in Casco Bay. The name Falmouth was applied, in 1658, after an ancient sea-port which lies at the mouth of Falmouth River in Cornwall, not far from Truro. At the settlement of Cape Elizabeth, in Maine, Portland was the name applied to Bang's Island, off the coast, and to this day the promontory opposite is called Portland Head. This island, no doubt, strongly reminded such men as Joseph Phippen and Robert Jordan of the Island of Portland, which lies just without the harbor of Weymouth, in England, the home of their youth.

* Without doubt it was his connection with the Jordan family that influenced Joseph Phippen in settling at Falmouth (Portland), with the Rev. Robert Jordan. One of Jordan's first conveyances of land was made to Joseph Phippen, who with his sons carried on farming and fishing at Purpooduck and House Island.

JOHN JORDAN AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

JOHN[2] (Robert[1]), eldest son of Rev. Robert and Sarah (Winter) Jordan, was born (bapt. 1650) at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine, on the old family plantation now occupied by Rufus Emerson. On the outbreak of the Indian war, in 1675, he and the rest of his father's family were forced to fly, and removed to Great Island in Piscataqua River, then a part of Portsmouth, now New Castle, N. H. In 1677 or 1678, he married at Portsmouth, N. H., Elizabeth, daughter of Elias Styleman. In January of the same year, he received from his father a deed conveying to him the whole of Richmond's Island, upon which he soon after settled, as he was living there in 1680. He received an appointment of Judge for the county of Cornwall at Pemaquid, by letter from Governor Andros, Sept. 15, 1680. "To Justice Jordan, att Richmond's Island near Casco Bay. Sr. Ed. Andross, Lieut. Gov. General under his Royal Highness of New York, Pemaquid and other territories in America." The name of John Jordan is in the index of persons named in papers relating to Pemaquid and parts adjacent, known as Cornwall County, when under the colony of New York, 1674–1686; as appears from records in the office of the Secretary of the State, Albany, N. Y. He was deceased in 1725. Residence, Richmond's Island, Maine. Children:

Sept. 20, 1867, at Brunswick, æ. 76 years. He was captain of a militia company in the war of 1812, and filled many offices of trust in his native town and county. Capt. Peter Jordan passed all his long life in Brunswick upon the farm inherited from his father and now occupied by his son; living at a time when the West India trade was in its most flourishing condition, he was much engaged in building and fitting out small vessels for that trade. But the latter part of his life was passed in agricultural labors. He was characterized by great energy and endurance, a firm, well balanced mind and rigid honesty and uprightness. His genial and social nature and the traces of humor in his character rendered his company prized and sought after; while his sterling qualities of heart and mind secured to him the love and respect of his associates. In 1810 he was commissioned by Gov. Gore of Mass., captain of a company in 2d Regt of militia, Lt. Col. Charles Thomas, commander; and served in the war of 1812. He served his native town in various stations acceptably; and, now that he has passed away at a ripe old age, his memory is treasured by all that knew him, and his children "rise up and call him blessed." Children:

Captain Clement Jordan was born in a locality, where he, to use his own expression, could see the sun rise up out of the ocean. He well remembers, as he relates it, when his older brothers went fishing, that sometimes they would take him in the boat. Every farmer kept a fishing-boat, and caught and cured what fish he used during the year. Clement soon made himself useful in the fishing-boat; in that way he learned how to manage the boat and to fish, and also to work on the farm, while very young. When about fourteen years of age, being blessed with a strong constitution, he commenced going to sea, on a vessel that sailed from Portland; the height of his ambition was to learn how to manage a vessel, and in a few years he accomplished this desired object.

In 1812, when war was declared between the United States and Great Britain, all the cities and seaport towns in New England prepared for war and for privateering; soon vessels were fitted out from Portland for that purpose. It was well known in New England that St. John, N. B., and Halifax, Nova Scotia, had been the store-houses for the products of the British West India Islands, since from these points goods could be re-shipped to Montreal and throughout Canada and elsewhere. A vessel by the name of "Dart" left Portland as a privateer; Clement Jordan and Isaiah Jordan were of the party on this vessel. It sent into Portland two prizes, proved to be loaded with rum, which had been stored at St. John for some years and was very valuable, known afterward as the "Dart" rum. The Dart had taken a third prize, and Clement was put upon the prize-vessel to sail with her into Portland. The Dart went in another direction and was never heard from after they separated. The prize was re-taken the same day, and carried to St. John; Clement and all his party were made prisoners, and kept in jail about two months. They were then paroled and sent to Portland. During the war of 1812, Clement sailed to Spain from Richmond, Va., which was then blockaded, as was the whole coast of the United States, where the vessel and cargo were disposed of. The American minister made a request that he and his companions might be sent home. The request being granted, they sailed from Cuba, and were at Havana when the English fleet returned from the battle of New Orleans, fought January 8, 1816. They then heard of peace between the United States and Great Britain, and returned home. Clement Jordan then became master of a ship and continued in that business for some years; then leaving his sea life he returned to his farm at Cape Elizabeth. About 1848 or 1850, he purchased wild lands in Fairfield, Jefferson Co., Iowa. All his children are there located, except one son, Clement, Jr., who now resides on the old homestead at Cape Elizabeth. The captain spends about two months every summer at the old homestead, and during the winter and spring he resides in Iowa. Children:

The town has lost a valuable citizen, and the immediate neighborhood in which he lived—Spurwink—has met with a great loss. In all the walks of life, as a man and a citizen, he seemed to be a striking example of one who performed every duty because it was right. He was public spirited; his vote was on the side to raise money for schools; he donated liberally for the church of which he was an attendant, though he was not a church member. Noted for his industrious habits, he was a hard working farmer, "an honest man;" res. Cape Elizabeth. Children:

ROBERT JORDAN AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

ROBERT[2] (Robert[1]), second son of Rev. Robert and Sarah (Winter) Jordan, was born, before 1664, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine. His early life was passed at Spurwink. In 1675 he received by deed from his father what was supposed to be one thousand acres of land. As his elder brother John received a similar conveyance in the year of his marriage, it may be inferred that Robert, Jr., was married about the time of this conveyance. His younger brothers received their portions by will, on the death of their father. Robert's portion constituted Cape Elizabeth proper, as will be seen by the deed.

To all christian people to whom this Deed of Gift or Instrument in writing shall come, I Robert Jordan Senior and Sariah Jordan my wife both of Richmans Island in the Eastward part of New England Clerk, send Greeting in Our Lord everlasting. Know Ye That we, Robert Jordan and Sariah Jordan, as well for and in consideration of the affection which we have and do bear unto our beloved son Robert Jordan, Jun., Planter, especially, as also considering many labors and great industry performed by our son about our sundry employments in New England aforesaid, have given, granted, and by these presents do give, grant and confirm, fully, freely and absolutely, unto our son Robert Jordan, Jun^{r}, one certain tract or parcel of Land, formally called or known by the name of Cape Elizabeth, in the Eastern part of New England aforesaid. Bounded with a small Gut or Stream of water. Running into the Sea out of a small marsh lying behind y^{e} long sands to the westward and so running into the mayne land in a straight lyne to the pond formally called the Great pond. Provided and it is hereby intended and appointed that said Robert Jordan, Jun^{r}, our son, his heirs, Executors, Administrators and assigns shall at no time or times hereafter interfere, take away, molest or diminish any part or parcel of the aforesaid marsh land lying below the said stream and the said Great Pond . . . . . to y^{e} straight line to pass as aforesaid Northward, and so to run down upon y^{e} said pond, taking into the aforesaid premises or plantation one little Island situated on the East side of said pond, with the marshes on both sides of the aforesaid Stream running out of the aforesaid Pond into the sea at Alewive Cove, as also not to intrude upon mayne upland or any playnes thereunto. To have and to hold, &c.

Witness our hands and seals (without fraud) this 29th day of Febu^{y}, in the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and seventy-five, in the twenty-seventh year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord King Charles the Second.

Signed, Sealed and delivered in presence of Elyas Styleman
Nathaniel Fryer.

The two light-houses now on Cape Elizabeth stand on the ground once the property of Robert Jordan, Jr. He sold his land soon after the date of his father's deed. As late as the beginning of the second Indian war, 1688, he still had his residence at Spurwink; very little is known of him, however, after that date, at which time he left Falmouth, and he is not known to have had any male descendants. Children:

777 Elizabeth,[3] m. in Malden, Mass., Sept. 29, 1710, John Larrabee, and settled in Boston, Mass. The following sketch of Mr. Larrabee is from the "Memoirs of Prince's Subscribers," published in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, vol. xvi. p. 15:

"John Larrabee, Boston. Hitherto, attempts to discover the parentage of this individual have been unsuccessful. Not improbably he was born in Lynn, but the early records of that town being destroyed, nothing certainly can be ascertained. If his age is given correctly in notices of his death, which took place in February, 1762, he was born in 1686. About 1712, in the capacity of a private soldier, we find him at Castle William (now Fort Independence), in Boston Harbor. In 1720, he was quarter gunner, and in 1725 he had risen to the position of 'captain lieutenant and victualler.' Probabilities favor the idea that the office last named was somewhat analogous to that of lieutenant-colonel of a modern regiment. Records in the Secretary of State's office show Capt. L. repeatedly charging not only for 'victualling the garrison,' but also for 'repairs on Castle William,' for 'disbursements for sails and cordage for the boats,' and for 'extraordinary table expenses he had been at,' &c. One or two incidental notices, in manuscript and print, which have been preserved, strengthen the good opinion of Capt. Larrabee's trustworthiness and capacity, which, in consequence of his long retention in office (thirty-seven years), we are allowed to form. In January, 1752, Gov. Belcher, writing from Elizabethtown, N. J., rejoices 'in honest Capt. Larrabee's so much recovered his Health, which he prays God to confirm to him, and without Derogation to the merit of any other person, knows not who can better fill the Post he now sustains.' In obituaries contained in the Boston Gazette and Boston Post Boy of Feb. 1762, Capt. L. is commended for 'uprightness, integrity, generous publick spirit, plainheartedness, humanity, and freedom from guile.' He is also spoken of as a 'sincere Christian,' and 'dear to the soldiers at the Castle, who loved and revered him as their Friend and Father.' A full length portrait of him is in the possession of his descendant, Mrs. Henry N. Conklin of Brooklyn, N. Y." Children, b. in Boston, Mass.:

SKETCH OF THE INDIAN WARS IN WHICH THE JORDAN FAMILY AT SPURWINK, AND THE OTHER INHABITANTS OF FALMOUTH, WERE SUFFERERS, 1688–1713.

IN the second war with the French and Indians, the enemy commenced their operations by killing cattle in the eastern plantations, in August, 1688. The first blood was spilled Sept. 1688, on Royall's River, North Yarmouth, Me. In April, 1689, the Indians renewed hostilities at Saco. In June the government was aroused from its lethargy by these movements, and in September of that year procured the services of Maj. Benjamin Church of Plymouth, who had been a skilful officer in King Philip's war. He raised from among his old soldiers valuable troops of English and friendly Indians, and proceeded by water to the head-quarters at Falmouth. His instructions were signed in September, 1689, by Pres. Danforth, commissioner of the United Colonies, in which were the following directions: "You are with all possible speed to take care that the Plymouth force, both English and Indians, be fixed and ready, and the first opportunity of wind and weather, to go on board such vessels as are provided to transport you and them to Casco, where, if it shall please God you arrive, you are to take under your care and command the company of Capt. N. Hall and Capt. S. Willard." And again, "We have ordered two men-of-war, sloops, and small vessels for transportation to attend you." It was agreed that his soldiers should have the benefit of the captives and all lawful plunder, and the reward of eight dollars per head for every fighting Indian man slain by them, over and above their stated wages. Maj. Church arrived at Falmouth, and managed to keep his troops out of sight of the enemy. On Sept. 21, 1689, the battle on Anthony Brackett's farm, in the orchard, took place late in the day. The French and Indians retreated according to their custom, and carried off their own dead and wounded. The English and Indians had 21 killed and wounded.

Major Church visited the garrisons at Spurwink and in Scarborough, and went up Kennebec River before he returned. On November 13, 1689, he held a council of war at Falmouth, at which were present, Capt. Davis, Capt. William Bassett, Capt. Simon Willard, Capt. Nathaniel Hall, Lieut. Thaddeus Clark, Lieut. Elisha Andrews, Mr. Elihu Gullison. Lieut. George Ingersoll, Lieut. Ambrose Davis, Mr. Robert Lawrence, Mr. John Palmer and others. The chief command was assigned to Capt. Nathaniel Hall.

Early in the year 1690, Lieut. Thaddeus Clark had a company of town soldiers in a garrison, and, by his imprudence, was led into a fenced lane, with the enemy on both sides of the fence, and was killed on the spot, with thirteen of his soldiers; the others fled to the garrison. The enemy set fire to the houses, and, on the 16th of May, laid siege to the fort, situated near what is now the foot of King Street. Capt. Davis nobly defended the fort five days and four nights, but surrendered on the fifth day.

Five of the sons of the Rev. Robert Jordan, viz.: John, Robert, Dominicus, Jedediah and Jeremiah, were residing at Spurwink in 1690, the date of the ruthless destruction of Falmouth by the Indians; they were obliged to find new homes in a more secure locality, and for eight years the plantation at Spurwink was left deserted. After the peace of 1698, a few of the old settlers straggled back to their cheerless homes, particularly at Purpooduck and Spurwink. The Jordan family, whose property lay in the latter neighborhood, again met on their desolate possession, and began the world anew; they were probably the first who returned. In the spring of 1703, a number of persons had returned to Purpooduck Point, and erected houses there. Their names were Michael Webber, Benjamin, Joseph, James and Josiah

Wallis, Joseph Morgan, Thomas Lovitt, Nathaniel White and Joel Madeford, the latter having been an inhabitant before the first war; all these persons had families, and zealously entered upon the task of reviving the settlement.

In 1702, a war between France and England broke out. To prevent a calamity, Gov. Dudley, in the summer of 1703, visited the coast as far east as Pemaquid, and held conference with the Indians. On the 20th of June, a grand council was assembled at the Fort in New Casco, attended by the chiefs of the Norridgewocks, Penobscots, Pennacooks, Amariscoggin and Pequakett tribes; the chiefs were well armed, and generally painted with a variety of colors; those of the Amariscoggin tribe were accompanied by about two hundred and fifty men in sixty-five canoes. The meeting was conducted in the most friendly manner; the natives assuring the Governor that they aimed at nothing more than peace: and that as high as the sun was above the earth, so far distant should their designs be of making the least breach between each other. As a pledge of their sincerity, they presented him with a belt of wampum, and, in testimony of their amicable arrangements, each party added a great number of stones to two pillars, called "The Two Brothers," which had been erected at a former treaty. After this ceremony, several volleys were fired on each side, and the Indians expressed their satisfaction by singing, dancing, and loud acclamations of joy. Two months from that date the whole eastern country was a conflagration; no house was left standing nor garrison unattacked. In August, 1703, the enemy, consisting of five hundred French and Indians, invaded our eastern frontier, and, dividing into small parties, unexpectedly attacked all the settlements from Casco to Wells. The inhabitants of Purpooduck were the most severe sufferers in this sudden onset; there were nine families then settled upon and near the Point, who were not protected by any garrison. The Indians came suddenly upon these defenceless hamlets while the men were absent, killed twenty-five persons, and took several prisoners. Among the killed were Thomas Lovitt and his family, Joel Madeford or Madiver, and the wives of Josiah and Benjamin Wallis and Michael Webber; the wife of Joseph Wallis was taken captive; Josiah Wallis made his escape to Black Point with his son John, then seven years old, part of the way upon his back. Spurwink, principally occupied by the Jordan family, was attacked at the same time, and twenty-two persons by the name of Jordan were killed or taken prisoners. Dominicus, the 3d son of Rev. Robert Jordan, was among the killed, and his wife and six children were carried captives to Canada; his brother Jeremiah was also among the prisoners, and was subsequently called French Jeremy, from the circumstance of his having been carried to France. The whole country, from Purpooduck Point to Spurwink, was covered with woods, except the few spots which the inhabitants had cleared, and this afforded facilities to the Indians for concealment and protection; from this covert they made their sudden and cruel visits, then returning beyond the reach of pursuit. In the autumn of 1703, they surprised a vessel in the Bay, killed the master and three men, and wounded two more. They occasionally practised upon their prisoners the most revolting cruelties. In one instance a woman who had been killed was exposed in a brutal manner, and her infant fastened to her breast was left to perish. In Casco, Col. Church relates that an English soldier was found in the early part of the war with a stake driven through his body, his head cut off, a hog's head placed on his shoulders, and his heart and inwards taken out and hung around his body. After the melancholy events of 1703, Falmouth was entirely deserted of inhabitants. The treaty of Utrecht was signed July 13, 1713, hostilities having ceased for some time, after ten years of constant agitation and fighting in New-England. The first notice, however, that we have of the return of any of the former inhabitants was in 1715. Early in that year Dominicus Jordan, son of Dominicus who was killed by the Indians in the former war, re-occupied the paternal estate at Spurwink, and his eldest son Dominicus was born there in June of that year; this latter was afterwards Capt. Dominicus, commander of the Snow-Shoe Corps in 1744.

Dominicus,

THIRD SON OF THE REV. ROBERT JORDAN.

DOMINICUS JORDAN AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

DOMINICUS[2] (Robert[1]), third son of Rev. Robert and Sarah (Winter) Jordan, was born previously to 1664, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine. He married, in 1681, Hannah, daughter of Ralph Tristram* of Winter Harbor, now Biddeford, Me. He left Spurwink with his father's family at the beginning of King Philip' War, 1675, when the settlement was attacked and their house destroyed by the Indians. Six years from that time he returned to Spurwink with his wife. It appears he had selected a piece of land, and his father consented it should be his at a proper time. In 1678 he administered upon the estate of the abovesaid Ralph Tristram. In 1679 his father died, and by his father's will (page 75) he came into possession, July 1, 1679, of one thousand acres of land at Spurwink. We may suppose that part of the six years prior to his return to Spurwink were passed at Winter Harbor, being only about twelve miles distant from Spurwink. Dominicus Jordan was a prominent man in the settlement, and was one of the trustees to whom the township of Falmouth was deeded by President Danforth (see page 133). The second Indian war again brought danger to the settlement, and in 1690 when Falmouth was devastated, Spurwink was again deserted, and remained unoccupied till the peace of 1698.

According to tradition, Dominicus was a man above the common size, and of great strength and endurance. The gun used by him was over six feet in length. This gun has been in the possession of his descendants (eighteen inches of the barrel having been cut off) until within a few years, and was presented to the Maine Historical Society by Capt. Samuel Jordan of

* Ralph Tristram, "Freeman" 1655, may have settled here several years prior to that date. He was long a useful, worthy townsman, and died in 1678. His children, born 1644–64, were Samuel, Nathaniel, Benjamin, Rishamer, Rachel, Ruth, Freegrace, Hannah and David.

Deering, Me. It was the custom of Dominicus to keep his gun and ammunition close at hand all the time. The Indians feared him. In war he was their deadly enemy; in peace, friendly. While at work on his plantation which lay bordering on the Spurwink River, where he had a block-house on a flat piece of land, his gun was strapped to his back, ready for immediate use if necessary. He was called the "Indian Killer." In times of peace the Indians would call on him, and were hospitably received, while they exchanged their furs for such articles as they wanted. On the breaking out of hostilities in 1703, a party of Indians, appearing friendly, called on Dominicus, August 10th of that year, to buy some goods. He did not suspect their treacherous design, and was waiting on them, when one, who had watched the opportunity unnoticed by Dominicus, struck a hatchet into his head. Death soon followed. His wife and family of six children, and his youngest brother Jeremiah, were made prisoners, and led through the wilderness to Canada. All were finally restored, except a daughter who remained with her masters in Canada. (See page 127.) Children:

DEED FROM PRES. DANFORTH TO THE TRUSTEES OF FALMOUTH.

This indenture made the twenty-sixth day of July, Anno Domini one thousand six hundred eighty and four and in the thirty-sixth of the reign of our sovereign Lord Charles the Second by the grace of God of England Scotland France and Ireland King, defender of the Faith &c.

Between Thomas Danforth Esq. President of his majestie's Province of Maine in New England on the one party, and Capt. Edward Tyng, capt. Sylvanus Davis, Mr. Walter Gendall, Mr. Thaddeus Clark, Capt. Anthony Brackett, Mr. Dominicus Jordan, Mr. George Bramhall, and Robert Lawrence Trustees on the behalf and for the sole use and benefit of the Inhabitants of the town of Falmouth within the abovenamed Province of Maine on the other party, Witnesseth That whereas the abovenamed Thomas Danforth by the governor and company of the Massachusetts colony in New England the now Lord Proprietors of the abovenamed Province of Maine at a general assembly held at Boston on the eleventh day of May 1681 is fully authorized and empowered to make legal confirmation unto the Inhabitants of the abovesaid Province of Maine of all their lands or proprieties to them justly appertaining or belonging within the limits or bounds of said Province, Now know all men by these presents, that the said Thomas Danforth pursuant to the trust in him reposed and power to him given as abovesaid by and on the behalf of the governor and company of the Massachusetts colony aforesaid hath given granted & confirmed and by these presents doth fully clearly and absolutely give grant and confirm unto the abovenamed capt. Edward Tyng, capt. Sylvanus Davis, Mr. Walter Gendall, Mr. Thaddeus Clark, capt. Anthony Brackett, Mr. Dominicus Jordan, Mr. Geo. Bramhall and Robert Lawrence Trustees as above expressed, all that tract or parcel of land within the township of Falmouth in said

Province according to the bounds and limits of said township to them formerly granted by Sir Fernando Gorges Knight or by any of his agents or by the General Assembly of the Massachusetts with all privileges and appurtenances to the same appertaining or in any wise belonging—all royalties reserved to his majesty by the charter granted to Sir Ferdinando Gorges Knight, as also those by said charter given to the said Ferdinando Gorges Knight, his heirs and assigns—together with the rivers, streams and coves contained within the limits or bounds of said townships always to be excepted and reserved.

To have and to hold all the abovesaid tract of land by these presents granted and confirmed be the same more or less with all the privileges and appurtenances to the same appertaining or in any wise belonging, excepting as is above excepted and reserved, to them the said Capt. Edward Tyng, Capt. Sylvanus Davis, Mr. Walter Gendall, Mr. Thaddeus Clark, Capt. Anthony Brackett, Mr. Dominicus Jordan, Mr. George Bramhall and Mr. Robert Lawrence as trustees abovesaid forever, to the only proper use and behoof of the Inhabitants of said town that now are and to them that shall there survive and succeed from time to time and forevermore hereafter. And the abovenamed Thomas Danforth for and on the behalf of the governor and company of the Massachusetts colony, and for their successors and assigns doth further covenant promise and grant to and with the abovenamed Edward Tyng, Sylvanus Davis, Walter Gendall, Thaddeus Clark, Anthony Brackett, Dominicus Jordan, George Bramhall and Robert Lawrence their heirs and assigns, Trustees as above expressed, that they the said Edward Tyng, Sylvanus Davis, Walter Gendall, Thaddeus Clark, Anthony Brackett, Dominicus Jordan, George Bramhall and Robert Lawrence shall and may at all times and from time to time forever hereafter peacably and quietly have hold occupy and enjoy all the above given and granted premises without the let denial or contradiction of the governor and company of the Massachusetts colony or of any other person or persons whatsoever claiming and having any lawful right, title or interest therein or in any part or parcel thereof by from or under the said Governor and company or by any of their assigns. They the abovenamed Inhabitants of the said town of Falmouth for the time being and in like manner that shall there be from time to time forever hereafter, yealding and paying in consideration thereof to the Governor and company of the Massachusetts colony or to the President of the said Province of Maine by them authorized and empowered for the time being or to other their agents and lawful assignee or assignees the quit rent to the said Governor and company due and belonging according to the proposal made and mutually agreed upon at the General Assembly held in the abovesaid Province of York June 1681 viz. That the abovenamed Inhabitants of the said town of Falmouth for the time being and in like manner that shall there be from time to time forever hereafter, as an acknowledgment of Sir Ferdinando Gorges and his assigns right to soile and government do pay twelve pence for every family whose single country rate is not above two shillings, and for all that exceed the sum of two shillings in a single rate, to pay three shillings per family annually in money to the treasurer of said Province for the use of the chief Proprietor thereof.

And in case of omission or neglect on the part and behalf of the said Inhabitants, to make full payment annually in manner as above expressed and hath been mutually concerted and agreed unto it shall then be lawful for the sd. President of the sd. Province for the time being or for other of the agent or agents assignee or assignees of the Governor and company of the Mass^{tts} colony to leavey and make distress upon the estates of any of the Inhabitants for the time being within the limits and bounds of the sd. township as well for sd. quit rent as also for all costs and charges accruing and arising upon the same. And the estates so levied and distrained to bear drive or carry away with so much as it shall cost to convey the same to the treasurer of the Province for the time being or to such place as he shall order and appoint. In witness whereof the parties above named to these present Indentures have enterchangeably put their hands and seals the day and year first above written.

DOMINICUS[3] (Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), eldest son of Dominicus and Hannah (Tristram) Jordan, was born in 1683, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland Co., Maine; died May 20, 1749, aged 66 years. He married Joanna Bray of Kittery. When nineteen years old he was made prisoner by Indians, and carried to Trois Rivières, Canada. After remaining from ten to thirteen years a prisoner, and learning the Indian language, he made his escape, married, and returned in 1715 to Spurwink, where he resided during the remainder of his life. His father Dominicus[2] inherited, by will, 1000 acres of land, and selected 600 of them from the old plantation on Spurwink River, which he occupied during his life, and which Dominicus[3] afterwards took possession of. The remaining 400 acres were decided upon by the following agreement between Dominicus[3] and his uncle Jedediah Jordan:

Memorandum of Agreement made and concluded and fully agreed upon between Jedediah Jordan of Kittery in the county of York husbandman and Dominicus Jordan of Falmouth in said county of York Gentleman, relating to the bounds of the land which they have that joyns together in said Town of Falmouth, viz. the said Dominicus Jordan is to begin at a Slowe to the westward of the Lettel plains & to run from thence as it was formerly run by M^{r}. John wincoll as appears p^{r} a draught under his hand 17th Oct^{r}, 1684; and the s^{d} Dominicus is to make up the remainder of his thousand acres over the great marsh to begin at Richards's point and to run to Samuel Jordan's line half a mile from the seaside, and to divide that land in the middle—And the said Jedediah Jordan is to take that part next to Samuel Jordans, and said Dominicus Jordan is to take the other part on the west side of the s^{d} Jedediah Jordan's, and each of them to run back to the northward, untill each quantity is compleated.

And for the confirmation whereof we have hereunto sett our hand and seals this 26th day of February in the thirteenth year of his majesty's reign Annoque Domini 1726.

DOMIN JORDAN (Seal)

May 4, 1729, Dominicus entered into the following arrangement with a committee of the town of Falmouth, with regard to his claim of lands in that township:

These are to certify the Proprietors and Inhabitants of the Town of Falmouth, Whom it may concern, That whereas we the subscribers being chosen as a committee to hear the proposals of such as lay claim to Lands in the Township and lay said proposals before the town, Whereas on the 22d day of April 1729 We met with Capt. Dominicus Jordan to hear what he had to offer, to be laid before the town, which are as followeth. Impremise, That I, Dominicus Jordan for myself and in behalf of my brothers & Sisters, viz. Samuel Jordan, Nathaniel Jordan, Humphrey Scammon & Joseph Calef, & Arabella Jordan.

Firstly, we request a quit claim of the Town to us abovesaid, namely, in the one thousand acres of land given to us by our grandfather's will and the marsh excepted in S^{d} will. Likewise to quit their right further in the Gore of land given to me the s^{d} Dominicus Jordan, by the town. Then in case of this, we the abovesaid persons to give the town of Falmouth our Quit claim to all and every other part & parcel of land or lands or marshes that we have or ought or might have in the lands or marshes on the Southerly Side of the Fore River or otherwise Purpooduck side of the River, only reserving a purchase in Lands that I the said Dominicus Jordan bought of the heirs of Robert Jordan deceased. Secondly, I the S^{d} Dominicus Jordan do further request for myself of the town to give your quit claim to me & my heirs to two hundred acres of land on the South-West side of Presumscot River, adjoining Lower Falls, as conveniently as I can find it, and to have it laid out by the committee & Surveyor where it may be found, not infringing on any lots already laid out on the New Town Grants, together with the privileges of the Lower Falls to erect and build Mill or mills. For which I the S^{d} Dominicus Jordan do promise to give a quit claim to the said Town of Falmouth of all my whole right, title, & interest from me, my heirs and all & every other Jordan whatsoever, who being the grandson, and Heirs of Robert Jordan Sr. deceased, shall or may lay any claim to any part or parcel of Land, that I or any other of the said Jordans might or ought to have in my lands on the South-west side of S^{d} Presumscot River or otherwise between the Rivers my New-Town right excepted.

This was the report of the committee, and the parties finally settled on the above proposition. Deeds were given by both parties according to the above report.

The following sketch of the Indian troubles in the neighborhood of Falmouth, in 1722–24, may be of interest here:

In 1720 the Indians were persuaded by the French in Canada to commit depredations, and parties from Norridgewock and Penobscot killed some cattle, and threatened the lives of the English. The government, irritated by the conduct of the French, determined to attempt the removal of what they apprehended to be the cause of all the trouble. For that purpose a force of three hundred men was raised in 1721, and sent to Norridgewock, under the command of Col. Thomas Westbrook, with orders to seize Father Ralle, and bring him to Boston. No other success attended this expedition than the seizure of the private papers of the Jesuit, among which was his correspondence with the Governor of Canada, which developed the secret machinations of the French to influence and send upon our defenceless frontiers a barbarous foe. This invasion of their head-quarters exasperated the enemy, and in June, 1722, a party of sixty men in twenty canoes captured nine families in Merry Meeting Bay, and committed depredations on the coast east of Kennebec. This was soon followed by the destruction of Brunswick. Immediately after information of this latter event reached Boston, the Governor and Council made a formal declaration of war, and Col. Thomas Westbrook, of Portsmouth, was appointed again to the chief command of the troops. From that time, premiums of £100 were voted for scalps, and for prisoners £60; and money was raised for the enlistment and support of troops. In January, 1723, soldiers were stationed at Falmouth, as follows: on Neck (Portland), twenty-four men in three garrisons, viz., at Maj. Moody's, Ingersoll's and Wass's; in Purpooduck, at Sawyer's and York's, four men and a corporal; at Spurwink, at Jordan's, where a ferry was to be kept by three men under the command of a corporal; at Black Point nine men were to be recruited. In September following, the garrisons at Purpooduck and Spurwink were increased, the former twelve men, the latter nine men, who were placed under the command of Lieut. Dominicus Jordan.

In February, 1724, an expedition was sent to Penobscot under Col. Westbrook, and another to Norridgewock under Capt. Hammon, both of which were unsuccessful. The enemy remained in their retreats until the weather became suitable to open the campaign, when they divided into small parties, and harassed the whole line of frontier settlements. In April they took eight persons in Scarborough and Falmouth, killing some, among whom was Sergeant Chubb of the Scarborough garrison. In June they attacked Roger Deering's garrison house in Scarborough, killed his wife, also Thomas Larabee and his son, and took three of his children and Mary Scammon (No. 790), John Hunnewell and Robert Jordan prisoners.

In May, 1724, the Indians killed one man at Purpooduck. In July they mortally wounded Solomon Jordan as he was going out of the garrison at Spurwink. The next day Lieut. Joseph Bean with a file of soldiers went in pursuit of the enemy, and overtook a party consisting of thirty men; these he attacked, and having killed one of their leaders, the rest fled, leaving behind twenty-five packs, twelve blankets, a gun, and several other articles. The scalp of the slain Indian was carried to Boston, for which Bean and his companions received £100. The government, discouraged by the ill success which attended their efforts to check the progress of this marauding warfare, determined to beard the lion in his den. For this purpose, they fitted out an expedition in August, of four companies, consisting of two hundred and eight men, commanded by Capts. Hammond, Moulton, Brown and Bean, to proceed to Norridgewock, the head-quarters of the warlike tribe. The undertaking was crowned with complete success. On Aug. 23, 1724, they surprised and entirely destroyed the settlement, consisting of a catholic chapel and the cottages which were around it, together with all the canoes. The number of the enemy killed and drowned in the attack was about eighty, among whom was Father Ralle, who, as he was considered the principal cause of the cruel visits of his flock, was regarded as the greatest trophy of the war. Father Ralle had lived among these people for thirty years, had built their chapel, and was supposed to direct the movements of this warlike tribe. This achievement was celebrated throughout New England as the greatest performed since King Philip's war, and it was no less distinguished in its consequences, as breaking the power of the tribe which had exercised a commanding influence over the Indian councils, and over the fate of our settlement.

The next and last considerable engagement in this war took place at Pequakett, now Fryburg, Maine, in May, 1725, by a party of thirty-four volunteers under Capt. Lovel. The company unfortunately fell into an ambush, and many of them were destroyed, but they rendered so good an account of their defence as to check all further depredations from that quarter. During the war, Paugus, their cruel chief, and a number of his companions were slain. The English, after sustaining themselves until the close of the day against more than double their number, were left in possession of the field. They lost ten killed, and six mortally wounded, among whom were Capt. Lovel, Lieut. Farewell and Ensign Robbins; eight only returned.

Dominicus Jordan was an active and useful man in the affairs of the town. He became Major of the Militia and Representative of the district to the General Court; was administrator of his father's estate and of that of his uncle, John Jordan; was one of the Selectmen the first year after the incorporation of the town of Falmouth (see page 147), and became a large land proprietor. He made a will in 1746, his wife Joanna being appointed sole executrix. She survived him many years. Children, all born at Spurwink:

Her mother had the old homestead, and she lived with her mother, being the youngest child, and, after her mother's death, she had the personal property. They had a large family of children, and their descendants now reside in the town of Scarborough.

INCORPORATION OF FALMOUTH.

THE inhabitants of the previous settlement, and the persons claiming under them, finding their ancient possessions becoming the resort of a new population, began to turn their attention to the means of improving their property, and of placing the settlement under due regulations. In 1715, the General Court had appointed a committee of five persons, on a petition from Cape Porpoise and Black Point, to prosecute the regular settlement of the eastern frontier. The petitioners were directed to lay out the town plats in a regular and defensible manner, at the charge of the proprietors, and of such other towns as shall after apply agreeably to the order of the Court; and an order was passed that no settlement should be made in the eastern country without authority from the Government. Under this act several of the old proprietors and their representatives, to the number of thirty-six, petitioned the General Court in May, 1717, for liberty to rebuild their settlements: stating that persons were continually making encroachments upon their property, and plundering the wood and timber. This committee did not attend to its duty. The delay had subjected the proprietors to a loss, and their affairs were thrown into confusion for want of municipal regulations; these injuries were earnestly set forth in their petition, which pressed the Court to relieve them from their embarrassment. In this last petition, some of the new settlers joined the old proprietors. The General Court added Lewis Bane and Capt. Joseph Hill to the committee, and authorized any three of them to perform the necessary duties of it. The subject was attended to without further delay; the committee proceeded to Falmouth in July, 1718, where they established the lines of the town, and designated the Neck as a most suitable place for a settlement. Their report was as follows:

"Pursuant to a vote of a great and general assembly of y^e^ Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay, in New England, held at Boston in May, 1715, empowering and appointing the subscribers to be a committee to prosecute the regular settlement of the eastern frontiers; and in answer to the petition of the proprietors and settlers of the town of Falmouth in Casco Bay, in the years 1717 and 1718, who have made application to us, the said committee, according to the direction of the General Court,—We have upon the 16th day of the present month of July, taken a view of the said town of Falmouth, and upon mature deliberation and consideration we offer the report to this honorable court, as follows, viz.: The dividing bounds between Scarborough and Falmouth, we find to be the line from the first dividing branch of Spurwink River, from thence to run into the country eight miles N. W., and from said branch as the River runs into the sea; and the easterly bounds of Falmouth to extend to certain Islands, known by the name of the Clapboard Islands; from a Red Oak tree upon the main over against said Islands, marked F. on the south side, and so south-east over a White Rock into the sea, and from said tree eight miles into the country; and according to the best of our judgment we have determined the spot whereon the ancient town of Falmouth stood and a fort was formerly built, by order of Government, and where there are already settled above twenty families in a compact and defensible manner, to be a very agreeable place for the settlement of a town, bordering on a fine navigable river, guarded from the sea by adjacent Islands, most commodious for the fishery, and accommodated with several large streams for mills, as well as a large quantity of good land for the encouragement of husbandry, and we are of the opinion there is a fair prospect of its being in a little time a flourishing town; and in order to enable them to a methodical proceeding in their affairs, we are of the opinion that it is absolutely necessary that they be invested with power to act as a town as soon as may be with conveniency."

This report was accepted, and the town incorporated with the proviso, that this order shall in no measure prejudice and infringe any just right or title that any person has to land there, and that fifty families at the least, more than now are, be admitted as soon as may be, and settled in the most compact and defensible manner that the land will allow of.

The meeting of the inhabitants to organize the town after the incorporation, was held March 10, 1719. At this time Joshua Moody was chosen Clerk; John Wass, William Scales, Dominicus Jordan, John Prichard and Benjamin Skillings, Selectmen; Thomas Thomas. Constable; and Jacob Collins and Samuel Proctor, surveyors of fence. At the same meeting, William Scales was chosen representative to the General Court of Boston.

During all this time the poverty of the inhabitants of Falmouth had prevented them from completing a house of worship. In February, 1720, they had voted to build a meeting-house as soon as possible, to be thirty-six feet in length, twenty-eight feet in breadth, and twenty feet stud; and Samuel Moody, Richard Collier and John Sawyer were chosen a committee to superintend the work. But for want of funds nothing material was done on the subject until the next year, when another order was passed authorizing them to go on with the undertaking, and a tax was assessed for the purpose, to be paid in timber or such things as were produced in town. Some little activity in the work was caused by this vote; the timber was cut and placed upon the lot at the foot of Middle Street. The place for erecting the house was not designated until July 2, 1721, when it was voted that the meeting-house frame should be raised there or thereabouts where the timber now lies, upon the rising ground, and that Wednesday, the 12th day of this instant July, shall be the day to raise the said frame. The day came, and the frame of their first meeting-house thirty-six by twenty-eight feet, which had been the subject of anxious solicitude for more than a year and a half, was at length raised on the corner formed by the north side of Middle and west side of King Street, on the spot occupied in 1831 by Mr. Henry Bradbury's store. In May, 1722, it was voted that the meeting-house frame should be covered and closed, and that the money granted to the town by the General Court should be applied to discharge the expenses of the meeting-house frame as far as it would go. In the same year the General Court on petition of Dominicus Jordan on behalf of the inhabitants, had granted £40 to the town to assist the people in building the meeting-house. A committee was raised Feb. 4, 1724, to get the clapboards for the meeting-house, at £4 per thousand, to be paid out of the town's stock. On March 9, 1725, Major Moody and Benjamin York were chosen to agree with workmen to finish the outside of the meeting-house, and, in August, a tax was laid of £90 for that and other purposes. Nothing, however, was done to the interior of the house except laying the floor; the church was not even glazed. In this situation, after more than five years from the commencement of the undertaking, was the house found by the Rev. Thomas Smith, who arrived to preach June 23, 1725. In the course of the summer of that year it was finished outside and glazed, the glass having been presented by Gov. Wentworth of New Hampshire, who visited Falmouth as one of the commissioners to treat with the Indians, and thus had an opportunity to witness the forlorn condition of the only house of public worship in this region.

The minister, for the accommodation of the people on the south side of Fore-river, preached at Purpooduck every third Sunday. The building used on these occasions was a log-house, which had been built for the common purpose of a garrison and a church, and is the only public edifice which is known to have been ever placed by the inhabitants upon the Point. It stood on the high ground, west of the spot on which the fort now stands. The burying-ground extended southerly to the shore of Simonton's Cove. Seats and glass were voted to be put into this fabric in February, 1728.

The arrival of Rev. Thomas Smith in 1725, then but twenty-three years old, commenced a new era in the ecclesiastical affairs of the town. He graduated at Harvard College in 1720, and commenced preaching in 1722. When he came to Falmouth he found Mr. Pierpont preaching there, who was chaplain in the army and whose quarters were on the neck. The town is represented by Mr. Smith to have been in a bad state when he came; every object bore the marks of poverty and wretchedness. The population was principally made up of soldiers, fishermen and Indians. The Indian war had not closed. Even the meeting-house, upon which the people had exhausted their means, was without glazed windows, without seats or pulpit. A mere shell presented itself to the mind of a young aspirant for fame, and afforded but miserable encouragement. That excellent man perceived here a field for useful exertion, and he remained preaching until the 5th of September; and, at the pressing solicitation of the people, returned in November. The contribution on one sabbath was £2 6s.—equal to $400 a year—a large sum for those days. On April 26, 1726, the people gave him an invitation to settle among them, and offered him a salary of £70—equal to $233—for the first year, besides his board and the contribution of strangers, and promised to increase the same, according to their ability and as their circumstances would allow, until he should be provided with an honorable maintenance. He deliberated a long time on this call, still continuing to preach among them, and on Jan. 23, 1727, gave an affirmative answer. This result was received by the people with great joy. The ordination was appointed for the 8th of March, and was anticipated with much interest, being the first event of this kind which had taken place in town or in this part of the country. Major Moody was desired to entertain the messengers and ministers upon ordination day—the charge to be defrayed by the town; and John Sawyer was to take care of the horses. Persons were also invited to send in free-will offerings of provisions. Capt. Dominicus Jordan and Lieut. Jordan were appointed to gather what provisions may be had at Spurwink, Jonathan Cobb for Purpooduck, and Thomas Millet and Samuel Proctor for Casco side. Agreeably to previous arrangements, the ordination took place March 8, 1728, the churches of Berwick, Wells, York and Kittery being present and assisting by their delegates and pastors. Mr. Moody of York made the first prayer; Mr. Wise of Berwick preached the sermon and gave the right hand of fellowship; Mr. Newmarch, of the First Church in Kittery, gave the charge; and Mr. Rogers, of the Second Church in Kittery, made the closing prayer.

On the same day the church was formed and entered into a covenant, which was subscribed by Thomas Smith, Isaac Sawyer, John Barker, Robert Means, Thomas Haskell, Samuel Cobb, John Armstrong, William Jeals and William Jennison. To this entry on the church records Mr. Smith adds, "We are the first church that ever was settled to the eastward of Wells." The church was extremely poor. At its first meeting, July 10, 1727, a committee was appointed to gather something from among the inhabitants to defray the expenses of the communion table, on account of the poverty of the church. The first celebration of the Lord's Supper by the church was on the 20th of August, at which about thirty communicants were present. Samuel Cobb was chosen the first Deacon. Next year, Sept. 12, 1728, Rev. Mr. Smith was married to Sarah, daughter of Col. Tyng of Dunstable. On his return he was met at Scarborough by a number of his parishioners, who escorted him home, and regaled him and his bride with a noble supper prepared for the occasion.

The whole town, notwithstanding its large extent of territory and the remote situation of many of its inhabitants, continued united in one parish until 1733, when, by mutual consent, the people residing on the south side of Fore-river were incorporated by the General Court as a distinct parish. (This is the present boundary line of Cape Elizabeth.) On September 18th of the same year, the new parish held a meeting, at which they voted to build a meeting-house, and chose the Rev. Benjamin Allen to be their minister. He accepted the invitation, and was installed Nov. 10, 1734. Mr. Allen was born in Tisbury, on Martha's Vineyard; graduated at Yale College in 1708; died, May 6, 1754, aged 65 years, and was buried in the 2d Parish church-yard. This is now the North Church, Cape Elizabeth.

Will of Dominicus Jordan.

In the name of God, Amen. I Dominicus Jordan of Falmouth in the county of York within the province of Massachusetts Bay in New England. Gentleman, having been by many repeated calls of Divine providence kept in mind of the mortality of my body, and the uncertainty of this life, and being of a good, perfect and disposing memory, thanks be given unto a gracious God, Therefore do make and ordain this my last will & testament Revoking and disannulling all other wills and testaments by me heretofore made either by word or writing. And first of all I resign and commend my soul into the hands of God that gave it, hoping for the pardon and remission of all my sins through Jesus Christ my Redeemer, and my body I commit to the Earth, to be buried in a decent and christian manner at the accessory of my executors, nothing doubting but at the General Resurrection I shall receive the same again by the mighty power of God; and as to such worldly estate wherewith it hath pleased God to bless me, I give and demise of the same in the following manner, viz.:

I give and bequeath unto Joanna Jordan, my dearly beloved wife, all and singular my personal estate of whatever nature, kind and quality soever it be, either household goods, cattle, stock, wares, goods, money, bonds, notes, books, debts, chattels and whatever else I am in possession of and am entitled (except what I hereafter give and bequeath unto my children) to her own proper use, benefit and disposal, in order to enable her to pay my just debts and funeral charges and to support herself. I likewise give and bequeath unto my said wife the sole use, income, and improvement and advantage of the homestead which contains about 150 acres of land, with the house and barn on the same standing, during her natural life, together with all the utensils of husbandry to the same belonging.

I give & bequeath unto my son Dominicus the house where he now dwells, which was the place where my honored father Dominicus Jordan formerly lived, added, a purchase unto the same belonging made by me of Jeremiah Jordan, together with the marsh and thatch banks, being at and adjoining to Spurwink river, also one hundred and fifty acres of land above the mouth and adjoining my sister Arabella's land, being a part of 286 acres formerly belonging to my father Dominicus Jordan, being my part as set off to me of his estate, also one full third part of all my marsh, excepting what is hereafter and heretofore given and bequeathed, as also one full third part of all my land meadows except as heretofore excepted. All the land, marsh, meadows above mentioned given and bequeathed to my son Dominicus Jordan unto him and his heirs lawfully begotten of his body and descending therefrom from generation to generation and for want of lawful issue, then to descend to the next lawful heir in my family.

I give and bequeath unto my son Nathaniel seventy-six acres of land, being the remaining part of the two hundred and eighty-six acres, my part of my father's estate as set off to me (having bequeathed to my son Dominicus 210 acres) 150 acres adjoining my sister Arabella's land and sixty acres part of the seventy acres where my son Dominicus dwells, also the gore of land containing about 110 acres on which the said Nathaniel lately dwelt, also 40 acres, a town grant, adjoining the said gore of land, also my right to a tract of land & marsh lying in Scarboro', purchased of John Getchel. All the land above mentioned given and bequeathed to my son Nathaniel Jordan unto him and his heirs lawfully begotten of his body and descending therefrom from generation to generation, and for want of lawful issue then to descend to the next lawful heir in my family.

I give and bequeath to my son Clement Jordan, all that Island called Richmond's Island with all the buildings on the same erected, and thereon standing, also one full third part of all my land marsh and meadow except what heretofore and hereafter given and bequeathed, with same rights & privileges as stated to Dominicus. For him and his heirs lawfully begotten of his body, and descending therefrom from generation to generation, and for want of lawful issue then to descend to the next lawful heir in my family.

I give and bequeath unto my daughter Mary Cushing the wife of Ezekiel Cushing the 300 acres land Province Grant laid out above Gorhamtown on the westerly side of the Presumscot River in the County of York, which said 300 acres of land I give and bequeath unto my daughter Mary Cushing and unto her heirs lawfully begotten of her body and descending therefrom from generation to generation, and for want of lawful issue then to descend to the next lawful heir in my family.

I give and bequeath unto my daughter Miriam Mitchel the wife of Robert Mitchel all that tract of land I purchased of John Jordan, which lies adjoining Alewive-Cove Brook on the North side thereof and contains about 40 acres, also my part of the fresh meadow lying on the Northerly side of the Brook, at the head of the old marsh. All land and marsh above mentioned given and bequeathed to my daughter Miriam Mitchel and unto the heirs lawfully begotten of her body and descending therefrom from generation to generation, and for want of lawful issue then to descend to the next lawful heir in my family.

I give and bequeath unto my daughter Hannah Jordan after the decease of her mother Joanna Jordan the Homestead containing about 150 acres with all the Houses and buildings on the same erected and standing and all the appurtenances and privileges to the same belonging, all which I give & bequeath unto my said daughter Hannah Jordan and her heirs lawfully begotten of her body, and descending therefrom from generation to generation, and for want of lawful issue then to descend to the next lawful heir in my family.

I do ordain, constitute, and appoint my dearly beloved wife Joanna Jordan my sole executor of this my last will & testament. I do desire my well beloved friends, Charles Frost, Esq. of Falmouth, the Rev. Mr. W^{m} Thompson of Scarboro' and my beloved son in law Col. Ezekiel Cushing of Falmouth, all within the aforesaid county of York to be the overseers of my last will & testament, desiring them to adhere, aid, and to advise and assist my Executor in ordering and deciding all differences that may arise on any account about this my last will & testament.

In testimony that this is my last will and testament I hereunto set my hand & seal this 10th day of June A.D. 1746.

SAMUEL[3] (Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), second son of Dominicus and Hannah (Tristram) Jordan, was born in 1684, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland Co., Maine; died Dec. 20, 1742. He married in York, Me., 1718, Olive, born May 1, 1698, and died 1763, daughter of James and Mary (Rishworth) Plaisted of Brunswick, Me. At the time of his father's death, he, then eighteen years old, with his mother and all her children, were made prisoners by the Indians, and led to Trois Riviers in Canada, where he remained prisoner for seven years—six years with the Indians, and one year with the French. After his return, some one asking the question which he liked best, Indians or French, his answer was—the Indians. He with two other white men, prisoners like himself, planned the method of escape from their captors, by the agency of an Indian woman named Mary, who led them through the woods to Casco Bay. During their journey they subsisted on roots and berries. When they arrived at the fort in Falmouth, not being known, they were refused admittance. The Indian woman climbed upon a large log, lying upon the ground a short distance from the fort, and cried out with a full voice, "I be Molly Mun, you know Molly Mun!" Some of the men in the fort recollected the name, and, after close examination, they were admitted. This must have been in 1710, or about that time. None of the Jordan family then resided at Spurwink. Samuel, no doubt, went to visit his maternal relatives at Winter Harbor, where his uncles Samuel, Nathaniel and Benjamin resided at that time. In 1717, we first find his name recorded at Winter Harbor. He commenced business there with a store for the sale of goods, and for many years his was the only store in that place. On account of his knowledge of the Indian language, acquired during his captivity, Samuel Jordan was of great service to the government in the capacity of interpreter. The following passage from Folsom's "History of Saco and Biddeford" shows the confidence reposed in him by the authorities.

The English inhabitants were alarmed by the attempts made to excite the Indians to war, and the threats thrown out by them from time to time, till at length induced by their representations, Gov. Shute, in the year 1717, summoned a conference at Arrowsic, a well known Island in the Kennebec. By a reference to the Provincial papers of New Hampshire, it appears that at the treaty of Georgetown, on Arrowsic Island, August 9, 1717, his Excellency the Governor, with quite a number of distinguished men, arrived on his Majesty's ship Squirrel. The Indians sent a message desiring to know when it would be his Excellency's pleasure that they should attend him, and he told them at three o'clock that P.M. His Excellency directed that Capt. John Giles and Mr. Samuel Jordan, interpreters of the Indian language, should be sworn to be faithful in that service, and Judge Sewall administered the oath accordingly. Among other requests made by the Indians at this conference, they asked that interpreter Jordan might remain near them to represent to his Excellency anything that might happen, to which the Governor replied, "I desire no better man." The treaty was concluded August 12, 1717. His Excellency directed the Instrument to be drawn up and annexed to the articles of their submission made at Piscataqua, which was read and interpreted to them, paragraph by paragraph, by interpreter Jordan, "and they all readily and without objection consented to the whole."

A treaty was made December, 1725, with the Penobscot and other eastern Tribes, and confirmed in the following summer at Falmouth, where Lieut. Gov. Dummer, the acting Governor of Massachusetts Bay, Messrs. Wentworth of N. H., and Mascarene of Nova Scotia, with other gentlemen, met the Penobscot chief, who appeared in behalf of his tribe. This treaty was considered the most judicious that had ever been made with the Indians, and was followed by a long cessation of hostilities. As the Penobscot chief alone was present, it was considered necessary to call another conference at the same place the succeeding year, August 6, 1726; when the sachems of the other tribes appeared and gave their assent to the articles of the treaty. Among the persons who signed the treaty on the part of the government, we find the name of Samuel Jordan of the town of Biddeford.

After the treaty of 1717, Samuel Jordan was what we might call Indian agent and interpreter, and was also agent for the government. He supplied the Indians with goods, which he ordered from the government at Boston, and they would call on him for what they wanted. He was also Captain in the militia, the following being the muster roll of his company in 1725:

Samuel Jordan, Captain; John Murch, Nathaniel Jordan, Lieutenants; Arthur Noble, Ensign; David Bryant, Edward Mory, Sergeants; Hugh Murch, Freeman Powell, Corporals; William Russell, William Wright, Joshua Hooper, Samuel Cole, John Runnalds, James Inch, William Brown, Thomas Clark, Nathaniel Davis, John Bagshaw, Israel Sabine, William Bermingham, Charles Cammell, Jacob Kel, John Reed, Hugh Murch, Leonard Dennett, John Falkner, Joseph Converse, Edward Proctor, John Frost, Jedediah Young, William Dyer, John Bryant, Henry Poindexter (dismissed), Nehemiah Pitman, Francis Pitman.

The following documents from the Massachusetts Records show the nature of his military and other service, and also the state of the times in which he lived.

Biddeford, Aug. 23^{d}, 1725.

Hon^{d} Sr:

After my duty to your Hon^{r} This may inform your Hon^{r} that I Received your Hon^{rs} order Dated Eleventh of August inst. wherein your Honor ordered mee to supply Mr. Tarbox with sufficient guard not exceeding Twelve men, to get in his hay. This may inform your Honor that Colonel Westbrook hath ordered Eleven of my men to go to the march, and I have two & twenty with me. So that if I take a sufficient guard to guard Mr. Tarbox, I shall leave the garrison naked, & now it is our only season to get our hay and we are all of us in necesity to get our hay as well as the others and not above two men in a Garrison since Colonel Westbrook hath ordered eleven of my men to go to the march I cannot supply Mr. Tarbox with a sufficient Guard, without I leave the Garrison wholly naked which is all, from your Honor^{s} most Dutiful and obedient servant.

Biddeford, June 8th, 1727.

May it please your Honour:

Having this opportunity, I thought it my duty as it concerns the Publick Interest especially at this Juncture of affairs to inform your Honour of what happened of late in this town. There being some Irish men settled in and about this place and more particularly at Saco falls. They practice y^{e} catching all sorts of Fish with a seine began last Spring & continued the same practice still, by which meaus they prevent the fish going up the Falls intǫ the fresh water ponds as usual, which has been found of great prejudice to the Indians, in as much that many of them have come & made their complaints to me, & desired that the Government might be informed thereof, that proper means might be taken effectually to prevent the same: otherwise y^{e} consequences will terminate to y^{e} disseverance of y^{e} Province as I conceive. Some of y^{e} Indians have made their application to me as I was a Town

Officer & a well-wisher to the Province's welfare. I wish the rest of the town Officers thought it our duty to forbid the aforesaid Practice notwithstanding which they continue to go out & will do so without some immediate command from y^e^ govent. So I leave the whole to y^e^ hon'd wise consideration & determination in y^e^ affairs & remain

Yo^r^ hon^d^ obet Faithful Serv't at Command

In the house of Representatives Dec 20 1727.

Read and Resolved that Mr. Treasurer Allen be and hereby is directed to send the particulars mentioned in the within Indenture to said Samuel Jordan to the value of two hundred and seventy-eight pounds, and that he inform the said Jordan that he conform to the rules and instructions in disposing of the said Goods, and return the proceeds thereof, as he had to govern himself in the sale of the goods sent him the last session of the Court.

At the time of his decease, Samuel and his eldest son were in business together. They were never known to sue or distress a customer. He built a house about 1727, which was occupied in 1831 by Deacon Waldo Hill, on the north side of the gut or strait leading into the pool, and standing in good condition in 1872, built in the style of one hundred and fifty years ago. It had a roof, long on one side and short on the other, or two-story on one side and one on the other. In 1739, he sold and conveyed to Robert Mitchel his share of land from his father's estate at Cape Elizabeth, Me., containing 143 acres.

To all people to whom these presents shall come Greeting, Know ye that I Samuel Jordan of Biddeford in the County of York, Gent. for and in consideration of the sum of £500 to me in hand paid by Robert Mitchel, Falmouth, York Co., Cordwainer, the recept whereof I do hereby acknowledge have Given, Granted, bargained sold & conveyed and by these presents do absolutely Give, Grant, bargain, Sell and convey and confirm to the said Robert Mitchel his heirs & assigns forever all my right, title, interest, claim, and demand. I have, ever had, or shall have in and unto any land or lands, marshes, meadows, tenments, hereditament & claims within the township of Falmouth aforesaid, by virtue of my being a son of and heir to Dominicus Jordan late of Falmouth Gent. deceased, who was a son and heir of Rev. Robert Jordan late of Falmouth, Cler. Deceased, will all buildings on the same erected on any part thereof.

Witness Executed 12 May 1739.

Harvard Coll. 1735, and was ordained minister of Mattapoiset, the second parish of Rochester, Oct. 29, 1740. Having devoted much attention to the study of physic, he, in 1744, commenced the practice, and was the principal physician in Mattapoiset till his dismission in 1765. He was afterwards installed, April 18, 1770, at Monument Ponds, in Plymouth, where he passed the remainder of his life," continuing to preach until a few days before his death, which occurred Nov. 4, 1803. His wife survived him only a few months. "He had preached about sixty-five years, and during that time kept a journal designed to promote his improvement in Christian excellence, which he left behind him in about seven thousand pages of short-hand. Extracts from it are preserved in the Piscataqua magazine. He was one of the best of men, being distinguished for meekness, humility and piety. He published a sermon on leaving Mattapoiset, and one on the subject of mortality."—Allen's Biog. Dict. See also Alden's Coll. Epitaph, vol. i. p. 239, and Missionary Magazine.

Sketch of Winter Harbor, now Biddeford; from Folsom's "Saco and Biddeford."

For nearly thirty years no records of meetings for the transaction of town affairs are found. The first record after this long interval shows that the inhabitants had ceased to act as a municipal body, and describes the measures taken to re-organize in that capacity. It is as follows: "March 15, 1717. The inhabitants of Saco thought fit to make choice of officers as in other towns, by reason of a public charge arising in the town, for defraying public charges, as making a rate for the payment of Rev. Mr. Short, and other charges that may arise; and at the meeting of the inhabitants it is a clear vote that Humphrey Scammon is town clerk, and that Mr. Andrew Brown, Richard Stimpson and H. Scammon be selectmen and assessors." Capt. John Lane was at this time the commander of Fort Mary, situated on Parker's Neck, Winter Harbor, where he died not long after. He was born in Limerick, Ireland. Col. Isaac Lane of Hollis, York Co., Me., was his grandson. John Gray was the successor in command of the Fort. At a town meeting in July, William Dyer was elected attorney, or town agent, for one year. The next year, 1718, the last meeting of the inhabitants on both sides of the River under the old name of Saco, was holden at the house of John Stackpole, when Ebenezer Hill, Humphrey Scammon and Richard Stimpson were chosen selectmen. The record is found of the first town meeting held in Biddeford, March 17, 1719. Benjamin Haley, Ebenezer Hill and Humphrey Scammon were chosen selectmen. In May it was voted that H. Scammon appear and represent this town before the great and general court at Boston.

In 1723, Col. Thomas Westbrook was appointed to command the forces that year. He came to Winter Harbor with a body of men in May, and supplied Fort Mary and the garrisons in the town with men and provisions. The fort was commanded at the time by Capt. Ward. The following extract from the journal of Col. Westbrook furnishes an account of his operations at this place. "May 8th, arrived at Winter Harbor; supplied Capt. Ward with provisions and other stores for his company. Lieut. Dominicus Jordan being here, supplied him with 76 days' provisions for five men posted at his garrison at Spurwink. May 9th, supplied Richard Stimpson with provisions for five men posted at his garrison for 76 days. Proceeded to visit the several garrisons in the town, accompanied by the principal part of the inhabitants, with whom I consulted on the properest method to be taken for the security of the inhabitants. Returned through the woods to Mr. Samuel Jordan's [at Winter Harbor]. On my return, gave Capt. Ward orders to post men at the several garrisons as follows: at Mr. Hill's, 3; at Stackpole's, 4; at Tarbox's, 4; at Dyer's, 3; at Capt. Sharp's, 3. The men were ordered to obey the commands of the masters of the garrisons where they were posted, doing their duty of watching and warding until further orders; and not to absent themselves at any time without liberty. May 10th, posted four men at John Brown's garrison, at Saco Falls; supplied him with provisions and amunition. Sabbath day 12th, Rev. Mr. Eveleth preached two sermons at the fort." Of the garrisons mentioned in the journal, Hill's was on the Ferry lane between the house of Capt. J. Lassell and the main road. Stackpole's was on the spot where Judge Rishworth Jordan afterward erected a house, occupied in 1831 by his youngest son Ralph Tristram Jordan, Esq., and in 1878 by Robert Elliot Jordan, son of Ralph Tristram Jordan. Dyer's and Tarbox's garrisons were in the lower part of the town, near the pool. Capt. Sharp lived on Rendezvous point, near Haley's gut. The cellar of the house still remains. The garrison on the eastern side in all probability is John Brown's, and appears to have been situated where the store of Jonathan King stood in 1831. Within the recollection of persons of not very advanced age, the remains of a fortification have been seen on that spot, which is called Forthill. The ground has been since much levelled. The stone fort at Saco Falls was on the west side of the river.

In 1719 the selectmen of Biddeford were empowered to agree with a master builder to build a meeting-house and to exchange town lands with Benjamin Haley for a meeting-house lot, and burying grounds. The dimensions of the house to be 35 feet in length, and 30 feet in breadth. The building was not completed till a few years after. The pews, sold to the highest bidder, June, 1727, were disposed of as follows: 1. The allotment from the men's doors to the women's stairs, to H. Scammon, £18. 2. From the men's doors to men's stairs, to Samuel Jordan, £16. 3. Next, to E. Hill for £9. The next, to Justice Gray for £7. The remainder for £7 each to Capt. J. Sharp, R. Edgecomb, Samuel Cole, P. Thatcher, and Lieut. J. Stackpole. The master builder was Benjamin Haley, afterwards deacon of the church. Sept. 2, 1729, a committee was instructed to invite Mr. Willard to preach the gospel unto the inhabitants of this town with the same salary that had been paid other ministers. In July, 1730, the town voted to call Mr. Willard. The invitation was renewed in May in the following terms: "Voted that Rev. Samuel Willard shall have (if he please to accept) the sum of £110 salary, the strangers' contribution, and the town to build him a parsonage house, together with the benefit and improvement of 100 acres of parsonage land, and to board himself during his ministry. Voted that Capt. John Gray, Esq., Capt. Samuel Jordan, and John Stackpole be chosen a committee to desire the Rev. Mr. Samuel Willard's answer."

Mr. Willard accepted the offer of the committee by letter. The proposals of Mr. Willard, "all and singular, were voted in the affirmative" by the town. There is no record of a congregational church being gathered in the town before this period. A short time previous to the ordination of Mr. Willard, the following individuals associated themselves together for this purpose and constituted the first church in Biddeford: John Gray, Samuel Jordan, Humphrey Scammon, Ebenezer Hill, John Sharpe, Pendleton Fletcher, Benjamin Haley, John Tarr, Robert Whipple, Mark Shepherd, Thomas Gilpatrick, Samuel Hinkley. Messrs. Hill and Haley were chosen Deacons. The following record of their proceedings at that time is the only one preserved. "Friday, Aug. 14, 1730, Mr. Haley voted moderator by the brethren of the church. 1. The ordination of Mr. Samuel Willard was voted to be the last Wednesday of September. 2. Voted to send to the churches of Falmouth, Scarborough, Wells, York, Berwick, and Weymouth. 3. Voted that the selectmen be desired to call a town meeting for their concurrence." The ordination of Mr. Willard accordingly took place on Sept. 30th, 1730, when a council convened composed of Rev. Thomas Smith of Falmouth, Rev. William Thompson of Scarborough, Rev. Samuel Jefferds of Wells, Rev. Samuel Moody of York, Rev. Jeremiah Wise of Berwick, and Rev. Thomas Paine of Weymouth. The sermon was preached by Mr. Paine, who took for his text Acts. xxvi. 17, 18. This sermon was soon after printed in Boston. The town voted to defray all the expenses of the ordination. The salary of Mr. Willard increased from year to year, until it amounted to £175 per annum. Rev. Samuel Willard died at Kittery on the Lord's day Oct. 26, 1741. He was sick only two days, with a disorder in his throat. He had exchanged pulpits with Rev. Mr. Rogers of Kittery, and he died at Mr. Rogers's home at Kittery. Mr. Willard was born at Jamaica, W. I., in 1705. He was considered a very excellent man and a pure christian by all who knew him.

NATHANIEL[3] (Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), youngest son of Dominicus and Hannah (Tristram) Jordan, was born in 1696, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine; died in 1783–4. He married, first, in 1717, Dorothy . . . . . ; married, second, 1741, Mary Cutlevier. Very little is known of his history. In 1703 he was made prisoner by the Indians, together with his mother and all her children, and taken to Canada. He was probably redeemed from captivity at the peace of 1713, returned to Spurwink, and established himself on the estate he inherited from his father, as appears by the following deposition of Nov. 17, 1772.

The Deposition of Nathaniel Jordan, of full age. Testifies and says, That he has been well acquainted with the inhabitants in Spurwink since the year one thousand seven hundred and thirteen. He very well remembers, that in the year one thousand seven hundred and twenty seven, he the s[d] Nathaniel was with Dominicus Jordan of Falmouth (now deceased) in the running out of his land (that was his father's in his life time) above Spurwink marshes in the township of Falmouth, by Nicholas Cole Surveyor, and the land described in said Coles's plan. I the said Nathaniel, have cut off hoop poles, also bark, wood and timber, under the said Dominicus; also built a log house on said land, and employed a number of men at sundry times to work on said land under him; and further I the said Nathaniel do know that the said Dominicus had acquired peaceable possession of the land as set forth in Coles's plan during his the said Dominicus's life time, and further that the said Maj. Dominicus Jordan has had quiet and peaceable possession of the premises ever since the decease of his father.

In 1716 he joined with the other heirs of Rev. Robert Jordan in conveying to Robert Deering the tract of 2000 acres known as the "Nonesuch Farm" (see page 85); and in 1731, he, with his brothers Dominicus and Samuel (the sons of Dominicus[2]), conveyed by deed all their right and title in the abovesaid tract to their sister Elizabeth, wife of Capt. Humphrey Scammon of Saco.

To all people to whom these presents shall come greeting. Know ye That We Dominicus Jordan of Falmouth and Samuel Jordan of Biddeford and Nathaniel Jordan of Falmouth in the County of York in the Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, Gents., for and in consideration of y[e] love and goodwill and natural affection w[h] we have and do bear towards our loving Sister Elizabeth Scammon of the town of Biddeford, Province and County aforesaid, being the wife of Capt. Humphrey Scammon, have given, granted, and by these presents, do hereby clearly and absolutely give and grant unto y^e^ said Elizabeth Scammon, her heirs, Executors, Administrators, all and singular y^e^ right and title y^t^ we have to a certain tract of land lying & being in Scarborough in y^e^ county of York, Butted on Nonesuch River on y^e^ South and Extending back into the woods, commonly called & known as y^e^ Nonesuch farm, containing 2000 Acres with meadows, be it more or less, as will more fully appear by our Hon. Grandfather Robert Jordan's last will and testament, bearing date Jan^y^ y^e^ 28 day, 1678. Further more we y^e^ sd. Dominicus Jordan, Samuel Jordan & Nathaniel Jordan do give and grant all y^e^ rights & titles y^t^ we have to y^e^ above s^d^ tract of land or farm, together with all y^e^ property, privileges, commodities & Appurtenances whatsoever to y^e^ s^d^ tract of land or farm in any wise belonging or appertaining thereto.

In witness where of we have hereunto set our hands & seals this tenth day of May one thousand seven hundred and thirty one.

Sir:

I have herewith inclosed a commission to you to command a company of foot guards to consist of sixty good and efficient men which you must raise in your parts to attend me at the fort at St George's River at the Interview I have determined to have with the Eastern Indians upon the 28 of this instant July. Lest you should not be able to enlist so many efficient men, I have enclosed you a warrant to impress them or as many as you may want, which you must not use but upon necessity. See that your men are well furnished with arms & amunition also (if it may be) and fail not of being ready with your company in all respects well appointed at the time and place above mentioned. I have also inclosed Establishment of the wages for the company which will be a good encouragement for enlisting. You must write me of your proceedings in this business as you have opportunity. I have sent you two blank commissions which you must fill up to such persons as you judge most suitable.

CLEMENT[4] (Dominicus,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), third son of Major Dominicus and Joanna (Bray) Jordan, was born April 24, 1720, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland Co., Maine; died April 5, 1789, in the 69th year of his age, and was buried on the same plantation where he was born, an upright slate-stone marking the place. He married, first, April 29, 1744, Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. Benjamin Allen, pastor of Second Parish Church in Falmouth, Me., now North Church, Cape Elizabeth. She died May 23, 1752, aged 36 years, and was buried at Second Parish Church, by the side of her father. Clement married, second, Dec. 20, 1755, Sarah (Gray), widow of Elisha Dunham. She died April, 1782, aged 50 years, and was buried by the side of her husband. Clement married, third, April 11, 1783, Sarah Wentworth. By the will of his father, Clement became the owner of Richmond's Island, where he made his residence and where a number of his children were born. He then removed to his farm on the main land, just opposite to Richmond's Island, and here his first wife Elizabeth died. Tradition says of Clement Jordan that he was always looked up to by his neighbors for advice, as a counsellor in public trouble, and as a healer of disease. He was nearly always chosen on the committee of safety in the troublesome times with the Indians, and with the mother country previous to the Revolution. As a doctor, he had a wide-spread practice, treating diseases principally with herbs and roots collected by himself from the earth. His daughter Elizabeth has been heard to say that she with the rest of the children had spent days and weeks collecting them for him. His salves and ointments were made by himself or by his directions, and his patients came from far and near, even from Boston, to have their fever-sores, ulcers and other bad sores cured. As there was no way of travelling in those days, except on horseback or on foot, there were more or less persons stopping at the house the year round for advice and treatment. He was very zealous about attending meeting. His large family of children were always required to go, and having no conveyance, had to go afoot, the distance to church being five miles. Children by 1st wife, born at Richmond's Island, Maine:

858. ACHSAH,[5] b. 1745; m. Rev. Enos Hitchcock of R. I. No children.

RISHWORTH[4] (Samuel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), eldest son of Captain Samuel and Olive (Plaisted) Jordan, was born in 1719, at Winter Harbor, now Biddeford, York Co., Maine; died April 18, 1808, aged 89 years. He was six feet in height, broad shouldered, of a light complexion, and possessed of a very loud, strong voice. His form was very erect until bowed by old age. He wore small clothes, a three-cornered hat and a wig. He married in Kittery, 1742, Abigail, born 1720, died Oct. 25, 1794, daughter of Col. Timothy Gerrish. Rishworth lived in the lower part of the town, in the house since occupied by his son Ralph-Tristram and by his grandson Robert-Elliot Jordan. Early in the war of the Revolution he was raised to the bench of the Court of Common Pleas, of which he subsequently became Chief Justice, and was universally esteemed for his able and upright discharge of the duties of that office. For more than half a century Judge Jordan took an active and prominent part in the affairs of the town and church, enjoying the confidence and respect of the inhabitants. He was a member of the Congregational Church from early manhood. The autograph here shown is copied from a deed dated October 22, 950. Mercy,[5] b. Jan. 30, 1759; d. Aug. 11, 1849, at Ellsworth; m. Capt. Samuel Hovey, who had a family of children. She was a woman of rather uncommon intellect. She was about twelve years old when the tea was thrown into Boston Harbor, and always had a vivid recollection about it, and retained for many years in a small vial some of the famous tea.

TRISTRAM[4] (Samuel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), youngest son of Capt. Samuel and Olive (Plaisted) Jordan, was born May 13, 1731, at Winter Harbor, now Biddeford, York Co., Maine; died November 1, 1821. He married, first, in Berwick, 1749, Hannah, born July 24, 1730, died July 10, 1775, daughter of Capt. Ichabod Goodwin. He marrried, second, in Falmouth, December, 1778, Dorcas . . . . . , who died December 19, 1781, without issue. He marrried, third, in Berwick, May 21, 1784, Hannah Frost, who died September 26, 1789. Tristram Jordan was eleven years old when his father died. His eldest brother, Rishworth, administered upon the estate of his father, and was guardian of his brother Tristram. Folsom says: "Among the first merchants or traders of whom we have any account, on the east side of Saco River, at the falls, were Tristram Jordan, Andrew Bradstreet, Thomas Cutts, Thomas Donald, David King. Col. Jordan married, 1749, when but 18 years of age, and took the Pepperell House. In 1754, was one of the selectmen of the town, although but 23 years of age, and about the same time received a commission as Captain of militia, an office, which it was not customary at that period to bestow on young men. He was a thorough business man, industrious and enterprising, not only in business, but in the church. He was elected Senator by the County of York to the Massachusetts Legislature, 1787, and Selectman of the town from 1754 to 1762. Col. Jordan removed from the falls to his estate at Deep Brook, two miles north on the Ruxton road, about the close of the Revolutionary war, where he died, 1821, aged 90 years. He was eminently the 'father of the town'; no other individual was so often intrusted with the direction of its affairs, or exercised an equal degree of influence during the early period of its separate incorporation. At a later date Col. Jordan was best known as a magistrate, having performed the greater part of the duties of a Justice of the Peace, for the east side of the river, until quite advanced in age. By the council of Massachusetts, 1776, he was appointed Colonel." Children:

He was born in Scarborough, was the son of Richard King, Esq., a successful merchant prior to the Revolutionary war; of the five children, Cyrus was the youngest. He was prepared for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., and entered Columbia College in the city of New York in 1790. He graduated with the highest honors in that institution, and then commenced the study of law with his brother in that city. To complete his professional studies he entered the office of Judge Mellen in Biddeford, Me. He began the practice of law in Saco. In October, 1797, by Rev. Mr. Fairfield, he was married to Hannah, the eldest daughter of Capt. Seth Storer of Saco. Possessing brilliant and highly cultivated powers of mind, united with habits of patience and zealous application, Mr. King soon rose to eminence in his profession. As an advocate he was unrivalled, his style of speaking being elevated and commanding, and rich in the higher graces of polished oratory, while at the same time argumentative and convincing. He was the first regular attorney in Saco. In 1812, Mr. King was elected a representative in Congress, and retained his seat until 1816. He died suddenly April 25, 1817, at the age of 44 years.

A letter from his son relates: "When the Revolution commenced in April, 1775, my father was 13 years old. In Dec. following he joined the army as a drummer boy in Col. Poor's regiment. In 1777, he was at Still-water, N. Y., in Gen. Rickett's Division, and was at the taking of Burgoyne, and assisted in guarding his troops to Cambridge, Mass. In 1778, was in Col. Wadsworth's Regiment in Rhode Island. I have often heard him say he was in the retreat on Long Island. In 1780 he was stationed at West Point, N. Y., and on taking of Maj. Andre he was one of the guard over him from the Point up to the guard-house. When I went to West Point as a cadet in 1829, my father went with me, and took me over the whole ground and related many interesting incidents, with regard to Gen. Washington, Arnold and other officers at that time. He settled in Saco 1786, lived there 53 years, as school teacher, merchant, and collector of customs, an office which he held until '1829." JOSHUA[4] (Nathaniel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), son of Nathaniel and Dorothy Jordan, was born in 1736, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland Co., Maine. He married March 24, 1763, at Cape Elizabeth, Catharine Jordan (No. 53). Mr. Jordan was a man of about 6 feet in height, well proportioned, strong and muscular, and of great endurance. At the commencement of the Revolutionary war in 1775, he had a large family of children, but when every man was wanted to enrol his name to fight for liberty he left all, and the records of Massachusetts show that he was enrolled. He commanded a company of men November 20, 1778. His company was one of Col. Peter Noyes's Regiment. In 1779 he had command of a company in Col. Jonathan Mitchell's Regiment. On the expedition against the enemy at Penobscot, from July 7 to September 25, 1779, his name heads the pay-roll as Captain, made out for two months, eighteen days. Later in life he became the owner of part of Richmond's Island, and there he had his residence for a number of years, and there he died in his chair. He had been afflicted with the asthma for some years, so that he could not sleep in a bed. Children, born at Cape Elizabeth:

1065. DOROTHY,[5] b. Aug. 29, 1764; m. June 29, 1784, at Cape Elizabeth, Nathaniel, son of Jeremiah and Elizabeth (Cox) Jordan (line of Jeremiah).

1066.+WILLIAM,[5] } twins; b. June 8, 1770; { m. Eunice Jordan.
1067.+JOSHUA,[5] } { m. Abigail Jordan.

1068.+DANIEL,[5] b. Dec. 7, 1773; m. 1797, Ann McKenney.

1069. EBENEZER,[5] b. Feb. 9, 1778; m. Sept. 15, 1810. Polly W. Jordan (No. 623); was drowned but a short time after his marriage while fording the channel between Richmond's Island and the main land. This channel, nearly one mile wide at high water, is an easy ford in good weather at low tide. He owned at the time of his death fifty acres of land on the northerly end of Richmond's Island, as per deed from his father, Capt. Joshua Jordan, dated 1808. Left no children.

1070.+JAMES,[5] b. Aug. 20, 1780; d. Jan. 28, 1866; m. Martha Robinson.

1071.+NATHANIEL,[5] b. Oct. 15, 1782; d. March 19, 1856; m. Dec. 27, 1808, Esther Jordan.

1072. CATHARINE,[5] b. Nov. 21, 1784; m. May 24, 1806, at Cape Elizabeth, Nathaniel Jordan (No. 1078).

BENJAMIN[4] (Nathaniel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), youngest son of Nathaniel and Dorothy Jordan, was born in 1738, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland Co., Maine; died 1814, at Cape Elizabeth. He married, first, May 12, 1763, Hannah Weiman; married, second, November 1, 1779, widow Abigail Peables. He settled on the northerly side of Spurwink River, on a farm of fifty acres, being a part of the estate belonging to his grandfather Dominicus, which in the division of 1754 was alloted to his father, Nathaniel. In 1782, Benjamin received from his father a deed of this land:

Know all men by these presents, That I, Nathaniel Jordan of Cape Elizabeth, in the County of Cumberland, State of Massachusetts in N. E., Gentl[m], For and in consideration of sixty pounds, Lawful money to me in hand paid by my beloved son Benj[a]. Jordan of Cape Elizabeth aforesaid Gentl[m]. the receipt whereof I do hereby acknowledge, have given, granted, bargained, sold and conveyed, and by these presents do grant, sell and convey and confirm unto him the said Benjamin Jordan, his heirs and assigns forever, a certain tract of land lying and being on the Northerly Side of Spurwink River, in Cape Elizabeth aforesaid, containing fifty acres, Bounded and adjoining on the Easterly Side by land belonging to the heirs of Robert Mitchel late of Cape Elizabeth aforesaid. It being the same fifty acres of land set off to me as my portion of the estate of my Honor[d] father Dominicus Jordan late of Falmouth, deceased, "above the marshes," so called, be the same more or less. Likewise four acres of Salt Marsh adjoining said land, be the same more or less.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this eighteenth day of March, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-two.

Signed Sealed & delivered in presence of us.

After his second marriage, with the widow Peables, he left his farm on the north side of the river and went to live with his new wife on the farm now (1879) occupied by Michael N. Peables, and carried on both farms till his son Nathaniel became old enough to take the former. At the commencement of the war of the Revolution we find his name on the Massachusetts Records. On December 31, 1775, he appears on the muster-roll as Lieut. Benjamin Jordan. He was 1st Lieut. under Capt. David Strout, and was stationed on the sea-coast of Cape Elizabeth. In the House of Representatives, November 18, 1776, choice was made of Benjamin Jordan as 1st Lieut. for a company of matrosses stationed at Cape Elizabeth, James Leach, Capt. After the war he returned to his farm again. He was a farmer, and resided at Cape Elizabeth, Maine. Children by 1st wife:

1073.+EBENEZER,[5] b. May 13, 1764; d. March 24, 1854; m. March 2, 1786, Sarah McKenney.

EBENEZER[4] (Nathaniel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), eldest son of Nathaniel and Mary (Cutlevier) Jordan, was born in 1742, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland Co., Maine. He married, first, March 5, 1765, Lucy Tarbox, born at Biddeford, Maine. He married, second, Judith Treworgy, mother of Betsey T. Treworgy who married his son, Solomon. Ebenezer was a farmer, and lived in early life at Biddeford, Maine, with one of his relatives. About 1770, he moved into the wilderness with his wife and two children, and settled upon a piece of land about two miles from the mouth of Union River, then a plantation, now, Ellsworth, in Hancock Co., Maine. At that time there were no roads, all communication and travel being carried on by water. The county was inhabited by wild animals only. He was a man of an iron constitution, and a strong will to accomplish what he began. In height he was five feet, eleven inches, broad shouldered and well proportioned, and of a light complexion. He was a man for the situation. To make a home, he built a small log-house, and in a few years he could raise his own bread and meat. He toiled on, and toiled ever, to the end of his days; raised nine children, all sons. In about two years, or 1772, his brother Solomon came from Cape Elizabeth, Maine, to Union River, with his wife and one or two children, and located on land by the side of him, only a small brook separating their lands. Joseph Tarbox Jordan, a great grand-son of Ebenezer, now resides on the old homestead farm, made by Ebenezer one hundred years ago. Children:

1082.+Nathaniel,[5] b. Jan. 28, 1766; d. June 9, 1831.
1083.+John,[5] b. April 21, 1768; d. Feb. 1, 1854; m. Dorcas Lord.
1084.+Ebenezer,[5] b. May 3, 1771; m. Phebe Smith.
1085. Cornelius,[5] b. July 5, 1773; d. young.
1086. Ezekiel,[5] b. April 30, 1775; d. young.
1087.+Solomon,[5] b. July 15, 1778; d. May 7, 1849; m. 1803, Betsey Townsend Treworgy.
1088. Nahum,[5] b. May 2, 1781, at Ellsworth; d. July 14, 1807, at Ellsworth; m. at Ellsworth, Rachel Joy, b. Nov. 15, 1785, d. Aug. 20, 1835. Children:
1089. 1. Nahum,[6] b. Nov. 22, 1807, at Ellsworth; d. March 22, 1831, æ. 23 yrs. and 4 mos. None of Nahum Jordan's descendants are living.
1090.+Joseph,[5] b. Jan. 16, 1784; m. 1808, Mary Tinker.
1091.+Loring,[5] b. Jan. 4, 1788; m. Rebecca Joy.

DOMINICUS[5] (Dominicus,[4] Dominicus,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), only son of Capt. Dominicus and Phebe (Gray) Jordan, was born April 19, 1740, at Falmouth, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland Co., Maine; died 1834, aged 94. He married in 1760, Susanna Simonton of Falmouth. He was a farmer, and settled on the estate of his father. Three of the same name before him, in succession, had occupied the estate, which was originally bequeathed by will of Rev. Robert Jordan[1] to Dominicus[2] as one thousand acres of land. Dominicus[5] was the administrator of his father's estate. He purchased of his sisters all their right to his father's real estate (see page 171). None of this real estate passed out of his family during his life. In personal appearance he had light complexion, with blue eyes and brown hair. He was 5 feet, 9 inches in height, and his ordinary weight was 160 pounds, possessing strong muscular powers, and of great endurance. He was never known to be sick until he was 90 years old. He always owned a clipper sail boat and one superior horse. He was considered a good sailor and horseman. Those who knew him well say, he was never known to refuse a challenge for a race with either, notwithstanding he sometimes came off second best. At one time he held a commission as ensign in the militia. When eighty years of age he could ride on horseback like a man of twenty-five. He never allowed any one to contradict him. He was what might be called an independent man, relying always on his own resources. Children, born at Falmouth, Me.:

1155. Lydia,[6] b. March 22, 1762; m. March 12, 1779, at Cape Elizabeth, Seth Libby of Scarborough. Children:

Matthew moved from Cape Elizabeth to the plantation, now Webster, about 1790, and took up a piece of land. The deed came from Mr. Spofford, including one hundred acres, covered with green timber, near the present village of Sebattusville, where he made a farm and resided until his decease. He preserved with great care a very fine growth of pine timber upon the tract he first purchased, all of which was cut off and manufactured soon after his death. Children:
1175. 1. DOMINICUS,[7] b. at Webster; m. Lydia, dau. of Phineas Jones, an early settler of Webster. Children:

for many years, during the latter part of his father's life, his father lived with him. Well may this farm be called the old homestead. In 1877, it was in the possession of the grandchildren of John Gray Jordan. Mr. Jordan was an industrious farmer; his wife had the virtues of a good mother, and their numerous family of children were highly respected. Children, born at Cape Elizabeth:

Mr. Jordan was an industrious, enterprising business man, and, like his predecessors, had a great passion for a horse and gun. On one of his excursions he by accident shot off his left arm at the shoulder, but this did not prevent him from gunning. He lived quite a number of years after the accident, and managed his farm, and raised a large family. Children:

Mial Jordan was a man of a quiet, unassuming character, with no desire for political life, yet has filled several offices of trust in his native town; a very strong temperence man, he was chosen in Feb. 1853, on a committee to prosecute all liquor dealers in the town. Several years ago, at the urgent request of their son Rosco Green Jordan, and accompanied by their son-in-law Erastus W. Deering and wife Mary A. (Jordan), Mial and his wife Mehitable went to Chenoa, Ill., the residence of their son, where they intended to settle and make it their home. But after a year's trial, Mial's wife became very sick; and growing wearied, as did also her daughter Mrs. Deering, of seeing the interminable prairie, and longing to behold the woods, hills and valleys of their native place, they decided to return to Denmark, their old residence. At the thought of returning to her old home, Mrs. Jordan began to recover, and soon regained her usual health; and, being desirous of doing something to show her gratitude to God for the recovery of her health and her return home, it being the first and only time she had travelled beyond New England, conceived the idea that she would endeavor to have a church built. Her husband was first consulted, and he gave the land near the school-house for the purpose of raising and completing a meeting-house. The next step was to raise means to build a house. Faith, always the aid of an earnest worker, stimulated Mrs. Jordan, and she began to spin and weave, knit and sew. At the same time she developed her plans to her neighbors and friends, and they formed a society and elected proper officers. This society was enlarged, and they had friends who came to their aid. Faith and works went hand in hand together, and the building was soon finished. Mrs. Jordan was at last successful, and had the happiness of seeing a fine Methodist church erected through her efforts. This was dedicated in 1875. It has a seating capacity of 500.

At the age of 12, Joshua Jordan left his native town, went to Boston, entered as apprentice to a brick-mason, and served a successful apprenticeship; then went to New Orleans, and engaged in merchandising for some years, then went to Indiana with the proceeds from his business in New Orleans. He purchased lands in Indiana, where he married June 19, 1836, Adelia Gregory, born Nov. 24, 1813, at Utica, Oneida Co., N. Y. She died Jan. 31, 1875, at San Francisco, Cal.; a woman of great fortitude and firmness of purpose; a devoted believer in the scriptures; belonging to and a very active member in the Baptist church. She loved her family, and would make any sacrifice for them.

[From the Russian River Flag:]—"We are pained to chronicle the death of one of the oldest residents, a respected and substantial citizen. The subject of this sketch was born in So. Thomaston. At the early age of 12, he went to Boston and learned a trade of brick mason, then went to New Orleans, La., and engaged in merchandising; with the proceeds of a few years he went to Indiana and purchased lands and made a home, married Miss Adelia Gregory, a farmer's daughter, of Utica, Oneida Co., N. Y. At La Porte, Indiana, nine children were born to them—7 sons and 2 daughters—the daughters and 4 sons died young. He, seeking for a healthier climate, in March, 1853, arrived in San Francisco, Cal., with his eldest living son, Addison-D. They first located at Folsom, soon removing to Liberty near Petaluma, Sonoma Co. In 1856, he had occasion to visit Alexander Valley near Healdsburg; its climate and scenery so charmed him that he made up his mind to make it his future home. He first engaged in milling, erecting the well known Flouring Mill which was twice burned. He then engaged in farming and stock raising. At the time of his death was in this business. Had long been complaining with a chronic disease, of which the physician's skill was not adequate to the cure. He died on Tuesday, Sept. 16, 1873, A.M., at the ripe age of 66 years, passing away calmly as if going to sleep."

In 1830, Dominicus Jordan represented the town of Raymond in the State Legislature. He removed to Raymond Village, 1831, and again represented the town of Raymond in the State Legislature in 1831, and again in 1834. He removed to the village of Gorham in 1841, for the purpose of securing better advantages for the education of his children. While in Gorham, he was engaged principally in mercantile business. He was a member of Gov. John Fairfield's council for the years 1842 and 1843, and represented the town of Gorham in the State Legislature in 1844. He removed to the village of Depere, Brown Co., Wis., in 1851; here he held the office of President of the town. This office in a western town or village is similar to the office of Mayor of a city. He held various other positions of trust at various times. He was always a Democrat. He was noted for his strict integrity, his energy and firmness of character, and his good, sound, practical common sense. He was a self-made man, his education when young having been quite limited. His complexion was light, and his hair of a sandy color, his size large, and he was well formed.

[From the Portland Daily Press of Dec. 15, 1880]:—"We are called upon this morning to chronicle the death of Hon. Samuel Jordan of Deering, the sad event occurring yesterday morning, at ten o'clock, at his residence at Woodfords, after a gradual breaking up of the system which had been going on for several years past. His end was peaceful, and he passed away without pain. The Jordan family is one of the oldest in the state. Rev. Robert Jordan, an Episcopal clergyman, who came here with his parish from England nearly two and a half centuries ago (1640), and settled at Richmond's Island, Cape Elizabeth, was their ancestor. This clergyman married Sarah, only daughter of Mr. John Winter of Richmond's Island, who was at that time the director of the colony. From the six sons of this marriage almost all the Jordans in the country have descended. The deceased, and subject of this sketch, was born in Raymond (now Casco), in the northern part of the county, in 1805. He was educated at Hebron Academy where he was fitted for West Point, to which he had been appointed by Governor Paris, then in Congress. Objections were made to his entering upon a military career by his mother, and in deference to her wishes he took up mercantile pursuits. While yet very young, therefore, he entered upon a successful manufacturing business in Westbrook, now Deering. During his business life he held many places of trust, among which was the Presidency of the Westbrook bank for several years. He was one of the Board of Directors of the Atlantic & St. Lawrence Railway Co., and was also interested in various well-remembered enterprises connected with the business history of his times. In politics he was a staunch Democrat, and several times represented his party and town in the Legislature. His political influence was always sufficient to make him a leader, and among the recognitions of political services he enjoyed the distinction of being the last Democratic Postmaster of Portland, which place he held from 1857 to 1861. Mr Jordan was married Nov. 7, 1832, to Eunice Quinby Seal, daughter of Capt. Thomas Seal and Ann Frost of Westbrook. Mrs. Jordan died May 23, 1863. They had eight children. Dominicus died an infant, and Dr. Henry I. died at Stillwater, Minn., in 1870. The survivors are Emily F., living at home; Horace M., a journalist, and at present assistant editor of the Boston Traveller; Mrs. Jane W. Thompson, Deering; Arthur W., of Deering and Portland, merchant; Edward C., of Portland, civil engineer, who married a daughter of Hon. W. W. Thomas; and Mrs. Isabel Sewall, wife of the cashier of the First National Bank, Wiscasset.

"In recent years, Mr. Jordan has been little in active business, giving his attention chiefly to the management of his extensive landed estate in Deering, and carrying on no business outside of the agricultural operations that pertained to the management of his farm property. Mr. Jordan was a man of more than ordinary character and force, and had he been educated with a view to a public career would have been a leader among men anywhere. In mind and body he was sturdy and strong, but always frank and self-possessed. Tenacious of his own views and convictions he was always manly and large hearted in his intercourse with others—belonging to that type of men whose natures are so virile that their very faults are never despicable. His opinions were always sincerely sought in all matters of public concern, and were never for a moment misunderstood or lightly treated. He believed in the hearty and prompt contribution of individual thought to the current of public discussion, and so filled the full measure of a citizen's duty, and died in the fulness of years, beloved of family and friends; and on every hand will be remembered as a brave, able and honest man, and a splendid type of the old New England stock which breathed into all our institutions the breath of its own courage and hopefulness. It would seem here a fitting thing to call to mind a few of Mr. Jordan's co-workers in the affairs of his town and his time—Mr. Levi Morrill, who has been dead several years; Capt. Jonathan Smith, now very advanced in years, and retired from active life; and Mr. Joseph Walker who has lately resided in this city, and who, with clear head and light heart carries the burden of his four-score years—men whom to lose were to miss indeed."

JOSEPH[5] (Rishworth,[4] Samuel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), third son of Judge Rishworth and Abigail (Gerrish) Jordan, was born Feb. 7, 1759, at Biddeford, York Co., Maine; died March 2, 1820, at Hollis, Me. He married Jan. 22, 1789, Mary, born Jan. 5, 1770, eldest daughter of Major Samuel and Abigail (Frost) Leighton of Kittery, Me.; she died May 30, 1853, at the residence of her son Joseph[6] of Passadumkeag, Me., and lies buried on the north side of Passadumkeag Stream, a short distance from the Penobscot River, a marble upright slab marking the place. Joseph Jordan and wife Mary, after their marriage, came to the house of his father, Judge Rishworth Jordan of Biddeford. This house is still in good condition. In the early spring they left Biddeford to make a home for themselves in the wilderness; crossed Saco River at the ferry, one mile from the mouth of the river. All travel from the east crossed the river at this ferry, there being only a pathway at that time from the ferry to Salmon Falls, about seventeen miles, most of the way by the river bank. The west side of Salmon Falls was an entire wilderness, and only one house on the east side, about half a mile above where the bridge now stands, belonging to Capt. Samuel Merrill, standing a few years since. Col. Nathaniel Sammon had a small store on the hill, near where Capt. Joel Marshall's blacksmith-shop stood in 1825; these were the only buildings at that time in that region of the county. Mr. Jordan and wife made their home with Capt. Merrill till a piece of land could be claimed, and a frame house covered sufficiently for them to move into before winter set in. The land where he made his farm was situated on the west side of Saco River, about one mile above Salmon Falls, a deed of it being received from his father in 1794. It is from this deed the accompanying autograph is copied.

MELATIAH[5] (Samuel,[4] Samuel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), only son of Samuel and Mercy (Bourn) Jordan, was born in 1753, at Biddeford, York Co., Maine; died Dec. 23, 1818, at Ellsworth, Hancock Co., Me. He married Aug. 20, 1776, at Ellsworth, Elizabeth Jellison. Melatiah Jordan came east with his father for the purpose of trade; commenced in trade and milling at Hog Bay, or Franklin; then moved, still quite young, to Ellsworth, that immediate country being called Union River before the towns thereabout were incorporated—the seaside region being known as Frenchman's Bay. He came here first in connection with business of Dr. Ivory Hovey of York County, but was soon trading and lumbering for himself. The District of Frenchman's Bay was soon after created, and through the influence of Mr. Cutts, then a member of Congress, he was appointed by President Washington, 1789, Collector of the port, which office he held till his death in 1818. During that period he did little else. The office did much more business then than now; it was then mostly foreign, such as with the West Indies and other provinces. His office was well paying. Those were the days of smuggling, and he reaped the benefit of many seizures. He lived freely, entertained hospitably, and was proverbially open-handed and generous. He was a gentleman according to those days. His wine bills would astonish the man of to-day living in the same sphere of life. He lived in the most modern built house of that time; was fond of a good appearance; had considerable silver ware, and provided jewelry for his daughters; dressed punctiliously himself, always wearing ruffled bosoms and cuffs, small-clothes and a three-cornered hat. He was withal generous to the poor, and had a strong religious instinct or character. In 1817–18, he gave a piece of land to the town of Ellsworth for a burial-ground, and erected a meeting-house for the Congregational Society, which he had helped to form. He was also a magistrate, and did an immense business, most of the law of those days being small cases before Justices of the Peace. He was a leader in matters relating to the militia, for a long period occupying various grades of military office. Was in the Massachusetts militia in occasional services during the Revolutionary War. Was appointed Lieutenant in 1786; Major in 1791; and Lieut. Colonel in 1802, an appointment which caused him afterwards to be commonly styled "Col. Jordan." The following newspaper article, headed "Valuable Documents," appeared during the year 1881:

During a recent visit to Ellsworth, John A. Peters of Bangor, Associate Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Maine, examined some old books and documents which belonged to his grandfather, Melatiah Jordan of Ellsworth. In an ancient chest, which had not been disturbed since 1819, Judge Peters discovered some interesting documents bearing the signatures of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, John Hancock and other great men of the past. These papers have been shown to a few persons. The collection is exceedingly valuable, for the documents are not worn or soiled, and the autographs they bear look as if they might have been written a short time ago.

The first is a paper, signed by the President of the United States, appointing Melatiah Jordan collector of Frenchman's Bay. It bears the signature of George Washington, and date 1789.

The second is a document, appointing Melatiah Jordan "inspector of the Revenue for the several ports within the district of Frenchman's Bay"; it is dated 21st March, 1791, and is signed by George Washington and Thomas Jefferson. The seal is ornamented with a spread eagle, similar to the one now stamped on the new silver dollars.

The next is a renewal of the same office; it is signed as above, and dated 8th March, 1792. Then comes a commission signed by John Hancock, Gov. of Mass., 29th Nov. 1791, making Mr. Jordan Major of the 4th Regt. of the Second Brigade, Eighth Division. The paper also bears the autograph of John Avery, Secretary. John Hancock's signature is bold in style, but less firm than the one appended to the Declaration of Independence.

Another interesting paper, is a Letter of Administration from Job Nelson, Esq., to Mr. Jordan. Dated Castine, 22d July, 1806.

Another appoints Mr. Jordan a Justice of the Peace, and is dated at Boston, 10th Sept. 1798. Signed by Increase Sumner, Gov. of Mass., and John Avery, Sec'y. Next is a commission for Lieut., signed 9th July, 1786, by James Bowdoin, Gov. of Mass.

Next in order is an honorable discharge from the office of Lieut. of Second Regiment. Signed by Adj. Gen. Wm. Dammian. Dated Jan. 11, 1801.

An appointment of Justice of the Peace is signed by Elbridge Gerry. Gov. of Mass., and Benj. Thomas, Sec'y. Dated at Boston, 3d Feb. 1812.

Another appointment as Justice of the Peace is dated 15th of Feb. 1805, and signed by Caleb Strong, Gov. of Mass.

The last is a similar appointment, dated 23d Feb. 1809, signed by Levi Lincoln, Gov. of Mass.

Col. Melatiah Jordan was a man of unquestioned integrity, and scrupulously honest; he was in all respects a leader, as a marked and influential man—of medium size and height, brown hair and blue eyes. It is a significant fact that, appointed to public office as a federalist, he held his commission during all the subsequent administrations of his time, and it illustrates how changed are the ideas regarding office tenure from those days to these. Then there were no political removals, but only for cause. There were efforts made to remove Col. Jordan for cause, but all such efforts failed, as there was no cause.

Col. Jordan died early, and rather suddenly, of heart disease. He had a good real estate, which he divided before his death, and left a personal estate of a valuation of $12,000. His wife died of consumption; she was an intelligent, respected woman, and a good wife and mother. Children:

Obituary.—"The sad news was received yesterday of the death on Wednesday morning of the venerable Mrs. Sally J. Peters, at her home in Ellsworth, in her 89th year. The deceased was the widow of the late Andrew Peters, who died in Feb. 1864, at the age of 80 years, and the mother of Judge John Andrew Peters of the City of Bangor, and eleven other children, all but three of whom are now living. She had been remarkably bright and active up to a very recent period. The sickness was fever, which resulted fatally, having overtaken her only ten days ago. The deceased matron was widely known and beloved, and the grief of her sons and daughters will be shared by very many friends." Children:

ICHABOD[5] (Tristram,[4] Samuel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), second son of Col. Tristram and Hannah (Goodwin) Jordan, was born Sept. 24, 1770, at Saco, York Co., Maine; died in the same house where he was born, May 20, 1865. He married Feb. 5, 1797, at Saco, Mary, daughter of James Coffin, who died Oct. 10, 1859, aged 85 years. In early life he went to sea, and with his active brain and energy he became master of a ship about the time he was 21 years of age. Known to be scrupulously honest, being a thorough sailor, and possessing good business talents, his services were in demand. He could sail a ship to any part of the world.

Some of the incidents in the life of Capt. Ichabod Jordan were found in an old memorandum-book, in the captain's own hand-writing. From this it appears that the brig Fame, Ichabod Jordan, master, sailed from Portland for Tobago, March 5, 1796, and from Tobago for Portland on the 20th of May following. On the 23d of the same month she was taken by a British ship called the Favorite, commanded by Arthur Wood, Esq., who took from the brig her captain and his papers, put a prize-master on board the brig, and ordered her for Grenada. But in a few days after, the mate of the Fame, with his people, dispossessed the prize-master and his people of the said brig, sent them ashore in a boat, and then put the brig for Portland. On June 16th, they were taken by a French schooner called the Flying-Fish, and were carried to San Domingo. The ship was condemned for want of a captain and papers, as they said; then carried to Porto Rico, and there sold. The vessel and cargo, which was principally rum, were worth $20,158.19.

In 1805, Capt. Ichabod Jordan commanded the American ship Ocean, which was a large vessel for that time, and went to Stockholm, Sweden. The event of the first arrival of an American ship at that place was celebrated by the city, and the king and queen came on board and dined. The following paper from President Jefferson to Capt. Ichabod Jordan is still extant:

THOMAS JEFFERSON,
President of the United States of America.

To all who shall see these presents, Greeting. Be it known that leave and permission are hereby given to Ichabod Jordan, Master or Commander of the ship called the Ocean of the burden of 246 tons or thereabouts, lying at present in the port of Boston bound for Nantz and laden with ashes, cotton, coffee, cheese, oil, logwood, pepper, sugar, &c., to depart and proceed with his ship on his said voyage, such ship having been visited and the said I. Jordan having made oath before the proper officers, that the said ship belongs to one or more of the citizens of the United States of America, and to him or them only.

In witness whereof, I have subscribed my name to these presents, and affixed the Seal of the United States of America thereto, and caused the same to be countersigned by Benj. Wild, Dep. Collector at Boston, the 27th day of April in the year of our Lord Christ 1805.

{ Great Seal of the U. S. } THOMAS JEFFERSON.

By the President.

JAMES MADISON Sec'y of State.

[To which is appended the following]:

Most Serene, Serene, most Puissant, Puissant, High, Illustrious, Noble, Honorable, Venerable, wise and prudent, Lords, Emperors, Kings, Republics, Princes, Dukes, Earls, Barons, Lords, Burgomasters, Schepens, Councillors, as also Judges, Officers, Justiciaries, and Regents of all the good cities and places, whether Ecclesiastical or Secular, who shall see these patents, or hear them read. We William Stevenson make known that the master Ichabod Jordan appearing before us, has declared upon oath, that the vessel called the Ocean of the burden of about 246 tons, which he at present navigates, is of the United States of America, and that no subjects of the present belligerent powers have any part or portion therein, directly or indirectly, so may God Almighty help him.

And, as we wish to see the said master prosper in his lawful affairs, our prayer is, to all the before mentioned, and to each of them separately, where the said master shall arrive with his vessel and cargo, that they may please to receive the said master with goodness, and to treat him in a becoming manner, permitting him, upon the usual tolls and expenses in passing and repassing, to pass, navigate, and frequent the ports, passes and territories, to the end to transact his business, where, and in what manner he shall judge proper; whereof we shall be willingly indebted.

In witness and for cause whereof, we affix hereto the Seal of Office this 27 April, 1805.

(Seal) WILLIAM STEVENSON.
Not. Public.

In the war of 1812, Capt. Jordan was a prisoner on the British frigate Boxer, and was on board at the time of the engagement of that ship with the United States frigate Enterprise. A short time after the close of the war with England, he gave up going to sea, and settled on the old homestead of his father at Saco. He became a prominent politician—a Democrat of the stamp of Jefferson and Jackson. He voted for Washington for President, and for every president to Mr. Lincoln. In the war of the Rebellion he was a war-Democrat. He reached the great age of 94 years, 5 months, 26 days, his father having died in the same house at the age of 90. Children, all born on the old homestead at Saco, Me.:

Tristram Jordan was a ship master; all the record we have of his life is written in the hearts of his nearest relatives; he was a skilful navigator, a consistent christian. Deacon of the Baptist Church in Saco, an excellent son, and in every respect an example of love, fidelity and true christian virtue. He was washed overboard in a gale, from the ship Pepperell, built and owned in Saco; widow now, 1879, living at Saco. Children:

Franklin Jordan left the Saco high school at 16 and made a voyage to New Orleans in the ship Pepperell. Leaving that place April 20, 1858, bound for Bordeaux, France, most of the crew were prostrated with yellow fever, himself among the number; when in latitude of New York were struck by a squall which caused the ship to leak badly; were helpless, crew dying and the ship sinking, when a steamer took them in tow into New York; he was sent to the hospital on Staten Island, from which he made his escape just before it was pulled down by a mob. Went home to Maine, and as soon as well enough went in a new ship from Kennebunk, called the Greenwood, to New Orleans; from thence to Boston in the ship Orijimbo. In 1859, shipped again at Kennebunk, in a new ship called the Addison; went to New Orleans, Liverpool, back to New Orleans, thence to Liverpool again, Liverpool to Shields, Eng., Shields to Mobile, Ala., Mobile to Liverpool, at which place he joined the American Indianer, called the Charles Cooper, of New York. Made passage to Calcutta as third officer; Calcutta to Ceylon, Ceylon to Calcutta, and from thence to Boston, as second officer, being 180 days at sea and seeing land but twice during the whole passage,—with saltpetre as cargo. The war having begun he entered the navy as master's mate; served a time on the old sloop Macedonia; was sent to South Atlantic squadron in the U. S. S. Kingfisher; was stationed at St. Helena Sound in So. Carolina, vessel wrecked there; was on staff duty on U. S. Ships New Hampshire and Vermont, in Port Royal harbor; promoted to Ensign; commanded U. S. Schooner Wild Cat; served at siege of Charleston; was adjutant of the Naval Brigade, and was in the field about four months; was Provost Marshal of Georgetown, S. C., until relieved by the army; was in Fort Sumter April 14, 1865, and helped hoist the same flag that was hauled down just four years before. In August, 1865, he obtained leave of absence for three months; married Margaret Scammon, daughter of William Scammon, at Saco; when leave expired was ordered to U. S. S. Bibb, on coast survey duty, where he remained surveying the approaches to Savannah and Charleston until May, 1866. His wife's health being in a critical condition, he resigned in May, 1866; was granted three months' leave of absence, and received an honorable discharge from the service, and a letter of thanks from the Navy Department. He removed to Florida in the fall of 1866.

EPHRAIM[5] (Nathaniel,[4] Nathaniel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), second son of Nathaniel and Susanna (Hill) Jordan, was born March 25, 1764, at Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland Co., Maine; died Dec. 11, 1846, at Lisbon, Me. He married, in 1791, Ann, daughter of Thomas Jordan (line of Jedediah) of Cape Elizabeth; she died April 7, 1829. In the fall of the year 1787, he left his father's house at Spurwink, with some provisions in his wallet over his shoulder, in search of some good land. During the summer he had learned that on the east side of the Androscoggin River, at a place called Burnt-meadow, now in the town of Webster, Me., some one had erected a mill in the vicinity of some good land, clothed with a heavy growth of various kinds of green timber, unlike the growth of timber on the Cape. On the second day he crossed the river, finding but one house on his way to the river. The mill, not quite finished, was owned by one Samuel Simmons, of whom he at once purchased twenty-five acres of land, receiving the following receipt:

Burnt-meadow, Nov. y^e^ 9^th^ 1787, Received of Ephraim Jordan eight Pound two Shillings, in part pay for twenty-five Acres of land which I have sold him to be taken off the south end of my lot. I say Received by me Samuel Simmons.

Before he left the house of Mr. Simmons, he purchased of Mr. Jesse Davis eighty acres, in addition to the first purchase. On these two tracts of land he made his farm, beginning the next year, 1788. In 1789 he had cleared land, built himself a log cabin and raised a good crop of corn. In the spring of 1790, his brother Abner, with wife and child, removed from Cape Elizabeth, bought land adjoining Ephraim, and made a farm. Children:

WILLIAM[5] (Joshua,[4] Nathaniel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), twin brother with Joshua, son of Capt. Joshua and Catharine (Jordan) Jordan, was born June 8, 1770, at Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine; died 1845, at Webster, Me. He married first, March 2, 1793, at Cape Elizabeth, Eunice, daughter of Benjamin and Christiana Jordan (Isolated Families) of Scarborough, Me. He left Cape Elizabeth with his twin brother Joshua, about 1795, and took up wild land at a place known at that time by the name of Burnt-meadows. This was the plantation of West Bowdoinham, afterwards Bowdoin, then Thompsonborough, next Lisbon and since 1840 its present name Webster, Me. He had eight children by his first wife; she died and he married second, a widow Hanscomb. No children by this marriage, which proved an unhappy one and they parted. When advanced in age he conveyed his original 150 acres of land to his son-in-law, Asa Sawyer, conditions to have maintenance for life to him the grantor, William Jordan, who soon after became insane. After a few years Sawyer assigned his interest in the estate, with the conditions thereto of maintenance of William Jordan, to one Jotham Day, a Calvinistic Baptist preacher.

About 1845, William Jordan was absent from the house some days, when a search was made, and his dead body was found prostrate upon the frozen ground in the orchard he had planted, not far from his house. He was distinguished for his industrious habits, and for his excellent character in the various relations of life; physically he was of moderate stature, though possessing great muscular powers and endurance. EBENEZER[5] (Benjamin,[4] Nathaniel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), eldest son of Lieut. Benjamin and Hannah (Weiman) Jordan, was born May 13, 1764, at Falmouth, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland Co., Maine; died March 24, 1854, æ. 89 years, 10 months. He married March 2, 1786, at Cape Elizabeth, Sarah McKenney, who was born Sept. 3, 1764, and died Oct. 19, 1843, aged 79 years. Ebenezer moved from Cape Elizabeth in his early married life to a place called Pegypscot (now Danville, Androscoggin Co., Me.), about forty miles in a northerly direction, and at that time a wilderness, where he settled. After many years of rigid toil, usual to a frontier life, with frugality and temperate habits, he made a farm and raised a large family of children. It is said of him that he never used spirituous liquor nor tobacco in any form. His acquired means placed him above want. Early in life he identified himself as well as his wife with the cause of reform and religion. His motto was, "As for me and my house we will serve God." He and his wife lived and died upon the farm where they first settled, universally beloved and respected. He was an honest man and a worthy citizen. At an advanced age their children gathered around them to receive a blessing, as did the children of the Patriachs of the early times. Children:

Boston, Mass.

Eben D. Jordan, who is to-day the best-known merchant in Boston, was born in the town of Danville, Me., October 13, 1822. He was left fatherless and penniless at the age of 4 years, and his mother being unable to maintain the large family of small children left dependent upon her, young Eben was placed with a farmer's family in the neighborhood, to whom she was to pay a small sum towards his support until he was able to work. As he was a smart, active, industrious boy, this period came quickly, and the family of Dyers, who were among the first settlers and most respected inhabitants of the town, soon found he was a positive and valuable help to them. They were people of more than ordinary intelligence, possessed strong common sense, and early impressed upon the boy's mind the importance of telling the truth, to work hard, to improve his time, to be economical, and to follow the golden rule of doing unto others as he wished to be done by. That these principles, which were instilled into his mind by his tender mother, who regretted her inability to care wholly for him, and also by the Dyers, have been the controlling influence of his life, none familiar with Mr. Jordan's career need be told. He grew up in this home until he had reached about the age of fourteen. Of his boy's life on the farm it is perhaps needless to dwell at any great length. It was the experience of thousands, his differing from the majority in his readiness to assume responsibilities in everyday life far beyond his years. He early developed the important trait of self-reliance, a quality without which no boy or man can succeed in any walk in life. It was shown in a hundred ways in his boyhood. He was fearless and tireless, and if the work in hand looked formidable, he was always willing to try. So far as education was concerned, in these early years he attended brief summer and winter terms at a district school where there were seventy-five pupils, varying from five to twenty-one years of age. This limited schooling was the foundation of the knowledge he has since acquired by hard experience, by a wide range of reading, by extensive travel and by personal contact with active, busy and successful men in all the walks of business and professional life. It is Mr. Jordan's theory that a man who does not learn something new every day or every week of his life is not equal to the duties and privileges he can enjoy, and that no man is thoroughly educated until the close of his life. It is desirable to get the best foundation for an education when it is obtainable, but the second twenty-five years of a man's life usually offer the best opportunities for securing the knowledge which he needs for his station in life.

To return to Mr. Jordan's boyhood. Just before he was 14 years of age he made what proved an important decision by resolving to go to Boston. While he had performed the drudgery of farm life cheerfully and thoroughly, in his boyish dreams and aspirations he had felt there must be a larger and a wider field of life outside the limits of the little town of Danville—a place where one who was willing to work and delve must win greater prizes than were possible in that community. Up to that time he had never spent a cent for himself, but by working and exerting his natural ability as a trader he had saved $2.75 in silver. With this capital and a determination to work and push himself to the front, he started for Boston—the great centre which has for many years been the magnet to draw the boys of New England from the farms on which they have been reared by hard-working parents. The half fare by boat from Portland to Boston reduced the savings of young Eben to $1.25, and he landed in Boston with just that amount of cash capital, but with good principles, sound health, habits of industry and economy, and a desire to achieve results by honest toil, which were far better than money.

He showed good sense in embracing the first opportunity for employment which was presented, and went to work on a farm in Mount Pleasant, Roxbury, at $4 per month. When he was 16, young Jordan entered the store of William P. Tenney & Co., at the corner of Prince and Salem streets. His work in the store was that usually allotted to the boy, and particularly the last comer in those days—building the fire and sweeping before breakfast, running errands and carrying bundles during the day, and gradually beginning to wait upon customers as the months rolled on. Whatever he did was thorough, even down to the minutest details of what seemed the least important work. He remained two years at Tenney's, and then worked one year at Pratt's on Hanover street. Of his salary of $275 a year he saved a part, thus early adopting a rule of living within his income, and aiming to possess independent resources of his own for any time of need.

When he was 19 Mr. Jordan met a valuable friend in Mr. Joshua Stetson, then a leading dry goods merchant on Hanover street. Mr. Stetson, who liked the young man's grit, energy, industry and intelligence, offered to set him up in business. His kindness was appreciated, his offer was accepted, and very soon a small store was opened and stocked, located at the corner of Mechanic and Hanover streets. With an eye to keeping down expenses the young man had a sign painted on a board he found in the cellar, paying the artist $3.62, and spending $3.50 for a stove. This was the total outlay. After the arrangements were completed the sign was put up, and when the young merchant surveyed the establishment from the opposite side of the street, he probably felt prouder of his small measure of success than he does now when his eye rests on the largest retail store in America, which has been the growth of his later years of work and enterprise. The small store on Hanover street was rented for $200, and the sales the first year were $8000. At that time the steamers from down East and the provinces arrived early in the morning, and to catch the trade of the passengers this enterprising young merchant was up and had his store opened at 4 o'clock, doing quite a thriving trade before breakfast, and before many other storekeepers realized that it was sunrise. From the first customer, an old lady who bought half a yard of calico for seven cents, and which was about the sum total of the first day's sales, the trade increased steadily, until at the end of four years Mr. Jordan had built up his sales to $100,000 per annum. The spirit of enterprise, which in later years has produced such great results. was shown by the young Hanover street merchant at that time, and his store got to be one of the most notable and popular on the street.

Desiring to obtain practical information in the matter of buying goods, and to gain a better understanding of the general lines of trade throughout the world, Mr. Jordan, at the age of 25 years, sold out his store, and took a position in the well-known and successful house of James M. Beebe. Here, in two years' time, by hard work and diligent study, he acquired a thorough knowledge of the principles and management of the business and the system Mr. Beebe had been a quarter of a century in perfecting. He then felt better equipped for doing business on his own account, and entered upon a new career as a Boston merchant.

The firm of Jordan, Marsh & Co. was formed in the year 1851, when they opened a small jobbing store on Milk street. The firm started with $5000 in cash, but its members had a reputation for integrity, industry and ability, and had a determination to secure success, and build a permanent and profitable trade. Now it was that the self-reliance, the quick intelligence, the untiring industry and the indomitable will of Eben D. Jordan were needed to meet the strong competition and larger resources of older and well-established houses. And these qualities were never lacking. Large importers were few in those days, but the competitors of Jordan, Marsh & Co. enjoyed this facility, and had large credit abroad. Mr. Jordan introduced the cash system into the jobbing business, and made considerable headway in improving the methods of trade for the benefit of customers. Progress was made, but feeling a desire for the advantage of importing goods direct, Mr. Jordan sailed for Europe in 1852. Though the means of the firm were limited, Mr. Jordan by the magnetism of his personal presence secured all the credit desired. The senior partner of one of the largest and most conservative commission houses in England heard his story, and was so strongly attracted to the young merchant, that he gave him as large a line of credit as he needed, and certainly never regretted the act. In the terrible crash of 1857 this English house saw many of its old customers go down, and when Jordan, Marsh & Co. pulled through, paying one hundred cents on the dollar, the senior English partner not only did not regret his generous act of 1853, but said that Mr. Jordan ought to have a monument erected to perpetuate the name he had carried so successfully through the awful tornado of '57. With the ability to import goods in large quantities the firm made more rapid progress until the panic of 1857, alluded to above. That came sudden and terrific, and swept through the business world as a Western tornado nearly obliterates a Western town. Old and strong houses tottered and fell. Every day new names were added to the list of the fallen. When the storm had fairly burst an old merchant remarked: "Well, Mr. Jordan, I suppose we have all got to fail, and we might as well do it first as last." "I don't propose to take the first train," was the quick response. But the ordeal was a fearful one. Every morning, for weeks, Mr. Jordan was at his store at 6 o'clock, working hard, with all hands, to sell off goods at some price, and every night he went home at midnight with the consciousness that the firm was from one to three thousand dollars poorer than when he arrived at the store in the morning. But the panic came to an end, and the firm of Jordan, Marsh & Co. outrode the storm, was solvent, full of pluck and ambition, and ready for a new career of prosperity and mercantile success. Steadily it progressed, increasing its trade and resources, enlarging its salesrooms and manufacturing department, and keeping up a spirit of enterprise which increased its profits and strengthened its name.

In 1861 the firm, in addition to its large wholesale trade, bought the retail store on Washington street, corner of Avon, where now stands their magnificent establishment, with its six acres of salesrooms and its thousand and one conveniences for the comfort and pleasure of customer and employé. The growth of this retail store has kept pace with the wholesale, and its wants now require the labor of over 2000 employés in its different departments. The work of building up this large retail establishment has been one of the greatest magnitude, and its success has shown the broad and comprehensive spirit of enterprise which has ever characterized the career of Eben D. Jordan. His clear perception of the wants of the public, his ability to meet the same and to deal squarely and honestly with all classes, have been shown in a thousand ways. The skill, industry and products of all the markets of the world are seen in this great store, and its organization is the most perfect in the world. What he has gathered from his experience and from his wide observation is all concentrated in this establishment. Many of his ideas have been copied elsewhere. The conveniences for customers are unsurpassed, and the ladies' waiting-room is one of the most popular ideas ever introduced, even in this age of energy and bright thoughts. The health and comfort of his employés has always been one of the important matters which have been carefully studied and fostered by this big-brained and big-hearted merchant. Besides including facilities for a warm lunch, he carried out in the present huge structure a long cherished project for the benefit of his working girls, by giving up the entire upper story of the great corner tower for their diversion and pleasure. This room is the finest in the entire building, commanding a view of the city and suburbs on all sides from a continuous window, and being large enough to accommodate a thousand people at a time. It is open to all the female employés of the establishment for the portion of the noon hour that is not occupied in lunching. Plenty of seats and reading matter are provided, and there is a splendid floor for dancing or promenading, which is eagerly utilized by many of the girls and women whose occupation keeps them seated at a machine or table during the day. The room is also used for evening assemblies, social, musical and literary, in which all the employés are invited to join. Mr. Jordan has recently given here two "practical talks" to the force—one to young men and one to young women—embodying the results of his experience and observation as to the right conduct of life and conditions of success. His many acts of individual kindness and assistance towards those in his employ would make a history in themselves, showing that the strong brain is energized by a strong heart.

Quite a chapter might be written on one of the great secrets of Mr. Jordan's success, and that is his ability to handle and get first-class work out of a small or large force of men. As Napoleon could handle an army for war, so can Mr. Jordan direct and govern in the paths of peace and business. His judgment of men appears to be founded upon an instinct which quickly determines their worth, and if they have any business qualities in them, he can draw them out and perfect them as few men are able to do. Hundreds of successful men scattered all over the country owe much to his training; but few, if any, can ever hope to surpass or equal their teacher.

During all these years, when Mr. Jordan has been active in building the fortunes of his house, he has been one of the most public-spirited citizens of Boston. Persistently refusing all suggestions of political honors, he has ever been ready to forward any and every public movement to promote the best interests of Boston, to contribute to any public testimonial toward any and all men who have endeavored to elevate their kind or have achieved success which merited recognition in any walk of life. During the rebellion he put forth every effort in his power to kindle the fires of patriotism, and to furnish material to sustain the North in the terrible struggle to save the Union. Jordan, Marsh & Co. raised the first flag in the city when the war broke out, in the presence of an immense crowd in Winthrop square. When the first call for troops came, an offer was made to all their employés who desired to enlist that the cost of the outfits would be paid by the firm, their salaries to continue during their absence, and their situations retained until their return. Forty-five men enlisted and went to the front, embracing the terms of this liberal and patriotic offer. Mr. Jordan took a deep interest in the Sanitary Commission and in all measures calculated to inspire and strengthen the loyal North and carry its banners on to victory. Mr. Jordan's vast labor in connection with the two great peace jubilees which have been held in Boston within fifteen years are well known. His liberal expenditures of time and money, which were so important to their success, were given cheerfully and readily, as he saw the opportunities for enormous progress in music in Boston and New England, and felt that these great events would be of lasting benefit to this section of the country through all coming time.

The career of Eben D. Jordan, while it reads like a romance, simply shows what is possible in this free land of ours, where all are equal, and where true manhood and honest toil are appreciated and rewarded. His life and success are full of encouragement and inspiration to the young men who are now growing up or who may come upon the stage hereafter. With few early advantages, without means or friends, the young farmer boy strikes out for Boston, and in less than forty years is her best known merchant prince. He secures wealth, position, friends, and is able and willing all along through the years of his successful career to extend a helping hand to others. Success does not turn his head; he is as genial and approachable to all now that his trade runs into the millions as when in his little store in Hanover street he sold his first yard of calico. Riches have not closed the streams of his generosity, because his path is dotted all the way along by deeds of charity. Men may never hear of them, but they are recorded where not even the fall of a sparrow is unnoticed. Though forced to compete with dishonest as well as honorable tradesmen and merchants, he has never swerved from the path of honesty and the strictest integrity, nor countenanced the slightest deviation on the part of any associate or employé. He has won his success by hard work and ceaseless application, and he is still achieving greater success in the prime of a vigorous manhood. That he may long continue his progressive and matchless career, and live many years to enjoy the fruits of his well earned success, is the sincere wish of all who have been familiar with his record and with the eternal principles of truth and fairness which have always governed his every act.

RISHWORTH[5] (Benjamin,[4] Nathaniel,[3] Dominicus,[2] Robert[1]), fourth son of Lieut. Benjamin and Hannah (Weiman) Jordan, was born Jan. 31, 1776, at Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine; died June 27, 1853, at Cape Elizabeth. He married Dec. 23, 1797, Mary, daughter of Nathaniel Jones, M.D., of Cape Elizabeth. Rishworth Jordan worked upon a farm until he became about 22 years old; then went to sea, and, possessing a strong constitution and capacity for endurance, with good business talent and force of character, he soon became a thorough sailor and commander of a vessel. He was employed mostly in the West India trade until about 1824, when he retired to his farm at Cape Elizabeth. He was a man of strict integrity, and was respected by all. He represented his town in the State Legislature before the separation from Massachusetts; held office of some kind in town almost perpetually during his life; and was one of the leading men of the times—a worthy man in all the walks of life. Children:

Jedediah,

FOURTH SON OF THE REV. ROBERT JORDAN.

JEDEDIAH JORDAN AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

JEDEDIAH[2] (Robert[1]), fourth son of Rev. Robert and Sarah (Winter) Jordan, was born previously to 1664, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland Co., Maine; died 1735. He left Spurwink with his father's family on the breaking out of the Indian war in 1675, when their house was burned by the Indians, and settled at Great Island now New Castle, N. H. He afterwards settled at Kittery, Me., but we cannot find any record of his marriage either at New Castle or Kittery, as no records were kept at that early date. We may suppose that his children were born in Kittery; one of his daughters was married at Kittery, 1724; in 1726 he gave a deed to his son Robert, dated at Kittery, Robert at that time having his residence at Kittery; the land conveyed was at Spurwink, where Robert afterwards settled. In 1726, Jedediah made an agreement with his nephew Dominicus Jordan relating to the family property in Spurwink (see page 141). In 1729 he made a will, of which his sons John and Thomas were the executors. Children:

3961.+Jedediah,[3] b. 1684; d. before 1729.
3962. Abigail,[3] b. 1687; m. before 1729, Daniel Robinson.
3963. Keziah,[3] b. 1690; d. 1737, unm.
3964. Mary,[3] b. 1693; m. after 1729, John Boulter.
3965. Sarah,[3] b. 1696; m. before 1729, at Kittery, James Jackson; res. Dover, N. H. Child:
3966. 1. Abigail,[4] m. Mr. Weymouth of Dover, N. H., a blacksmith; res. Dover.
3967.+John,[3] b. 1698; m. 1737, Deliverance Reading.

3969.+Robert,[3] b. 1704; m. 1727, at Dover, N. H., Rachel Huckins.

Will of Jedediah Jordan.

In the name of God, Amen. I Jedediah Jorden of Kittery, in y^e^ County of York within y^e^ Province of y^e^ Massachusetts Bay in New England, Yeoman, being in good helth make this my last will & testament in manner & form as followeth: I comitt my soul to God hopeing in his mercy to injoy eternal life. & after my decease my body to be decently buried as my executors hereafter named shall think proper, & as to my estate, I give as followeth: I make, ordain, & impower my sons John Jorden, Robert Jorden & Thomas Jorden, Executors of this my last will & testament of my whole estate after my just debts & funeral charges paid. I give my two daughters Mary & Sariah [Keziah] Jorden all my personal estate to be divided equally between them.

I give y^e^ Neck of land at Spurwink in y^e^ township of Falmouth to John Jorden & Thomas Jorden & Jedediah Jorden's children, to be divided equally between them, only reserving a swampy piece of low land which I give to Robert Jorden, which lyes on y^e^ Eastermost side of y^e^ old neck of land, beginning at y^e^ point where y^e^ Cattle formerly went to pass over to my brother Jordens marsh where y^e^ creek parted my Br^o^ John & J. and go round that piece of swampy land to a place where y^e^ cattle formerly went to pass over from y^e^ s^d^ neck to y^e^ great plains, John Jorden to have his part on y^e^ home place, Thomas Jorden to have his part where he made choice of, Jedediah Jordans children to have their part where their father made choice off in his life time.

I give to my eldest daughter's son John Moor forty acres of land out of my farm at Spurwink in y^e^ township afores^d^, to be laid out by my executors, fronting y^e^ marsh, forty rod in breadth 160 rod in length, by my brother Dominicus Jorden's line & my line.

I give to my daughter Abigail Robison fifty acres of land out of my farm at Spurwink afores^d^, to be laid out by my Executors, fronting y^e^ marsh, fifty rod broad 160 rod in length, next John Moors lot.

I give to my daughter Mary Jordan fifty acres of land out of my farm at Spurwink afores^d^, to be laid out by my Exec^rs^ fronting the marsh, 50 rod broad 160 rod in length, by Robersons lot.

I give my daughter Sarah Jackson fifty acres of land out of my farm at Spurwink afors^d^, to be laid out by my Execu^rs^ fronting on y^e^ marsh, fifty rod in breadth 160 rod in length, by Mary's lot.

I give to my daughter Sariah [Keziah] Jorden, fifty acres of land out of my farm at Spurwink afors^d^, to be laid out by my Execu^rs^ fronting y^e^ marsh, fifty rod broad 160 rod in length, by Sarah Jacksons lot.

I give my old mowing marsh at Spurwink afors^d^, to be equally [divided] amongst all my children & Grandchildren before mentioned, & what lands soever is not yeat given shall be divided equally between John Jordan and Thomas Jordan & Jedediah Jordan's children.

I publish & declare this to be my last will & testament & renounce all former wills.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this sixth day of March, one thousand seven hundred twenty-nine, y^e^ second year of y^e^ reign of our Lord King George y^e^ Second of Great Britain, France & Ireland, &c.

Signed and Sealed in presence of us,
Nathaniel White,

Deposition of Thomas Jordan, Nov. 10, 1762.

Thomas Jordan of Falmouth in the county of Cumberland, Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, Æ. sixty-one years, Testify & declare that forty years ago I was an apprentice to Mr. Roger Dearing of Scarborough in said county but then in the county of York, and I well remember said Roger Dearing then lived at a place called Nonesuch in said Scarboro', and that I well remember about that time one Hubbard Stevens a servant of Mr. Joseph Calef of Boston, Tanner, came to said Nonesuch and cut down trees & bushes & cleared land not exceeding two hundred Rods from the Dwelling of said Roger Dearing, standing where his widow Elizabeth Dearing now dwells. I also well remember that one David Bryant came there and built a house between said Dearing's cleared land and the marsh land. I then lived as a tenant to said Calef until he went off for fear of the Indians. And afterwards I remember one William Dixon, lived at or near the place where said Bryant lived, and I then understood by common talk and by a letter he then brought from said Calef to said Roger Dearing which I have read, that he also lived there as a tenant of said Calef.

THOMAS[4] (Thomas,[3] Jedediah,[2] Robert[1]), second son of Thomas and Anne (Simonton) Jordan, was born in 1744, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine. He served as a soldier through the war of the Revolution, and had an honorable discharge; married Jan. 8, 1790, at Cape Elizabeth, Mary Henderson, who came with him on his return from the war. He made a will, and left it with the Rev. Mr. Clark, pastor of the North Church, bequeathing his farm to the poor of the town of Cape Elizabeth. After his death the will was found among Mr. Clark's papers. It was recorded on the Probate Records which were destroyed at the great fire at Portland, July 4, 1866. Through the kindness of Frederick R. Jordan a copy was obtained from the original, which was regularly filed among the papers of his father Capt. Rishworth Jordan, administrator of the estate. Had no children.

WILL OF THOMAS JORDAN, JR.

In the name of God, Amen. I Thomas Jordan of Cape Elizabeth in the County of Cumberland being advanced in years and mindful of my mortality, and of sound and disposing mind and memory and enjoying a comfortable state of health for which I humbly desire to be duly greatful to Almighty God; and being without children and desirous to make provision for the support and comfort of my beloved wife Mary Jordan in case of her surviving me, do hereby make, ordain and publish the following as my last will and testament namely. In the first place, I give, devise and bequeath to my beloved wife Mary Jordan all my Real Estate and personal property, whatever and wherever the same may be situated, including the House, land and homestead where I now live, and the marsh and outlands belonging to me, all in Cape Elizabeth aforesaid, and all estate whatever that was devised to me by the will of my father Thomas Jordan, deceased, or has descended to me as one of the heirs of my late brother Timothy Jordan of said Cape Elizabeth, deceased, to have and to hold the real estate aforesaid to her for and during the term of her natural life while she shall continue a widow, and bequeathing whatever personal estate I may have including my household stuff, stock dues and demands, to her absolutely. And in case the income of said farm and other property should not prove sufficient for her comfortable support and maintenance, I hereby authorize and empower her at her discretion to sell and dispose of any part or the whole of said real estate and to make, execute and acknowledge a good and sufficient Deed of the same to any person or persons, with the consent of my executor, and the proceeds thereof to appropriate for her comfortable support and maintenance as aforesaid, and to deed and convey the same to any person in fee simple for her support during her natural life. And I further ordain that whatever portion of my estate shall remain undisposed of at the death of my said wife or on her ceasing to be a widow shall belong to the town of Cape Elizabeth aforesaid in fee and in trust for the poor of said town forever. And I hereby appoint Rishworth Jordan and Mary Jordan my wife Executors of this my last Will & Testament. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-five.

THOMAS JORDAN.

The foregoing was signed by the said Thomas Jordan, and published and declared to be his last Will & Testament in the presence of us whose names are undersigned, and who have subscribed our names hereunto as witnesses of the same at his request in the presence of said Thomas Jordan and of each other, on the day and year aforesaid.

David Jordan had the privilege of attending a town school about six weeks each year from the time he was twelve years old until he attained his majority. He then attended the Academy at Bridgeton for about two months, and the Hebron Academy for about three months. Although his school privileges were thus limited he obtained sufficient education to become a successful teacher. He began teaching when 22 years of age, and continued to teach for twenty years in different parts of the State. For several years during this period he was a member of the superintending committee in the towns where he resided. He began to attend trainings under the old militia system at the age of eighteen, and was elected lieutenant, then captain, and at the age of thirty-one became a colonel. He was baptized by the Rev. James Libby in 1839, and united with the Free Baptist Church in Otisfield. He afterwards united with the Free Baptist Church in New Gloucester, of which church he is still (1879) a member. His residence till 1836, with the exception of one year spent in New Gloucester, was in Raymond, from that time to 1846 in Otisfield, till 1854 in Poland, and since then in New Gloucester.

4512. 14. Isabelle-S.,[8] b. July 7, 1874.

4513. 5. Jonas,[7] b. Nov. 11, 1804, at Raymond; d. June 28, 1875, at his res. in Auburn, after a short sickness from a carbuncle; m. April 18, 1835, Alma J. Brackett; farmer; res. Auburn.

Jonas Jordan, being one of a large family, received merely the advantage of a common school, which in those early days was not what it is at the present time, but he early formed a habit of reading and study, so that he became a man of varied and thorough acquirements. In height he stood six feet and one-half inch, and his weight was 220 pounds; was of a strong constitution. He had not lost a meal by sickness for many years. In his youth was classed as one of the three strongest men in the town of Raymond. He was much noted for teaching disorderly scholars.

In early life he took an active part in politics, and represented his native town in the State Legislature when 30 years of age. His devotion to principle was perhaps never better shown than in the same Legislature where he forfeited party to principle, when a strict party vote would have carried a much desired party measure. He being a free thinker was ever with the advance party in politics, and exerted a strong influence over those with whom he came in contact.

In the temperance movement he was for many years a very earnest worker, and being a ready public speaker, and having a peculiar winning manner in private conversation, many men were won to noble lives through his efforts. The perfect truthfulness of his daily life and conversation can in no way be better illustrated than by his oft repeated injunction to his children, when a dozen little eyes were watching: "Tell me whenever I say anything you think untrue, no matter who is present." In early life he united with the Free Baptist Church, but later he came to look upon its views as too narrow, and to feel that liberality of sentiment which he thought could only find its home in the Universal or Unitarian faith. At the time of his death he was a member of no church, but if a life governed by high moral principles and devoted to the cause of the widow, the fatherless and the oppressed, be a passport to Heaven, the gates were swung wide open for him.

Children:

4514. 1. SAMUEL,[8] b. Feb. 23, 1836, at Raymond; grad. Bowdoin Coll. 1861. He entered U. S. navy; vol. acting assistant pay-master on the Gulf Squadron; returned home Aug. 18, and died Aug. 21, 1865. At college as well as at preparatory schools which he attended he took high rank as a scholar, and higher still in the hearts of those with whom he associated, for his gentle manners and his high moral principle. The Rebellion was the all-engrossing topic at the time of his graduation, and he accepted a position as assistant pay-master in the U. S. navy, which he held till the end of the Rebellion and near the close of his life. He was a man of great promise—thus early called to his reward. No fitter eulogium can can be found for him than his father caused to be placed upon his tomb-stone,—"He lived like a man, and died like a christian."

Stephen Porter, commander of a Cavalry Co. in 1812; m. (2) Henrietta W. Thurlow of Poland; settled at Raymond, Casco and Portland, Me., then at Roxbury, Mass.; merchant. Mr. Jordan commanded respect from all classes of people as a business man of great ability, and in his short life accomplished much. He held many political offices of trust in his native State; and by his family was held in high estimation, and looked up to as to a Joseph, almost with reverence—a kind, genial, humane gentleman. He purchased a large tract of woodland in the town of Oxford, made a good farm, on which he lived 35 years; he possessed a strong constitution, and was a total abstainer from the use of alcoholic liquors and tobacco, being first in the town to engage in the temperance movement, strongly advocating prohibition. During the war of the Rebellion, although too old to be subject to a draft, he enlisted as volunteer in the 14th Maine Regt. which was ordered to New Orleans; after a long period of service, he was one day prostrated by sun stroke and taken to the hospital, from which he was honorably discharged on account of disability. About a month before his death he was driving in a sleigh with his daughter; a two horse team without a driver came against his sleigh; his daughter jumped out and was not injured, but the father was supposed to be dead when taken up; he lingered some time, but medical skill upon a person of his age could not restore the lost vitality. Farmer; res. Norway. Children:

Samuel,

FIFTH SON OF THE REV. ROBERT JORDAN.

SAMUEL JORDAN AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

SAMUEL[2] (Robert[1]), fifth son of Rev. Robert and Sarah (Winter) Jordan, was born about 1660, at Spurwink, in Falmouth, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine; died 1720, at Kittery, York Co., Maine. He married, at Kittery, Mary . . . . . He left Spurwink with his father when the Indian war commenced, 1675, for Portsmouth, N. H., and he never returned to Spurwink. He made his permanent residence at Kittery. All that we know of this man is obtained from the York records. His father by will left him 1100 acres of land, 100 acres more than to each of the other sons, because his land was not so good. Samuel's land was located at Purpooduck, in Falmouth, bordering on the sea, including Alewife Cove, mouth of Alewife Brook, leading from the great pond to the sea, and a cove called Pond Cove. The property of Samuel was divided equally between his three children. His wife survived him, and was living in 1741 (see Deposition). She and her son Samuel administered on her husband's estate. Children, all born at Kittery, Me.:

4996.+SAMUEL,[3] b. about 1690.
4997. JOHN,[3] b. 1695; no record of his marriage has been found.
4998. SARAH,[3] b. 1698; m. Jan. 1722, at Kittery, John Robinson, a farmer; res. Falmouth.

We the subscribers, being Empowered and Authorized by John Wheelwright, Esq., Judge of Probate, to make a just Estimate and Apprizal of the Estate of Samuel Jordan late of Kittery, Deceased, have accordingly estimated and apprized y[e] said Estate as asserted in the Inventory, April 2, 1721, to the best of our judgment.

Inventory:

To 1100 Acres of Land lying in the Town of Falmouth in the County of York, with the Mines and all privileges there unto belonging £500 00 0

To personal property (every article named separately) 122 14 6

Whole value, £622 14 6

DEPOSITION OF MARY JORDAN.

Mary Jordan, aged near 70 years, who testifies and declares that she lived in Falmouth in Casco Bay about 60 years ago and that she very well knows an Island in s[d] Bay comonly called Munjoy's or Parker's Island, and that she also well remembers that there was a large stone house then standing on s[d] Island which was built as she was informed many years before by Mr. George Munjoys of s[d] Falmouth deceased who then claimed s[d] Island, and that one John Palmer, son-in-law to s[d] Munjoy, lived in s[d] stone house several years on s[d] Island in right of s[d] Munjoy, till he was driven off by Indian enemy. She likewise declares that she never heard in that time that any person claimed s[d] Island except s[d] Munjoy, and further declares that the s[d] Island is now commonly called Parker's Island and further saith not.

5001. MARTHA,[5] b. 1756; m. Feb. 29, 1776, at Cape Elizabeth, John Robinson; first settled at Cape Elizabeth; rem. from Cape Elizabeth to Webster in 1790. Mr. Robinson for some years tended the grist-mill of Noah Jordan, Jr., the mill standing then on the water power of Sebattis River—the same now owned by N. W. Farwell of Lewiston and others; after leaving the mill, Robinson bought a farm near the mill, lying westward, and upon this farm he had his home for many years. Children:

5002. 1. Martha,[6] b. about 1778; m. James Jordan (No. 1070).

5003. 2. John,[6] b. about 1785, at Cape Elizabeth; d. in 1845; m. Lucy Staniford of Cape Elizabeth; was a man of large stature, with head indicating the great intellectual power which he possessed, although his literary and mental culture was only of the most ordinary kind—consisting of little else than knowing how to read, and write his name in a rude style. Few persons possessed perceptive and reflective faculties of a higher order or of greater power than he, but he committed a great wrong to himself and to his fellow-men; in his early life he became a preacher, but he was deposed from the ministry for excessive use of spirituous liquors. Had 6 children.

NOAH[5] (Noah,[4] Samuel,[3] Samuel,[2] Robert[1]), second son of Noah and Sarah (Morrill) Jordan, was born Jan. 20, 1760, at Falmouth, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine; died May 25, 1815, at Webster, Me. He married, Nov. 10, 1782, Deborah, daughter of Jeremiah and Elizabeth (Cox) Jordan (line of Jeremiah). He removed from Cape Elizabeth to Webster, Me., about 1790. At that time Webster formed a part of Bowdoin, then of Thompsonborough, again of Lisbon, and since 1840 has borne its present name. He came into possession of the water-power, grist-mill and saw-mill a little while before (they were owned by Jesse Davis), also some tillage land adjoining, upon which he built a large house, and kept a tavern. He was a magistrate for the county of Lincoln, commissioned by the Governor of Massachusetts; was a major in militia force; was for some years town clerk; and once or more represented in the State Legislature. He possessed superior mental powers, with only ordinary literary culture; was reputed to have rather an imperious nature and manner. He died suddenly, of apoplexy, at his home in Webster, on the afternoon of Thursday, May 25, 1815, and before he could affix his signature to a will that he had dictated, which had been hastily written. Children:

5029. RHODA,[6] b. Nov. 12, 1783, at Cape Elizabeth; m. Thomas Henderson. Child:
5030. 1. Martha,[7] m. Charles Warren of Monmouth, Kennebec Co., who d. about 1874; a sprightly and intelligent woman; res. 1876, Monmouth. Has family.

Jeremiah,

SIXTH SON OF THE REV. ROBERT JORDAN.

JEREMIAH JORDAN AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

JEREMIAH[2] (Robert[1]), youngest son of Rev. Robert and Sarah (Winter) Jordan, was born about 1663, on the old family plantation at Spurwink, afterwards Falmouth, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine, nearly opposite Richmond's Island. What was called the "Old Plantation" was first settled by George Cleaves in 1630. He enclosed about four acres of land, erected a house and out-buildings, and occupied the same about two years, claiming 1500 acres of land. In 1632, Mr. John Winter notified Cleaves that parties for whom he (Winter) was agent owned the premises by patent, and desired he would vacate them at an early day. Mr. Cleaves, after consulting with his friends, decided to leave the premises, together with all his improvements; subsequently, however, when courts were established by Gorges, he brought an action of trespass against Winter (see pp. 27–8). The court allowed Cleaves damages, but left Winter in possession. When Robert Jordan, the administrator and heir-at-law of Winter's estate, left Richmond's Island in 1648, he settled upon the Cleaves place, and lived there during his stay at Spurwink, viz., up to 1675, when the house was burned by the Indians, and he left Spurwink with his family, making his residence at New Castle (Portsmouth), N. H., where he died in 1679.

In the will of Robert Jordan, he bequeathed to his wife Sarah the "Old Plantation" at Spurwink, containing 1000 acres, "the revision and inheritance thereof to be and remain unto my youngest son Jeremiah Jordan, his heirs and successors, as his part and portion" (see will, p. 76). Jeremiah must have been about 16 years of age at the time of his father's death. All the property willed to Sarah was taxed to her, and she was called "Sarah the mother of Jeremiah." She made New Castle her place of residence, and was living as late as 1687. The following papers may be found in the York County Records:

Blackpoint, Oct. 4, 1703.

This signifies that we have taken on board the Sloop Crowndhen Mr Ben^{e}. Gold master, a thousand and twenty nine pounds of pork which Mr Jeremiah Jordan owner weighed by y^{e} Governor's order to be delivered at y^{e} stores at Great Island.

Simon Willard, Capt.

Kittery, July 31, 1706.

Honor^{d}. Sir: In Octob^{r}. 1703 I Rece^{d} from Mr. Theodore Atkinson per the Li^{t}. Governor's Order Eleven barrels of pork, it being that which Capt. Simon Willard brought from Blackpoint. The bearer hereof has Capt. Willard's receipt for one half of it. I formerly gave word that said pork, through Capt. Willard's or Mr. Atkinson's negligence, or for want of salt was much damnified so that I could never dispose of more than one half of it, the bearer Mrs. J. a poor widow, and been in captivity ever since and needs her just due, you will please to direct her where she may have it.

I am your humble Serv^{t}.

PELA WHITTEMORE.

Jeremiah Jordan married, probably, about 1688, at New Castle, N. H., where he and his mother had made their residence, and it is not now known at what time he removed to Scarborough. It seems evident, however, that he had his residence at Scarborough soon after his marriage, that he occupied the Nonesuch Farm (containing 2000 acres—bequeathed by the Rev. Robert Jordan to his wife Sarah, the mother of Jeremiah), that his two children were born there, and that it was there he raised the provisions which he sold to the government in 1703. On the sudden breaking out of hostilities with the Indians, August 10, 1703, Jeremiah and his wife were made captives by a hostile band, and on the same day his brother Dominicus, who lived on the east side of the Spurwink River, was killed in his own house, and his family carried into captivity. The children of Jeremiah being quite young were sent, after the capture of their parents, to New Castle, and probably remained in the care of friends at that place until the release of their mother. After remaining three years a prisoner in Canada, she was allowed to return, making her residence at New Castle, which was probably her native place.

Jeremiah was kept a captive in Canada a number of years, part of the time with the Indians, afterwards with the French. He was then carried to France, where he remained some years, being finally released, and returning, first to Spurwink, then to New Castle. Owing to the exposure and hardships through which he had passed, he was not recognized by any of his friends, who all supposed he had been dead many years, and who were very slow to believe that he was Jeremiah Jordan, until he showed the scars upon his breast caused by fire or water when he was quite young, and remembered by some of the family. This established his identity, and he was from that time called "French Jeremy," to distinguish him from others of the same name. He probably made New Castle his home, perhaps living after the death of his wife with his son Jeremiah, Jr., and accompanying the latter in his removal to Falmouth in 1725. His son administered upon his estate in 1729. Children:

5181.—Jeremiah,[3] b. about 1693; m. Catharine Randell.
5182. Deborah,[3] b. about 1696; m. James Randell of New Castle, N. H.; res. New Castle.

Administration Papers to Jeremiah Jordan, Jr.

Jeremiah Jordan, Junr. of Spurwink in the township of Falmouth County of York Greeting, whereas your father, Jeremiah Jordan late of Falmouth in the County of York aforesaid Deceased, having while he lived and at the time of his decease, goods, chattels, or credits in the County of York aforesaid, lately died Intestate, whereby the power of Commiting Administration and full description of all and singular, the goods, chattels, rights or credits of the said Deceased, and also the hearing and examining and allowing the accounts of administrator doth appertain unto me. JEREMIAH[3] (Jeremiah,[2] Robert[1]), only son of Jeremiah Jordan, was born about 1693, probably on the Nonesuch Farm, at Scarborough, Cumberland County, Maine; died about 1764. He married, first, Catharine, daughter of James Randell of New Castle, N. H.; married second, Sarah ..... Very little is known of his history. His parents were taken captive by the Indians when he was about 10 years of age, and he and his sister Deborah were probably cared for by their friends at New Castle, until the return of their mother, about three years, or sometime in 1706, after which he was probably under her care till he became of age. He was living at New Castle (Portsmouth), N. H., as late as 1724, and in 1728 he was living at Falmouth, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine. It seems evident that his first wife died sometime between 1725 and 1728, and that he removed with his children, his father being perhaps also in the family, to Falmouth. In 1729, being of Falmouth, he administered upon his father's estate. He also administered upon his own estate in his lifetime, dividing his land property among his five children, and giving to each an absolute deed to take possession after his decease. Children:

JAMES[5] (James,[4] Jeremiah,[3] Jeremiah,[2] Robert[1]), eldest son of James and Phebe (Mitchell) Jordan, was born at Falmouth, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine. There are many plausible reasons for supposing that this James may have been identical with the James Jordan whose name appears on the pay-rolls of soldiers serving during the war of the Revolution, as follows: Under Capt. Abner Lowell, stationed at Falmouth, 1776; under Capt. Maybury, in expedition to Bennington, 1777; under Capt. Joshua Jordan, in Penobscot expedition, 1779.

By the town record of Buckfield, Oxford Co., Me., it appears that one James Jordan had his residence in that town. He had a wife Hannah, and a family of children, none of whom, or any of their descendants now reside in that town, nor can any information be obtained of them. It is supposed he was the son of James and Phebe Jordan. Children:

Isolated Families.

ISOLATED FAMILIES.

[THE three heads of families in this department, though doubtless descended from the Rev. Robert Jordan, cannot now be traced with certainty to any known individual of his posterity. Assuming them, however, to be the lineal descendants of Robert, and judging from the dates of birth of each that they are in the fifth generation, they are so indicated.]

BENJAMIN JORDAN AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

BENJAMIN[5] (. . . . . ,[4] . . . . . ,[3] . . . . . ,[2] Robert[1]), son of . . . . . Jordan, was born in 1752, at Falmouth, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine; died at Webster, Me., July 20, 1829, aged 77. He married, at Cape Elizabeth, April 4, 1772, Christiana Weiman (of German descent), who died at the family home at Webster, Me., Jan. 16, 1831, at an advanced age. He lived for seventeen years upon Richmond's Island, where many of his children were born. In March, 1797, with his wife and ten children, he removed from Cape Elizabeth to Lisbon, now Webster, and purchased of Joseph Spaulding 175 acres of land in the central division. Part of this property he afterwards gave to his son Valentine, and the remainder to his son Robert who still resides upon the place. In the later years of Benjamin Jordan, many are the stories he would relate of his exploits at Richmond's Island, in shooting ducks and other game, and sailing his boat to and from the main land, naming his companions who shared these pleasures with him. Children:

5765. EUNICE,[6] b. at Cape Elizabeth; m. March 2, 1793, William Jordan (No. 1066); res. Webster.
5766. ABIGAIL,[6] m. Joshua Jordan, Jr. (No. 1067); res. Webster.

EZRA JORDAN AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

EZRA[5] (. . . . . ,[4] . . . . . ,[3] . . . . . ,[2] Robert[1]), son of . . . . . Jordan, was born July 5, 1741, at Falmouth, now Cape Elizabeth, Cumberland County, Maine. It is claimed by members of this branch that Ezra was a brother of Benjamin the preceding, but there is no authentic evidence of this. He married, July 23, 1768, Phebe Sawyer, born April 10, 1752, at Cape Elizabeth. This family first settled at Cape Elizabeth, and when the great sickness (small-pox) prevailed there, they removed to Durham, and thence to Freeport, Me., where they remained. ABSTRACTS FROM COLONIAL RECORDS, &c.

Letter of Rev. Robert Jordan to Robert Trelawney, Esq., of Plymouth, Eng.

To the wors[ll] Robert Trelawny, Marchant, att his house in Plimoth, present this.

S[r]: May the occasion of my wrighting excuse the unmannerly salute of a stranger. Being employed at the request of Mr. Winter in the actions depending between you and crafty Mr. Cleaves, I have thought fitting partly for my owne vindication to give you some certaintyes therin; hoping you will look at me as a faithful agent therein but noe affirmer to an act or arbitramant of such weakness. Paule accounted himself happy, chiefly because he was to answer before Agrippa who knew the customes amongst the Jewes. We have noe such caus of rejoycing in these parts, where actions are passed according to the concejpts of unknowing Planters without the least referenc to the law, right or conscience. Sir I can assure you, Mr. Winter hast bin much molested in this behalf to the p[r]iudice of your affayrs heer. His appeals to S[r] Ferdinando Gorges was in court rejected. They say the counsellors are invested with all his power. A judgment & execution thereof was granted to Cleaves; the Provost Martial went around to levy the execution, but at first not with much eagernes, not long after he brought with him Cleaves and 26 men more, raysed by the command of Mr. Thomas Gorges and some others of the counsell, intending to surprice the Island, to levy the execution and about 30[l] pound sterling, for theyer charg and hier in this designe, but were without any violence contented to returne. It was Mr. Winter his care to avoyd the attack, whereby he was much hindered from providing such workmen for the ship as need required, but being in fine constrajned to looke out. Mr. Gorges caused his body to be arested in this behalf, and he was compelled to give a recognisant as will appear to you, p Copia, Warrant being given to other constables in other places to the same purpose, as Mr. Winter is now made to know, the execution in the Marshalls hands notwithstanding; Every where thus waylayd he did deposite so much Beere as did amount to 80[l] sterling, being not able otherways to obtain freedom to go about his lawful occasions. The next court he appeared and having no other way to releave himself, seeing an inevitable necessity of paying the money to Cleaves, whose dayly solicitations weer, that he might have the extremity of justice by virtue of theyer grant for want of better direction he was persuaded to exhibit a petition of appeale to the Prince and Chancellor, by plea of an attajnt against the Jurers in the action of Interruption in the behalf of the King, becaus the articles of the comission here (after the construction of the counsellors for the Province) will allow no appeals in personall actions, but only in cases that concern the King. this Mr. Winter did not without cause, Cleaves providing no testemony at all in that action, and Mr. Winter proving the bounds of your Pattent to bee called Casco River by 4 witnesses, and herin lay the———. The verdict being contrary to evidence the attaint is provable (as is conceaved) having annexed unto it a strong aggravation as will appear by an act expressed p Copia. Here upon Mr. Gorges (how inclined in the cause I may not judge) pretended a great wrong that Mr. Winter should doe to the honest Jurors; & that it was insufferable that men ——— theyr consciences should be so questioned. Reading an old act in Henri 8 (as I take it concerning Penalty in such cases, Not considering the mittigation in Q. Eliz.) The clamor was great, Mr. Gorges on the one side promising to salve theyr reputation; and they on the other side hasty to enter actions of the slander, without any more adoe against him, one of theyr declarations is now sent you. So that between threatening and persuading, Mr. Winter was compelled to acknowledge it as a mistake, and give in (post bidinum) a 2[d] petition as will appear p Copiam, with a bill of errors, which was all rejected as the former though strongly provable. The Counsell had agreed in private (as I was told by some of them) that Mr. Winter should have a friend to implead his cases. I was willing as a servant to God and justice, to do my endeavours (though not altogether pertinent to my calling) moved therunto by that respect I beare to yourself & when in so just a cause; but liberty could not be given. The Counsell seemed something puzzled and knew not how to carry the matter. They then devised a new way, putting all causes to arbitration through the whole Province, and made an act that 4 men should arbitrate in every difference, and in case they could not agree, then Mr. Stephen Barrhilor, Pastor of a church in the Masachusetts Bay, should be an umpire. The man (I must say) was grave, reverent and a good man, but how inclined, whether more to justice or mercy or whether carried aside by secret insinuations, I must leave to your owne judgment in your particular. Sure I am Cleaves is wel nigh able to deceave the wisest braine. Mr. Winter hereunto agreed though I beleave with much unwillingness, yet seeing which way the wind hanged, any man would have shaped such a course rather than stand to a worse hazard. For ther were many threatnings cast out against the shipps company and a warrant granted and sent forth imediatly to arrest some of the chief of them, on whom rested the burthen of your business and Mr. Gorges was pleased to declare in publick, that if they came not, they (that is the Province power) would burne the shipp. Matters they pretended in behalf of the King against them, and the grand Inquest was made up of such who were agents in the cause, and not well bent towards them, though in truth there was no just caus, for when Mr. Winter had consented to an arbitration, then was the bench pleased to revers the former warrant, and forthwith sent an order to devoyd it as will appear by the order sent to you under seale, which if it had not binn don, I am persuaded it would have proved a great damage, if not an over-throwing to the voyage. I conceave the bond Mr. Winter assigned unto, to stand to the award, I will easyly prove an act by constrajnt and frustrat upon those alligations. The arbitrators I am persuaded had defined the matters to your farr better contentment, had not the umpire pressed himself in some sort to farr upon them, Ratifying or rather acting by his singular power what was not concented unto. The act will declare itself to you or any man of judgment, that you should have Spurwink houses and land was consented to by all for we saw no reason to the contrary, but that Cleaves should have 60[l] Damage arising therefrom, did not appeare to me to be reasonable law nor consciens. Why the umpire should give it and your other land, I know not. Soft words pacifie wrath, but subtile soothings blind the wise. May the bounty of God both in Heavenly and temporall dispensations be enlarged to you and yours; Amen.

Ready to serve you in the Lord,

ROBERT JORDAN.

FROM COLLECTIONS OF THE MASSACHUSETTS HIST. SOCIETY.

Aug. 21, 1640. Richard Vines to John Winthrop.—"The goods left were attached, whereupon Mr. Jordan, a minister (that kept the house in Mr. Purchase his absence), went with the marshall to get some of the neighbors to be bound for the appearance, but none would."

Feb. 27, 1643–4. George Cleaves to John Winthrop.—"What Mr. Vines answered you I know not, but this can affirm and prove, that by his practice he doth slightly regard your advice therein (as may appear by the supplication of the inhabitants of Ligonia and other passages, the truth whereof this bearer can inform you, as also of their consultations with Mr. Jordan, a minister of Antichrist, their chief counseller) who doth not only calumniate and slander the parliament of England with vile, reproachful terms, as rebellious, fractious, traitorous persons against the King, but also belches out his blasphemies against the churches of Christ in this land, charging them with scism and faction for fasting and praying for the affliction of their brethren in England," etc.

Feb. 18, 1645–6. Petition of George Cleaves and others to Governor of Massachusetts Bay.—"The heads of this league are Mr. Henry Jocelyn, Mr. Arthur Mackworth and Francis Robinson, which Mr. Mackworth did willingly submit to Mr. Rigbyes authority formerly, and did subscribe to his constitutions, and received a commission from him to be an assistant, and acted by it till he was drawn away by the persuasion of Mr. Vines and Mr. Jordan (one unworthily called a minister of Christ). From these two men all this evil doth principally flow, for though Mr. Vines be now gone, yet he hath presumed to depute Mr. Jocelyn in his stead, although he never had any commission so to do; yet he, by the council of Mr. Jordan, hath taken upon him, as a lawful magistrate to come into Casco Bay, and hath gone from house to house, being accompanied with Francis Robinson and Arthur Mackworth, and have discouraged the people of Ligonia and drawn them off, some by fraud and some by force, from their subjection to Mr. Rigby's lawful authority."

Petition of Robert Jordan, from Boston Jail, Nov. 1654.

To y^{e} Honored Gov^{r}, Dep^{t} Gov^{r}, y^{e} rest of y^{e} Magistrates & Court of Deputies, Sheweth.

Whereas your petitioner hath in all humility, according to methods of law, duly presented his petition unto this Honored Court, wherunto you have candidly consented, your petitioner is now (contrary to such your determination act) arrested and become a prisoner by the violence of his adversary. Your petitioner therefore craveth a further declaration of your pleasure as in point of his cause and person for which favour he shall pray for your peace and prosperity. Resting your most devoted and subjugate servant and prisoner,

Robert Jordan.

From the Massachusetts Colony Records.

Oct. 23, 1657.—"Mr. Henry Jocelyn and Mr. Robert Jourdan were called by the Marshall General to make their appearance before the General Court, according to their summons, by themselves or others in their behalf, three times, but they nor none for them appeared."

May 31, 1660.—"In answer to the petition of the inhabitants of Oyster River, it is ordered that Major Atherton join with Capt. Wiggin in keeping the next County Court at Strawberry Bank and York, and that he with the rest of the Commissioners joined with him for examining and settling the respective interests and rights of Mr. Foxwell, Jourdan and Phillips, do hear, examine and determine the matter in difference between Dover and Oyster River," etc.

May 22, 1661.—"In answer to the petition of Mr. George Cleaves, the court Judgeth it meet to order Henry Jocelyn, Esq., Capt. Brien Pendleton and Capt. Richard Walden be a committee and empowered, repairing to Falmouth at such time as any two of them shall appoint, then and there to examine the ground of the several complaints exhibited against Mr. Jordan, summoning witnesses, giving oaths and what else is necessary referring to the case, and what shall be concluded on by any two of them to be reported by them to the next session of this Court in October next."

Oct. 8, 1662.—"In answer to the petition of Mr. George Cleaves, it is ordered, that the next County Court of York examine the grounds of these complaints exhibited against Mr. Jordan, and to proceed therein as they shall judge meet, according to the laws there established."

Oct. 21, 1663.—"In answer to the petition of Joseph Phippen, and on consideration that the court to which the petitioner is sued is not till July next, and that much of the petitioners goods are of a perishable nature, as corn, hay, cattle, &c., the house itself also subject to spoil and waste, the Court do therefore judge meet to order that the petitioner giving sufficient bond, to the value of eight hundred pounds, of two able and sufficient persons, well known and able to respond the judgment Mr. Robert Jordan shall obtain at the said Court against the petitioner in July, at the end of the prosecution.

* * * * * * *

"This Court granted Joseph Phippen his bill of costs against Mr. Robert Jordan, for bringing him to Boston, and amounting to twelve pounds nine shillings.

"Whereas George Cleaves, Gent., on his petition to the General Court in answer thereunto was granted a hearing at a County Court to be holden at York in July last, and that Mr. Jordan was then a prisoner at Boston, by means whereof all proceedings were waived, least the said Jordan should account himself injured, whereby also all relief hoped for by the said Cleaves was frustrated and disappointed; and that at a Court of Associates, late holden, as is alleged, the said Jordan hath further prosecuted against the said Cleaves, by virtue whereof the said Jordan hath of late, as the said Cleaves hath inferred, outed his aged wife and family; and that the said Cleaves was, by God's providence, not voluntarily but necessarily detained; and forasmuch as Mr. Jordan, by former execution, did take from the said Cleaves, his bed, bedding, kettle and pot, which is contrary to law, besides two cows which also were all he then had to support his family —it is therefore ordered by this Court, that the associates for that County of York, or any three of them, shall and hereby are impowered and required forthwith to appoint and keep a Court there, to hear, examine and determine, either without or with a jury as the parties shall agree, at Saco or Wells, all complaints of either party by way of review or otherwise, according to law."

Court Records, Alfred, Maine.

Court, July 6, 1669. "Whereas it doth appear to this Court that Mr. Robert Jordan doth refuse to conform to the laws and authority of this jurisdiction, opposing and threatening the constable in the execution of his office, as by the deposition of the said constable doth appear, it is ordered that a summons go forth from this Court requiring the s[d] Robert Jordan to appear before Major Pendleton and Mr. Francis Neale, to give answer for the same at such time and place as they shall appoint; and in case that s[d] Jordan refuse to yield obedience thereto, it is ordered that warrant be issued forth from this Court to the Marshall of the County giving him power and requiring him to bring before the said Major Pendleton and Mr. Neale the s[d] Robert Jordan, that he may answer what shall be alleged against him, and for his contempt of authority, and to proceed with him according to law as most for the peace and safety of y[e] County."

Court held at York, July 4, 1671. Richard Palmer complained of for marrying Grace Bush, contrary to law—fined.

Warrant to be sent for Mr. Robert Jordan, to require his appearance before next Court of Associates, there to render an account why he presumed to marry Richard Palmer and Grace Bush contrary to the laws of this jurisdiction.

Consented to by the people that Mr. Robert Jordan may baptize their children until another person may be duly appointed. [This means beyond Kennebec River.]

July 1, 1660. Mr. Robert Jordan testifies before Henry Jocelyn that he was then aged 49 years.—York Deeds, Vol. I., p. 100.

Deeds Recorded at Exeter, New Hampshire.

April 19, 1781. Richard Jordan of Exeter, New Hampshire, paper maker, to William Durant, land in Exeter.

Richard Jordan.
Elizabeth Jordan.

[In 1793, the above Richard and wife lived in Andover, Mass.]

June 10, 1723. Richard Jordan of New Castle, mariner, in consideration of £50, to Theodore Atkinson of New Castle, Gent., land on Great Island in New Castle; adjoining on westerly side land in possession of Theodore Atkinson; on easterly side on Fort Point commonly so called; with all the houses, etc.

May 13, 1734, mortgage discharged.

PROVINCIAL RECORDS AT EXETER, N. H.—COURT FILES.

Sept. 29, 1696. Lieut. Col. Packer upon oath declared that coming into the field when the officers and men were together with Capt. Walton, Walton made a speech to the company, and declared to them he had laid down his commission, and that Hirst was their next officer. Andrew Cranch, Richard Oliver and Robert Jordan declared they would obey no other officer. Oliver laid his hand on his sword. Col. Packer said Jordan was first to declare he would obey no other officer.

By Hon. John Usher, Esq., Lieut. Governor and Commander in Chief.

Whereas certain persons are in his majestie's fort for disobedience of their officers, and whereas the officers have advised they be brought to trial at a Court of Oyer and Terminer, I have constituted such a Court. You are to deliver to William Ardell, Esq., sheriff, or his deputies, Andrew Cranch, Richard Oliver and Robert Jordan.

Given at Arms, Oct. 6, 1696.

Oct. 3, 1696. Lieut. Governor Usher issues a commission to Joseph Smith, Esq., to be Judge of a Special Court of Oyer and Terminer, to be held at Portsmouth, Oct. 6, 1696; Robert Tufton Mason, Attorney General.

Cranch, Oliver and Jordan desire counsell.—Mr. James Menzies allowed. The Jury returned a verdict in writing. Court adjudged the same not valid. Ordered Jury to retire. Jury came back with same verdict. At the fourth return, Court ordered sheriff to shut Jury up. At last Jury brought in Jordan not guilty—the others guilty.

Jordan sentenced to be discharged on paying costs.

Dec. 18, 1695. Robert Jordan, inhabitant of Great Island, to Robert Elliot of Great Island, in consideration of £230 19s., all his land in Falmouth.—York Deeds.

[NOTE.—The strong language employed against the Rev. Robert Jordan in some of the court records should be attributed rather to the bitterness and violence of the religious dissensions of that time, than to the personal character of either of the contestants in these cases. Mr. Jordan had his share in the many litigations of the day, and the investigator will find much of interest connected with him among the voluminous court documents still extant. The Robert Jordan referred to on the preceding page is evidently the son of Rev. Robert Jordan; as stated on page 124, little is known of him after he left Falmouth in 1688.]
